Filled with this idea, he hurried back to Green. "Jack," he called. "Where'll Go Ahead be early tomorrow morning? Might get to the J-B ranch about eight o'clock, mightn't he?"

"I reckon so."

Fair drew a long breath. "That's our chance," he said. "Stella slipped away this morning with Wade's party that went to run guns and whiskey across the line. They're south of the J-B ranch now; but they ought to be back there for breakfast tomorrow morning. If you can get in touch with Stella and Go Ahead in time you may be able to fix things so that she can join him right away. It's only a chance at best; and even if you do find them both you'll probably have a devil of a time getting Stella away from Wade. You'll have to watch your chance and grab it if it comes."

"I knew you would, Jack. I'd go myself if I knew Go Ahead, and if I dared to leave the valley till Stella was safe. . . . She won't want to go without seeing me; but you tell her I say she must for another chance that's as good as this may be a long time coming."

CHAPTER IV

From daylight till mid-afternoon Wade and his followers rode steadily southward. Then they crossed the railroad at a "flag stop" which was marked only by a small shed, scarcely bigger than a sentry box, set in the midst of apparent desolation. Closer scrutiny, however, disclosed, a mile or two southward, the buildings of the J-B ranch, owned by Jim Barker, sheriff of Lobo county, who has chosen that brand for his cattle or, more accurately, for the cattle on his ranch. Whispers about the extraordinary increases and sudden decreases of the J-B cattle were plentiful in the region; but they remained whispers and very cautious ones at that. Barker was not a safe man to offend.

At this ranch Wade and his men halted to eat and rest. The guns were there, packed just as they had come, a few boxes at a time (marked "hardware") during the last week or ten days. The wagons that were to take them were ready; and so were the fresh horses that the bandits were to ride, leaving their own to rest overnight and be ready for any dash away that might be necessary. Wade and his followers had nothing to do until nightfall made it safe to ride to the border, some twenty miles to the south.

Stella had long before been "discovered," but her presence had caused no special comment. It was not the first raid by many in which she had taken part; and no one except Wade seemed to know that Fair had objected to her going on this or similar ventures.

The delay at the ranch lasted several hours, part of which Stella spent in wandering about the place, looking at the horses and chatting with the Mexican riders who cared for them, especially with Diego, the foreman. Stella did not like Mexicans. Like most "gringos" she thoroughly distrusted them; but on that particular afternoon she was restless and had to talk to somebody. Diego looked like a pirate and was quite as bad as he looked; but the same might truthfully be said about most of the bandits; and he was at least a human being and had a tongue. Stella did not realize how soon and how strenuously she and Diego were to come to an open clash.

Night came at last; and the bandits started, escorting the wagons with the rifles and moving with extra care because of the few—very few—army patrols that were strung along the border.

However, nothing went wrong. The whole plan worked out so smoothly that Stella felt rather disappointed. Unseen, the whole party crossed the river and delivered the guns to the Mexicans who were awaiting them. In return they received two wagonloads of "baled hay," each bale of which contained four dozen bottles of Mexican whiskey. And then, without ceremony they turned back, recrossed the river, and trotted off to the J-B ranch, where a hot breakfast awaited them.

The outlaws ate swiftly and ravenously and soon finished. One by one they left the table to make ready for their return to the Roost. Several times Stella started to go, but each time Wade managed to delay her by some pretext until only he and she were left. As the last man went out of the room Wade called to him to tell Diego to saddle his and Bob's horses and bring them around.

But Stella, suddenly uneasy, refused to be longer held. Up she jumped and ran out of the door and away to the stables.

As she ran in, Diego, on his knees beside her horse, straightened up, caught her eye, and flinched. Then, with quick recovery, he nodded violently. "Horse heap lame," he gasped.

"Lame!" Stella's face darkened. "He wasn't lame last night. How'd he get lame?"

"Quien sabe, senorita?" Diego stuttered and stammered in his confusion. "But paciensa, senorita, it is nothing. Soon will this so wonderful horse be well. It cannot be otherwise."

Stella had dropped on her knees and was examining the horse's foot. She could find nothing wrong, but when she tried to lead the animal out he limped badly.

Diego hesitated; and Wade, who had followed Stella, grabbed him by the throat and flung him down. "Don't you hear what you're told?" he raged. "Go get another horse, pronto!"

But Diego threw up his hands in protest. "But, senor," he said, "there is no other. My men have gone on all the others to the station or to the corral. Have patience, senor, and they will return in the hour; but of a surety they are not here now."

Stella listened with frowning brows. Though one of the least suspicious people in the world, she was not a fool; and she felt sure that there was something behind all this. But what?

As she hesitated Wade turned to her with a laugh. "I guess we're stung, all right," he said. "We've just got to wait. If the fools had told me in time I'd have made one of the men give you his horse and wait. As it is—well, I guess Fair will give me the devil, anyway."

Stella did not rise to the occasion. She did not assure Wade that she would back him up when he told her father that she had taken Charley's place and that he had not known it until hours later. Instead she looked him in the eyes.

"Have the rest of our men gone?" she asked.

Wade shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know for sure," he answered; "but I guess they have. We don't wait for each other goin' home. You know that yourself."

Stella did know it. Nevertheless—"Will Barker be here this morning?" she asked, flatly.

"Put 'Em Up," She Ordered Wade.

In spite of himself Wade flushed hotly. But he answered quickly, if evasively. "How'n thunder do I know?" he demanded. "Barker does what he pleases. I ain't his keeper."

Stella could read the falsehood in his eyes. Too late she realized that she had been trapped.

"I'll take your horse and go on," she suggested. "You can come later. I'll square you with dad before you get to the Roost."

But Wade shook his head. After all, he decided, why should he longer keep up the deception? The trap had been sprung and the victim was in the toils.

"Nothin' doin'," he replied, roughly. "You come on this trip on your own say-so. Now you've got to take the consequences."

Instantly Stella's hand dropped to her belt and her ever-ready pistol flashed up, covering both Diego and Wade.

Wade had put up his hands as ordered; but now he took them down. "Aw, what's the use foolin'," he said.

AGAIN FLOODED HILLTOP BASEMENTS

The recent rains again brought to the people of the Hilltop the crying necessity for better sewer facilities in this section. It was again the same old story that city officials have heard for years—flooded basements, which not only cause much property damage but the conditon is a great menace to the health of the people living in houses where this condition prevails.

Last year the city engineers claimed the drainage of roof water into sanitary sewers was the cause of the trouble. Since that time hundreds of downspouts have been changed sending the water into the street. This has not made a noticeable difference in the flooding of basements, and has strengthened the belief of the Hilltop public that the only possible relief will come through an adequate sewer system.

Too many people believe they should have been named opportunity and try to live up to the name by knocking. The trouble is that they always knock at the wrong door.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO WITH A PROWLER?

Last year several hundred dollars and quite a number of personal items were stolen from Hilltop and West Side homes by a night prowler. This same act is being tried again this season. Several people have reported having prowlers in the last few nights and some report thefts.

There is a question as to what should be done about the prowler. We are protected by the law and have a police department to enforce the laws. But for the most part the thief is seldom caught by the police and the prowler is allowed to have his way and continue snooping around houses.

Night time is no time for a person to be present on another person's property unannounced and without the constant pacing of a policeman before the home it is always open to such intruders. Therefore what is to prevent a little punishment for those who would take what does not belong to them? A small amount of lead and a little powder applied in the right direction would probably be a good investment.

We can't exactly agree that the five B's run the country today. We can't give under to bankers, bondholders, brokers, bootleggers or burglars.

HOW TO ARRIVE

When Socrates was once asked how to get to Olympus he replied, "By doing all your walking in that direction." Men who have accomplished anything worth while in the world have followed the advice of this ancient Greek philosopher, either consciously or unconsciously. David Livingstone in the African wilderness did all his walking in the direction of the opening up that vast continent to trade and to the gospel of Christ. He could not be lured into a byway, but kept steadily on the track which he laid down for himself.

Let a young man or a young woman determine to take the way of the upward calling and keep walking in that direction. When an invitation comes to forsake that way, a young person can afford to say, "No." There are glorious rewards at the end of the road.—Forward.

A lot of people go to sleep while they are waiting for their ship to come in and the darned thing sails out to sea again and they never know it has been there.

DEFINING THE EXPERT

At a convention of coal technicians, chemists, professors and business men at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, says the Nation's Business, the best laugh came from a speaker's definition of an expert as: 'A man who knows more and more about less and less."

This may be compared with another definition of an expert: "A man who is away from home."

We may joke about the expert, but ought not to treat his work jocosely. Often he does painstaking labor and points the way for those who do not have time to experiment.—Forward.

We wonder if the whole country will be as wet as it has been in this section the past couple of weeks if Al Smith is elected in November.

THE WRITER.

As was true in the days of Addison and Steele back in the early days of the 18th century, I have observed that a reader seldom peruses a book or magazine without having first some knowledge of the author. Or it may happen that the information comes as the result of much comment, neither of which do we expect because it may be more to your interest to keep the identity of the writer a secret. At any rate satisfy yourself with knowing that I am interested in mixing with the crowd and noticing the actions of people in various circumstances. Furthermore much of my comment may be based upon reading from the present day periodicals.

DESCRIPTION OF THE CLUB MEMBERS.

Much may pass from mouth to ear on the streets but I have found it true that better judgment is passed in an assembly where more than one man contributes to the discussion. 'Tis but another application of the adage that two heads are better than one. With this idea in mind I have sought to go beyond the adage and give the thoughts of several who go to make up the CLUB. These are men in various walks of life who contribute to my columns from time to time and whose opinions I value.

Meetings of the club are informal and impromptu. If by chance I should meet a member in the coffee shoppe or greet him while in the barber chair and our conversation should run to a topic which I believe might be of interest to the readers of this column I would consider it as business transacted by the Club. It is well now to take a glance at the men I have reference to.

SIR LITTLETON.

The first of our society is a man who has traveled far and made acquaintances with many people; a man who is singular in his behavior and possesses none of the camelion characteristics that make the judgment of so many people sell for so little in the market of public opinion today, a man who has a sense of humor and uses it to advantage in demonstrating his point, for he believes the world has too many philosophers and not enough jesters for its own good; his name, Sir Littleton, you may expect to see in print quite often.

Some of the club members have dubbed him Sir Little because they believe his name is too weighty with the ton attached. At any rate he is a man of action and appears as a good contender for the title of most eligible bachelor, for he has pecuniary richness in addition to all his fine qualities and has not yet crossed the altar with a wedding band in his vest pocket although he states that he has been tempted to take the path. The only reason he can muster for having waited is that the process of selection is beyond his good judgment because there are too many to pick from. Sir Little will give more of his views on marriage later.

See Seiller's ad on last page.

RED PULLIN.

The gentleman next in esteem and authority among us is also a bachelor, a wit and possessor of much understanding. He is interested in the legal controversies of the community and also enters into politics to some extent. I should say he enters into the discussion of politics with much attention and contributes to the conversation from his study of the political affairs of the nation and his study of the science of government. For it is a science, he says, because we are always experimenting with it and allowing everyone to have his own opinion in the matter toward testing it. Red Pullin, for that is his name, says he believes that religion should be made such a science, too, and in his contributions to the column he will give his views in further detail.

CAPTAIN SENTRY.

Another very interesting figure in the affairs of this column is one, Captain Sentry who's name and character follows somewhat like that of the gentleman named back in the days of Sir Roger de Coverly. He has engaged in several skirmishes in the army and has much to his credit in a military way as well as being a good citizen when arrayed in civilian clothes.

Captain Sentry is capable of commanding men in argument as well as in the army as you will discover. He is as quick to attack a subject that he feels needs support as he is to start bombarding the enemy. Says he, "A man's opinion is of no service when it is never expressed."

PROFESSOR TITTLE.

Perhaps you may have come in contact with Professor Tittle. His post is at the university and an invaluable source of information is he. Several years service in the institution stand to his credit and he has become a favorite among both students and members of the faculty. He has the one quality that the world so lacks in our day and that is broad mindedness. He doesn't let prejudice crowd other people's ideas overboard.

"Trade Your Smiles."

OTHER MEMBERS.

Other members who's names we do not have room to give here at this writing will enter the story from time to time with the proper introduction. We have a minister, a lawyer, a planter, a student of the university and several others.

These members of our club will make some of their thoughts known beginning with the next issue of this paper.

INDEPENDENCE

INDEPENDENCE was the cause for the tolling of the Liberty Bell back in 1776. But that independence was not accomplished by the tolling of a bell until it cracked. Instead the communities of all the colonies united and with their strength and co-operation as a body gained the desired end. That co-operation is witnessed today in the growth of this nation and the prosperity of its people.

Today that same spirit of co-operation must ever be present within the various municipalities and within the individual community. The co-operation of the community comes from the people living therein. Patriotism must be an active factor in the home and business life of the Hilltop every day of the year. The local merchants of the community have the interests of the Hilltop in mind and are lending their support toward its betterment.

JULY 4TH

The celebration of Independence Day will mean that most families will do some extra buying in preparation of the holiday. Picnics will abound and will call for good foods from the grocers and bakers. Some member of the house may desire a new suit or dress or other clothing or want their clothes dry cleaned. You may need that spare tire and your auto motor touched up before you take a trip. Many other things will have to be bought. Remember

BUTTERFLIES AND MOTHS

"Hello, Cecropia," said the Cabbage Butterfly to the big Moth. "I've got some news to tell you."

"Do tell me the news," said the big moth, whose name as the Cabbage Butterfly had said, was Cecropia.

"How do you happen to be awake at this time of day?" asked the Cabbage Butterfly. "I thought you moths liked to rest and nap in the daytime and fly about by night."

"We do," said the Cecropia, "but the day seemed a lovely one and I like this seaside place where I am. The air was warm and sunny and I thought I might spend the day in dozing and taking little snoozes rather than in actually sleeping."

"I see, I see," said the Cabbage Butterfly. "Well, at any rate I'm glad to have found you awake. I will feel sleepy when night time comes, especially after my adventures."

"Do Tell Me the News," Said the Big Moth.

"Adventures?" said Cecropia. "So you've had adventures?"

"I've been to the city," said the Cabbage Butterfly, "and this is morning, too."

"Dear me," said Cecropia, "you're like a business man. I hear them talking on the porches at night and they speak of catching a boat or a train so they can go to the city in the morning and work at their business."

"Well," said the Cabbage Butterfly, "I'm like a business man perhaps as far as going to the city this morning is concerned. But not in any other way.

"For I din't catch a boat or a train and I din't do any work and I'm back before it is night time.

"Do you see it is quite different."

"Yes, I see," said Cecropia.

"But I—went to the city, and how strange it was. I flew up and it seemed to me that the sky was hidden. I wondered for a time if they had a sky in the city!

"There were such high buildings. Dear me, Cecropia, they were high!

"They were much higher than trees and as for bushes—well, bushes would get lost in the city, completely lost, Cecropia."

"Dear me," said Cecropia, "how very strange."

"Very strange indeed," said the Cabbage Butterfly. "You are right. It is very strange in the city.

"But I found at last there was a sky in the city. Yes, it was over the city just as it is over the country.

"It was quite exciting and interesting, but no sort of a place for a butterfly to live in.

"I heard on my way home that there were nice parks were butterflies would find bushes, but I didn't happen to see any.

"And then, too, I wouldn't leave the country for anything. Some might, but not I.

"Still it was fun to see so many different sights and to have adventured into the big city with its buildings and its people.

"Dear me, Cecropia, there are lots of people in the city."

"As many as a hundred or so?" asked Cecropia.

"But I believe there are more than a hundred people in the city."

"I fancy you must be right," said Cecropia.

"Well," said the Cabage Butterfly, "I must rest now for I'm beginning to feel quite tired."

"I should think you would feel tired," said Cecropia, "but I'm glad you went, for it has been interesting to hear of such a visit."

"Yes, it's all right to visit the city, but I like the country for my home," ended the Cabage Butterfly.

Though the Egyptian cannot exclude from his homes the snakes and scorpions which menace his life in summer, he has devised a method of outwitting these pests. "GAY NINETIES" SHOW THE WAY TO MODERNISTS

Excavation Discloses Buggy Company Used Oakland's "New Model Medal."

The ghosts of the "gay nineties" probably are enjoying a laugh at the ultra-moderns.

The "Modernists," as represented by the Oakland Motor Car company, thought they had something new and smart in the way of an automobile advertising novelty when they marked the introduction of the Pontiac Six by striking a medal. It bore a likeness of Pontiac, famous Ottawa chieftain, and was inscribed "Pontiac, Chief of the Sixes."

But just a few days ago a laborer excavating near the Oakland Six plant unearthed a medal of almost identical size and bearing another conception of Chief Pontiac's features. On its obverse side was the inscription "Pontiac Buggy Co., Pontiac, Mich., Western Amesbury Line."

Investigation revealed the medal was struck in 1900 to celebrate the introduction of the "Western Amesbury" line of buggies which the reverse side of the medal asserts, "are worth 100 cents on the dollar 'IS gold."

Thus the Pontiac Buggy company which later evolved into the Oakland Motor Car company, appears to have beaten Oakland to the idea by a margin of about 32 years.

A TOAST TO THE FLAG
By JOHN JAY DALY

Here's to the Red of it—
There's not a thread of it.
No, nor a shred of it
In all the spread of it
From foot to head.
But heroes bled for it.
Faced steel and lead for it.
Precious blood shed for it.
Bathing it Red.

Here's to the White of it—
Thrilled by the sight of it.
Who knows the right of it.
But feels the might of it
Through day and night?
Womanhood's care of it
Made manhood dare for it.
Purity's prayer for it
Keeps it so White.

Here's to the Blue of it—
Beauteous view of it,
Heavenly hue of it.
Star-spangled dew of it.
Constant and true.
States stand supreme for it.
Diadems gleam for it.
Liberty's beam for it
Brightens the Blue.

Here's to the whole of it—
Stars, stripes and pole of it.
On to the goal of it
Carry it through.

HILLTOP BOYS GO TO INDIAN CAMP FRIDAY

Glenwood Warriors of Wyandotte Tribe to Leave Park at 8:30 a. m.

About 30 or 40 "warriors" of the Wyandotte tribe at Glenwood park will travel to the Indian village on Friday morning for a two-day stay in camp They will leave Glenwood park at 8:30

Washington park tribe is the only one that has been to camp and they report a most successful trip.

W. C. Dyer of Glenwood announces that the swimming at the camp will not be in the deep part of the Scioto river. Instead it will be in a ravine near the camp and the water will not be above the breast of the average boy Strict care will be taken of all children.

Sewing classes at Glenwood will be in charge of Mrs. McKinley. Plain sewing will be taught on Monday and Wednesday at one o'clock. Election of officers will be held at the next meeting. Girls from 9 to 15 will be eligible.

Miss Moler is coaching a boys tumbling team and will welcome new recruits. Splashing hour at Glenwood will be every day from 2 to 3. Story telling will come at 2:30 every day. Carving and nature study will be among the next week's activities. Parents are invited to the park for deck tennis and volley ball games.

New Golf Course Opens Near Rome

Beacon Light Grounds Has Nine Holes and Large Practice Green.

Beacon Light golf course will be opened to the public sometime this week. The course is located about one-fourth mile south from Rome. It is six miles from the State House.

The course is owned and operated by Fred W. and Dr. Carl Postle. It is on the old Postle farm.

Having nine holes and a 5500 square foot practice green, the course promises to be one of the most popular in this section, however, it is considered to be one of the most competitive courses ever built. It is a standard 3165-foot course. The plot contains 68 acres of land. Many of the hazards are natural. All the fairways are built to stop the slices and all balls will be played in bounds.

The practice green is near the club house so as to provide practice in putting before the person drives off for hole number one. It will be made into a clock course and will provide 12 holes for putting practice at various distances.

The house, at the entrance of the course, will have locker rooms for men and women and toilets and showers.

The course will be open to everyone at present. Restrictions may be placed later. It will probably be a membership course.

The course was started last October The layout and construction is in charge of Smith and McCallip of London, O. They have also built courses at London, Lima and Wilmington. The course is known as Beacon Light course because of the airplane beacon light located nearby.

LANDING OF AIR MAIL PLANES IS DELAYED

Air mail planes will not start landing at the Columbus Airport on the Hilltop for a short time yet according to the United States department of commerce. The delay is thought to be due to the installation of the beacon lights on the air mail route. The operation of the Louisville-Cleveland route was scheduled to start on March 15 and was again scheduled for July 1.

The rainy weather during the past two months has delayed the installation of the beacon lights. The route will not be completely finished until about the first of August. The work has been started at Cleveland and will progress southward. It is expected that the beacons will be erected in the vicinity of Columbus within three weeks.

Since the Hilltop airport has been designated as the landing field for the air mail it is understood that a beacon will be installed here.

The cinder runways at the new field are being completed and the roof is being placed on the new hangar. Other improvements will be started within the next few days according to Ross L. Harris, president of the Ohio Airways Transit Co.

Old Chest of Letters and Newspapers Recall Tragedies of Civil War Days

Civil war days and the tears and tragedies that went with them were recalled with the passing of one of the first settlers of the Hilltop.

The administering of the estate of the late William M. Link, of 59 N. Park Ave., resident of the Hilltop for the past 32 years, fell to the oldest son in a family of 10 children. And in the attic of the old home was a dust covered chest that had been in the possession of the family from Civil war days.

The chest with its contents had many years ago afforded much enjoyment for this group of ten children and since back in his childhood days he had played the role of postmaster with the chest as the office and the old letters and papers as the mail, William C. Link, 158 N. Harris Ave., oldest son of the family, now has the prized old relic.

This old chest was at the time of the Civil war the post office of the Camp Chase encampment. With the close of the war the chest became the property of this family where they lived on a farm near the storage dam. In it were letters, pamphlets, papers, Bibles and books.

The old letters telling of the weariness of the war and the newspapers telling the story of the latest happenings of the war were passed from their places in the shelves of the old case to the hands of these children many years later as they believed themselves to be the real owners of the mail. The thrill of the soldier reaching for his mail was passed to the Link children.

Found in this old chest are copies of very old papers. "The Daily Ohio Statesman and Democrat," a Columbus paper, a copy of the "Cincinnati Daily Gazette," dated Oct. 30, 1863, and also a copy of the "New York Tribune" of Oct. 25, 1863, and a copy of an Ohio State Journal of the same time are among the contents.

An account of the war is given in the columns of the paper. Several pamphlets concerning slavery and clippings in regard to the movements of the armies are stowed away in the drawers. Several old German Bibles are in the drawers too. It also contains several skeins of flax used for cleaning guns.

The chest is 40 inches high, 33 inches wide and 19 inches deep. On the back is the inscription, "2nd Q. M. Fort Leavenworth, 2 Ohio Volunteers, Co C."

The relic will be transferred to the Ohio State Historical and Archeological society museum on the Ohio State university campus soon and its history will be written by H. C. Shetrone, curator.

The Amity Embroidery club was entertained at the home of Mrs. George Muller, 227 N. Harris Ave., Thursday, June 28. The following members were present: Mrs. C. E. Hammond, Mrs. William Wilson, Mrs. Winfield Shields, Mrs. O. C. Brant, Mrs. Homer Richter, Mrs. John Park, Mrs. Bernard Freas and the hostess. Prizes were awarded Mrs. Brant, Mrs. Hammond and Mrs. Freas. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Hammond, 92 Highland Ave., July 12.

Have You Had Your Arithmetic Today? Try This One on Your Adding Machine

Have you ever stopped to think of how large some of the seemingly small things we run up against every day are? Well here's one we believe you may have overlooked.

How much paper is given away over a period of a year to people of the Hilltop in the printed pages of the Hilltop Record? Here are a few figures that may help one to draw conclusions.

The cost of the paper on which the Record is printed went above $2000 for last year, or enough to buy 40,000 hot dogs or ice cream cones. In newspaper language this is over 19 reams per week for the 6150 papers that are distributed to every home on the Hilltop.

When the papers are folded and ready for delivery the stack for the week is about 12½ feet high. Over a period of a year this makes a pile of papers 650 feet high or in plainer language towers above the A. I. U. building nearly 100 feet.

This means that 665 pounds of paper are given away each week or 34,580 pounds during the year or if the paper could be turned into coal by a magician's wand there would be enough to heat 175 average homes during a long winter.

Seven men distribute the Record each week and it takes about 60 hours to complete the job. During the year this is over 3120 hours or enough to keep one man busy day and night without stopping for sleep or food for 130 days of 24 hours each.

The length of each paper when spread out to find the best bargains in the ads is three feet. These papers laid end to end would reach about 161 miles out from Columbus or about 10 miles beyond Cleveland.

If the former practice of papering the house with newspapers should suddenly come back into style it would mean that the paper used by the Record each week would paper about 22 average homes of five rooms each or 1144 homes during the year.

For the pleasure of the readers of this paper the copy sent back to the composing department consists of approximately 2000 lines each week. Nearly all copy sent into the office is re-written which amounts to 13,000 words pounded out on the typewriter each week.

About 16 "pigs" (not the kind used in making sausage) are used in the composition of each week's paper.

Each pig weighs 25 pounds and is two feet long. Four hundred pounds of lead goes through the linotype machine each week in order to give the people of the Hilltop a paper.

About 1200 hours of linotype work are required to put out the paper during the year. For the linotype operator who sits at this job it means that the seats of about four pairs of pants per year are demolished. For the man who stands before the press feeding the papers it means he must shift his weight from one foot to the other about 800 times during the 18 hours each week or about 38,000 times during the year.

So taking it all in all this little sheet that greets every Hilltop family every Thursday morning during the year isn't such a small task after all.

Smart Lace Neckwear Registers Quaint Fichus and Cape Collars

Lace is generously lending its flattering presence to the mode. The vacation wardrobe which does not include a good collection of lovely lace neckwear will be sadly lacking in the way of fashionable accessories.

There are hosts of lovely things from which to choose. Quaint fichus, capelet collars, vestees, yokes, jabots, elaborate cuffs, that express intriguing novelty, are luring women to spend and spend and spend. But it is money well invested, for there is magic in a touch of lace. A bit of lace at throat and wrists, and even the least pretentious gown is individualized.

Among the prettiest items are deep cape collars of fine mesh net with appliques of lace placed here and there. These are designed for the sheer summer frock. Now that the sleeveless vogue is stressed, these net and lace capelets come in for considerable attention, for they fall very gracefully over the arm, and are really charming in effect.

Newest designs emphasize fichu effects. The one in the picture is a very popular version of the modish lace fichu. These come in ecru, butter color and white, the little pearl buckle clasping its graceful streamers also varying its color.

Flat lace jabots are that fashionable they dangle from collars and yokes and are even incorporated into the designing of cuffs.

Lace vests, collarless or with collar worn inside or over the dress are adding much of charm to the summery georgette frocks. Not only do these elaborate lace sets enhance the darker navies and blacks, but they impart a beguiling touch to the daintiest, dressiest costumes of flowery prints.

Women are buying lace sets and incorporating them into the very making of the dress. For instance, a pointed plastron is stitched into a velvet or satin or crepe dress, forming a deep yoke. This touch of lace makes lovely and youthful the all-black frock, especially. Sometimes, if the gown be colorful, the lace is dyed to match or to harmonize.

So prominent is lace in the mode, that even wraps of lace are gracing the style picture. These are often elaborated with hand-painting and fine beadwork and they cost a "pretty penn." JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

AS EXEMPLIFIED by nature. The mighty cataract is as a baby in strength when compared to the mighty force of co-operative endeavor when applied to community building.

The limit of its power has never been measured by man, for the limit has never been reached.

All of our greatest communities are but the product of co-operation---the working toward a common end by a common people.

How great this community may grow, how prosperous and complete it may become, depends upon all of us---our willingness and our desire to work together.

AN EXPANSION PROGRAM

Last week the announcement of the new home to be occupied by the Record and the new press that has been ordered was given to the readers of the Record.

This expansion program comes as a result of eleven years of growth with the Hilltop. The paper was established eleven years ago and is at present the oldest community paper in the city and has the largest circulation of the Columbus suburban weeklies. During these eleven years the paper has grown from a small sized sheet to a standard size newspaper carrying all the news of the community and supporting the issues that are for the betterment of the Hilltop.

By the last of August the new plant will be turning out an even better paper for Hilltop people. It is an expression of the faith we have in this community. As the Hilltop grows, so must the Record.

MILLION DOLLARS FOR HILLTOP

Public and private funds to the amount of $1,000,000 are to be spent on the Hilltop during the year 1928. This amount of money will provide needed improvements for the Hilltop and attract more people to this section. It is just another part of the program for a greater Hilltop.

The future looks bright when one considers the following projects that are either under construction or will soon be. Grade crossing elimination, Big Four at West Broad street, $300,000. Paving extension to Rome by state, $300,000; Hilltop Airport, $100,000; Roxanna Petroleum Co. headquarters, $250,000; Beacon Light golf course, $50,000.

The opening of the new golf course near Rome puts this section on an equal footing with other communities as far as recreational activity is concerned. The new Hilltop branch bank has also added much to the value of the community. Many other new buildings only go to show the confidence placed in the Hilltop as a well established community.

ELBERT HUBBARD'S "CREDO"

Elbert Hubbard's business "Credo" is now old stuff, but when it first appeared it rang a new and welcome note to the ears of American business men. It continues to be practical.

"I believe in myself.
"I believe in the goods I sell.
"I believe in the firm for whom I work.
"I believe in my colleagues and helpers.
"I believe in American Business Methods.
"I believe that Truth is an asset.
"I believe in good cheer and in good health, and I recognize the fact that the first requisite in success is not to achieve the dollar, but to confer a benefit, and that the reward will come automatically and usually as a matter of course.
"I believe in sunshine, fresh air, spinach, applesauce, laughter, buttermilk, babies, bombzine and chiffon, always remembering that the greatest word in the English language is 'Sufficiency.'
"I believe that when I make a sale I make a friend.
"And I believe that when I part with a man I must do it in such a way that when he sees me again he will be glad—and so will I.
"I believe in the hands that work, in the brains that think, and in the hearts that love.
"Amen and Amen."

HOMESICK

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I thought that homesick meant to be
Away from home, across the sea,
Or 'way off on a railroad train
To Manitoba or to Maine.
I thought that homesick was to leave
The place you live, and grieve and grieve,
I thought you really had to roam,
That homesick meant away from home

But here I am, in my own bed,
My own chintz curtains overhead,
My own bright carpet on the floor,
My own red rocker by the door,
Outside I see the same green grass,
Outside I see the neighbors pass,
And yet I'm just the lonesomest
That anybody ever guessed.

You see, Aunt Molly's taken worse,
And so they left me with a nurse,
And kissed me twice, and said be good,
Hurried as fast as people could
When some one brought a telegram,
And they're away, and here I am,
And her hat's gone, and so is his,
And now I know what homesick is.

For homesick isn't being far
Across the sea, like some folks are:
It isn't when you're East or West
You really get the homesickest,
It's when you're home, but home like this.
And—well, when lots of things you miss:
It's when you're home, like me today,
And Mother and Father miles away.

PIGS AND POETRY

"Ah, yes," said Porky Pig, "the beautiful springtime will be along before anyone knows it, grunt, grunt."

"Squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham, "you speak as though it were going to come a-walking on two legs or four."

"Grunt, grunt," said Porky Pig, "that is because you don't understand me as you should."

"Perhaps not as you'd like me to understand you," said Miss Ham.

"Well, the fact remains, say what you will, that the beautiful springtime will be along before anyone knows it, grunt, grunt."

"You said all that before," said Miss Ham.

"Things can be said more than once," said Porky Pig," and no harm is done to anyone.

"It is not doing anyone the slightest harm because I said that the beautiful springtime would be along before anyone knew it, grunt, grunt, more than once."

"I Cannot Help Reciting My Poem About It."

"Yes, and now you're saying it again," said Miss Ham.

"But," she continued after a moment, "why are you so interested? Are you growing sentimental because it is springtime? Do you feel as though you were going to carry pigweed to some charming young Miss Pig and say to her:

"'Dear Miss Pig, let me provide for you forever. Nothing would give me greater joy.'"

"Oh, no, no, no," grunted Porky Pig. "I'd never say anything like that. I'm an old pig, set in my ways, and I'm not going to change.

"What is more, I could never say to any pig, young and beautiful though she might be, that nothing would give me greater joy than to provide for her forever.

"I couldn't say that for it wouldn't be the truth, and I do want to tell the truth.

"I'm a truthful pig, I am, grunt, grunt."

"Then why are you so interested in the fact that before long the spring will be here?" asked Miss Ham.

"Are you looking forward to seeing the buds burst into bloom, as they talk about?"

"Who talks about them bursting into bloom?" asked Porky. "The buds themselves don't, do they?"

"No, people," said Miss Ham. "People talk that way. I've heard them when the pen has been without food and there has been nothing else to do.

"And they've talked of the lovely springtime and of its beauty and of the flowers appearing and the blossoms and the green grass and all such things.

"They have seemed quite happy about it.

"I wasn't thinking of any of those things, grunt, grunt," said Porky Pig.

"I was thinking of other things. My thoughts were of mud, of beautiful, beautiful mud. Even though a pig is not by nature poetical I cannot help reciting my poem about it.

"Of course I wouldn't have composed it had it not been that the winter shed gets tiresome around this time and there wasn't much to do or to eat and I thought of happy times ahead."

"I suppose I cannot help but listen," Miss Ham said to herself, "unless I should be out-and-out rude and go off, and there isn't anywhere much to go in the winter shed. That's the way with poets.

"They always have one at a disadvantage. They corner one and now I must hear the poem."

Porky Pig commenced:

In the spring, the spring,
I sing, yes, I sing,
Or rather I squeal
Of the joy that I feel.
For there's glorious mud,
Ah, glorious mud!
In which to dig,
I dance a jig
At the thought of it;
The mud with me makes a great hit.

"I don't believe," said Miss Ham, "that it is very poetical to say 'makes a great hit,' but then of course I'm not up on the very latest kinds of poetry and there's no telling what poets may do—particulary pig poets!"

But Porky paid no attention. He was satisfied with his poem and satisfied that he had had some one to listen to it!

What Pavements Should Be— and why:

Over this a thin layer of sand—a cushion. On top, paving brick—vitrified into the toughest wearing-surface man makes—and bound with asphalt between bricks.

So laid, paving brick—tough, dense, water-tight—is a surface water cannot penetrate. Paving not impervious to water—which absorbs or admits it through cracks—is surely damaged when the water, freezing, expands.

And a brick surface has resilience to withstand heavy-load shocks—or to contract and expand with temperature changes (as all pavement must) without cracking up.

No chemical changes take place in brick—either in laying, or after laid; no softening under heat; no loss of "life" with age. And it wears and wears—frequently 30 or more years.

Futhermore, brick properly laid, smoothly level, stays that way; easy riding, safe, and good to look at. This combination means not only the highest value pavement money can buy—but also, in the end, the cheapest!

"We've got you; and it's about time you knew it. You ain't as smart as I thought you was, or you'd 'a' caught on sooner. Sure Barker's comin'; an' he's bringing in the padre with him to make you Mrs. Jim Barker. As for that gun of your, the cartridges in it ain't loaded. One of the boys changed 'em while you was eatin' breakfast. Just hand it over, pronto."

Stella paled; but she did not lower her pistol. Wade might be speaking the truth about the cartridges and he might not. Most certainly she did not intend to take his word for it. She had plenty of cartridges in her belt, but of course she could not make instant use of them. Nevertheless—

"I'm going to find out first if you're lying," she remarked cooly. "If you are you'd better speak up quick; for if you don't your going to die. One! Two! Three!" With the "three" she pressed the trigger.

The lock clicked. No explosion followed. Wade had told the truth as to that one cartridge, at any rate. Swiftly the girl snapped the revolver again and again.

Still no—report sounded; and the grin on Wade's face told her as clearly as the gun itself that he had spoken the truth.

Coolly she lowered it. "You did tell the truth once," she admitted. "By some mistake, I reckon. Here's the gun. Take it." She tossed the weapon at Wade's feet.

Then, as he stooped to pick it up, she darted past him and hurried to the house.

Wade made no attempt to stop her. He guessed that she hoped to find another pistol; but he knew that none was there to be found. So he followed her slowly, chuckling to himself, and giving her ample time to search the house. It was very simple and very simply furnished; and it would 'ot take long to search.

It did not. Stella soon found this out. Then, for she was a sensible girl, she went into the big living room and sat down to consider what to do.

Here Wade found her. "Look here, kiddo," he said, perching on the table close to her chair. "I ain't got a thing against you; just the contrary. But Barker wants you; an' he's the real head of the gang. That kind of yours was a mighty good man in his time; but he's played out; he's lost his pep. An' what Barker says goes."

Stella's lips curved. "Does it?" she asked, scornfully. "Maybe you'll find you're banking on a dead card. Then you'll be sorry for this misguided bluff. Anyway, we'll see!"

"Sure we will. That's what I'm keepin' you here for. But the quicker you get it into that head of yours that Barker's goin' to have his way the better it'll be for you. That is, he'll get his way unless I help you."

"Oh, that's it, is it? I might have guessed it. Well, what's your price?"

"You!"

"Me?" Stella sat up in good earnest.

Wade squirmed at the amazement in her voice. "Why not?" he demanded hotly. "You ain't never been very much stuck on yourself as far's I can see, an' I'm as good as the next an' —even if his name is Jim Barker."

Stella was really a woman, though she had always posed as a boy; and in the emergency she flew to the traditional weapons of her sex. "Oh, shucks, Bill," she scoffed. "I haven't got anything against you personally —except this dirty trick you've just played on me, but I don't want to marry at all. I don't want to be a woman. I'm going to play man all my life."

"You can't. You won't be let."

"Why won't I? Nobody ever hinted anything different till only the other day. What's that matter with you and Barker and all, beginning to bother me all of a sudden?"

Wade hesitated. Then he laughed. "I could tell you that you're gettin' mighty good lookin', kiddo," he said. "An' it wouldn't be no lie, either. But that ain't why Barker wants to marry you."

"My money?" The day had been one of surprises, but this was the chief of them all. Stella gasped.

"Didn't know you had any, eh? Well, you have. Your grandad back East left a fortune. Didn't even know you had a grandad, did you? Well, you have; an' the lawyers are huntin' for you to hand it to you on a silver platter. Barker got wind of it through an ad in the paper an' got somebody to investigate for him. I don't know just what he found out, but it was enough to make him want to marry you. An' if it satisfies him it'll satisfy me. See?"

Stella saw. She saw a good deal that Wade did not see. The information about the money threw her departure for the East into new perspective and illumined it with a rosy glamor. Personally she had never had much money or much use for what she did have; but her reading and the talk of he outlaws had given her a very good idea of the value that most people set upon it. At the very least it would take her to her own people, not as a poor relation but as a wealthy one. It would make a difference, she told herself eagerly, even if her kin were as friendly as Fair had maintained. If she could get to them—

If she could get to them! But could she get to them? There was Barker—and Wade—to be considered.

Wade was talking—in fact, he had not stopped; and with a wrench she forced herself to listen.

"Barker doesn't give a hoot for you," he was saying. "Fact is, he hates you. You get on his nerves somehow, I guess you know that yourself. And he's too old for you. Now, I'm different. I'm young, an' good-lookin', if I do say it myself, an' I'm fond of you; honest I am. If you'll marry me, we can go East and get the money an' live in style, an' leave your dad to run the Roost. Once I'm his son-in-law an' gone, he won't have a bit of trouble."

Stella nodded absently. Very probably this was true. But—

"And Barker?" she questioned.

"Barker? Don't you worry about him. When he gets here with the padre I'll just bump him off. And then the padre can marry us. See?

Stella's brows contracted. She had seen more than one man killed in action, and she had grown more or less callous to blood letting. But she had never seen one assassinated. More than anything else, Wade's calm explanation made her realize that Fair's denunciations of the members of the gang of thieves and murderers were justified.

"You mean you'd shoot Barker down without giving him a chance?" she demanded.

"Sure I would. What you chewin' the rag about? You'd shoot him yourself to get away from him just as you tried to shoot me ten minutes ago, wouldn't you? Well, I'll take the job off your hands."

Stella nodded. "Yes, I would shoot him if I had to," she admitted, slowly.

"But that's different."

"Humph! What's the difference?"

Stella hesitated. That there was a difference, she knew; but she found it hard to state it.

"If you can't see it for yourself," she said at last, "I guess there's no use my trying to explain. No, I won't marry you, Bill. And I won't marry Barker, either. But if you'll give me back my gun I'll fight my way past him; and if he tries to stop me I'll shoot him. Give me my gun, please, Bill!" She held out her hand imploringly.

"Yes I will—not!" Wade's face darkened and the veins in his forehead stood blackly out. His real nature, concealed—except for his plan in regrad to Barker—for a moment beneath a mask of good nature, glared bleakly out. "You'll marry me before you leave this house," he rasped. "I've given you a fair chance an' you've turned me down. Now I'm going to fix things so you'll have to marry me. And when Barker gets here I'm going to fix him for good and all. Get me?"

Head projecting, eyes glaring, lips curling back from his teeth, he advanced upon the girl.

CHAPTER V

Go Ahead Morton rode out of Muskin toward Loboville on the morning after Jack Green reached Robber's Roost. Gayly he whistled as he rode. He was young; he loved the outdoors; he loved to feel the smooth stride of his horse between his thighs; and he was riding to the rescue of his lady fair (of course she was his lady; of course she was fair; so much at least must be granted to the situation). Villains—real robbers and murderers—were waiting for him; what more could youth want? He was twenty-seven; but he felt twenty-one—and, traditionally, a man is as young as he feels.

"I reckon that must be the J-B ranch," he muttered. "I'm just about due to reach it. Guess I'll stop to ask for work and give Barker the once over if he's at home. I'd kind of like to see the fellow who's got nerve enough to think of marrying into the Mortons of Virginia—dog-gone him." He spurred his horse to greater speed.

The buildings, as he approached them, seemed to be deserted or very nearly so; though far away to the northwest a trail of dust rising from the plain indicated that an indefinite number of riders had probably left its vicinity not so very long before. At the ranch itself, a single horse, saddled and bridled, whinneyed to his own from the corral inside which it was hitched; but neither its rider nor any other human beings were visible. And no smoke, with its connotation of grub, rose from the chimney.

Disgustedly Go Ahead regarded the place. "Too late for breakfast, I reckon," he remarked. "This sure is one hot old welcome. Still, if I'd notified Barker that I was coming, I might have got a better one than I wanted. . . . Guess Barker's not here. . . . Well, it don't matter. I'll meet old J. B. soon enough without hunting for him. Still, maybe I—"

Startling sudden as the explosion of a cannon cracker a cry cut the stillness. And another and yet another followed.

Go Ahead did not wait for the second one. Obviously the cry came from young and vigorous lungs, those either of a woman or a young boy. Their users showed that their utterer was in trouble and needed help. By every rule of his being and of his name Go Ahead could not fail to answer. And he did not fail. He ran true to form. One jump took him from his horse to the ground; a second to the deep embrasured window through which the cry had come; and a third took him through it. His feet struck the floor while the third call for help was yet in the air.

Not that his third bound was his last. Just in front of him he saw a young slender boy (to all appearances) struggling desperately in the clutches of a short but powerful man; and the sight was quite enough to offset the gravitaton that strove to hold him in place. So he took a fourth leap.

But for once the bandit lieutenant was too late. Before he could touch his gun he felt himself caught up, whirled in the air, and then sent sailing clear over the newcomer's head to crash to the floor with a jolt that loosened his back teeth. Still game, he reached again for his pistol; only to feel himself roughly rapped across he knuckles and to hear a voice say "Naughty, naughty!" in his ears as it owner swiftly took possession of his weapons.

When, finally, dazed from the shock, he sat up, Go Ahead was halfway across the room talking with Stella and apparently ignoring his existence.

"Hello, youngster," Go Ahead was remarking. "Heard you call and dropped in. What seems to be the trouble?"

Stella was choking with fury; but she managed to find breath to reply "Nothing," she gasped; "nothing that I can't attend to myself, if you'll just give me my gun." She stretched out her hand for the revolver that Wade had obtained from her in the stable and which Go Ahead had just reclaimed from Wade.

Consider the following items:

SCREEN DOORS
Warm weather means that the home will be filled with pesky flies unless the proper steps are taken to keep them out. We have a screen door for every entrance to your home. The prices are reasonable.

WIRE CLOTH
If your screen doors or windows need repairing it will be well to have this work done at once. We have all grades and widths of wire screening.

LAWN HOOKS

LAWN HOSE
Warm weather means that the lawn and garden should be watered often. We have a fresh stock of hose in all sizes and satisfactory prices.

LAWN MOWERS
A well kept lawn needs much attention and a good lawn mower is necessary. Come in and look over our stock. We have many sizes and prices.

Psychological tests made at Columbia university have disproved the common belief that children learn faster than grown-ups. The tests were made with groups of adults averaging forty-two and twenty-two years of age. The older group learned about five sixths as fast as the younger. The results in evening classes and secretarial schools support the conclusion that the ability to learn rises until the individual is about twenty.

There is a section of the South Pacific Ocean that is a "sea desert." There is no life in this tract of water, which was charted for the Smithsonian Institution by Dr. Austin H. Clark and others. The bottom is red clay, and some bones of whales and sharks strewn over it show that these creatures were lost and died there. It is a more barren place than any on dry land.

There is a strawberry tree which is quite distinct from the strawberry plant. It grows in England in parks and gardens, but is frequently found in Ireland growing wild. The tree flowers about the last of September or the beginning of October, and with the flowers are found the fruit of the previous year. The fruit, from which the tree gets its name, is a large orange-red berry which resembles the strawberry.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT
By F. A. WALKER

FIGHTING—RETREATING

A good many battles have been lost because the commanding general in learning how to fight, neglected to learn how to retreat.

In the battle of life it is quite as necessary to know how to extricate yourself from a difficulty as it is to know the principles of getting ahead.

The man who continues to attempt what has proved impossible of accomplishment may have admirable courage but very poor judgment.

The one thing that a good general does when he is retreating is to KEEP FIGHTING.

If you keep fighting hard enough the retreat itself may be the means of eventual victory.

A young man who has chosen the wrong occupation, who has undertaken a job for which he is not fitted, will gain in the end if he retrents and gets into a new and better position.

Most of us are best fitted for one thing.

If we try to be more than that or other than that we sacrifice results, and results are the only things that count.

There are very few Michaelangelos who can be equal successes as sculptors and painters and architects.

It is only once in ages that there is a man like Leonardo Da Vinci, who was perhaps the wisest man that ever lived. He attained eminence as an artist whose masterpieces "The Last Supper" and "Mona Lisa," have been reproduced more than any other two pictures ever painted.

He was a great engineer, a wonderful inventor, a musician of merit, a botanist, a chemist, an astronomer, a geologist, an explorer and geographer and on all of these subjects he was a voluminous and entertaining writer.

He was one general in a million—he never had occasion to retreat.

Conduct your retreat in an orderly manner.

Cyrus the Great, who won many victories to have his head cut off by the woman, Queen Tomyris, to whom he lost the last battle he fought, said of retreating: "When an army must retreat, let the retreat be managed in the safest manner and not in the quickest."

Don't be impetuous and throwing down your tools, or your books or whatever you work with, walk out with a "to h—l with that job."

Conduct your retreat in a safe, sane way, fighting as you go, fighting to find the right thing and the right place where you will be worth most to yourself and therefore most to everybody else.

The one thing is to be sure you are doing something. Either go ahead or retreat.

Don't try to be a stand-still soldier.

There is often quoted a truism that a rolling stone gathers no moss. But moss is not a very valuable asset and nobody need count himself a great failure if he dies without ever having possessed any.

A well-polished diamond is the most valuable of the mineral family, and the value comes to that only after a good deal of rough contact with things harder than itself which shape and brighten it.

Go ahead all the time if you can. But if you cannot go any further ahead on the line you have chosen dont be afraid to "back up and try another road to success.

AIRPLANE GOLF GAME PLAYED AT AIRPORT

Two Planes and Pros Play Nine Hole Game at Hilltop Field.

Airplane golf was played for the first time in Columbus at the new Columbus airport on the Hilltop on July 4.

Two airplanes dropped golf balls from about 500 feet up, aiming to land them on three temporary greens which had been provided. Joe Thomas, pro at Brookside Country club, and Herb Vance, pro at the Dublin Road course holed them out from where they fell. The three hole course was played three times making the nine holes.

The match was won by Joe Thomas paired up with Pilot Winningham who had a lead of five up and three to go over Vance and Pilot Schrum.

Winningham deserves much of the credit for the game because he was fairly accurate in dropping the balls. One time he dropped one within twenty feet of the pole.

A crowd estimated at 2500 watched the game and followed it until the finish. At times the crowd would surge in close to the green but no one was hit by the balls coming from the air.

"The Farm Situation in the United States" was the topic of Charles V. Truax, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, when he spoke before the meeting of the Eleventh Ward Women's Democratic club at the home of Mrs. Richard C. Frank, 38 S. Burgess Ave., on Monday night. The meeting was attended by about forty people.

Rain, Lightning Stage Party Here

Woman Shocked, Chimneys Struck and Streets Flooded in Heavy Storm.

Lightning struck the chimney of the home of O. W. Sapp, 160 Huron Ave., and shocked Mrs. Sapp who was standing in the living room at the time. It continued on its course by ripping through the hallway on the opposite side of the house and moved electrical fixtures aside an inch in the ceiling. Plastering was cracked in the hall and in the kitchen. Mrs. Sapp suffered a numb left arm and upset nerves. A metal flower vase which she was holding was knocked from her hand.

Several children who were caught in the rain at Westgate park had stopped in the Sapp home for shelter on their way home but none of them were injured.

A bolt of lightning struck the chimney of the home of Charles Morgan, 184 S. Terrace St., and hurled several bricks into the street below.

West Broad street from Terrace to Burgess appeared like unto Venice for a short time and stalled street cars and automobiles played the part of gondolas. It was a happy time for the children however when they took advantage of the high water and went swimming in their own streets. Many basements were flooded.

Lightning struck the West Broad Street school building and caused a damage estimated at $100. Shortly after the storm firemen from the Hilltop station extinguished a blaze from a short circuit at 345 S. Richardson Ave. The damage was estimated at $75. Short circuit in an auto at Clarendon and Broad street caused damage of $10 on Monday evening.

Open Tent Meeting At Hague and Broad

Rev. J. Daniel Carrick, of the Heavenly Scientists' association is holding open air meetings in a tent, on the old Chautauqua grounds at the northeast corner of Hague avenue and Broad street, in the rear of the West Broad Street school, every evening for the next four weeks.

These meetings are free to the public and are being conducted for the benefit of the people of the Hilltop and the surrounding territory. Rev. Carrick explains in detail the lessons taught by the Heavenly Science movement and the essence of this religion.

Rev. Carrick has invited people afflicted with diseases to call at the tent in the afternoons and he will treat them gratuitously.

Mrs. Laura Fairchild, 2646 W. Broad St., has just returned from a week's visit in Detroit and Cleveland.

They will remain in the stores until the following Monday, when the next two winning numbers will be posted.

No money will be given to the holders of the lucky numbers until the time of the grand drawing on the the picnic grounds on August 22 at Westgate park. The holders of the lucky numbers will certify that they hold the said numbers by presenting them to R. O. Harrison at the Hilltop bank. Despite the fact than in Great Britain the gannets or solan geese eat immense amounts of herring, there seems to be plenty of fish left for the human fishermen. The gannets occupy every available ledge on the giant cliffs. Although they eat 60,000,000 herrings annually the good fishing does not seem to diminish. Herrings are on the lucky list, however, because of their activity in fishing streams of inland waters.

Go Ahead looked at her, then at Wade, who was trying to clamber to his feet by the help of the wall. "He does look like a fellow who ought to be shot, doesn't he?" he asked. "But, pshaw, a kid like you don't want to begin his young life by shooting anybody. Suppose I just throw him out?"

Stella was beginning to get control of herself. "No," she said, more calmly but still unevenly, "I want to get to camp before he does and tell Dad and the boys about him. Then, if he dares to turn up they'll attend to him. There's only one horse here and "

The clatter of hoofs, made by at least two running men, sounded in the hall. An instant later the door was flung open and a white man, tall, broad-shouldered and heavy, burst in, revolver in hand. Behind him the squat form and swarthy face of Diego showed for an instant, then vanished.

Go Ahead had not waited. At the first sound of the footsteps he had darted to Wade's side, grabbed that unfortunate by the nape of his neck and jerked him to his feet. Then, laying his revolver across his captive's shoulder, he faced the door just as it flew open.

"Hands up, please," he ordered gently.

The newcomer glared, but the pistol muzzle also glared at him unwinkingly; and he let fall his gun and slowly raised his hands.

"What the devil's this?" he demanded, furiously.

"Trade Your Smiles."

Go Ahead looked at Wade critically. "Darned if I know," he answered. "Thought maybe you could tell me. It resembles a man somewhat, but it looks more like something that the cat's just brought. . . . Er—you speak like one having authority. Are you perhaps the—er—cook?"

"No, I'm not the cook. I'm Jim Barber, sheriff of this county; and I—"

"Ah, yes! Just a moment. . . . Er—" Go Ahead turned to Stella. "What's your name, youngster?" he asked.

"R-Bob," stammered the girl.

"Bob. Well, Bob, what do you think I'd better do with these two specimens?"

Stella's eyes swept the pair malevolently. "We'd better leave them here and go," she said, at last.

Snap to the word, Go Ahead flung Wade from him, catapult like, squarely against Barker, Barker reeled backward, staggering, trying to keep his footing, but finally failed; and he and Wade went to the floor together in one scrambled heap.

As they fell Go Ahead ran forward and snatched up Barker's revolver. Then he swung on Stella. "Come on, Bob," he called. "Let's go."

But Stella had been attracted by a noise in the balcony that overhung the far end of the room, behind Go Ahead. Up she swept her eyes, tearing them by main force from the scene on the floor. Just as she did so she saw Diego, pistol in hand, run out upon the balcony and aim at Go Ahead.

There was no time to lose. Straight at Go Ahead Stella flung herself, sweeping him backward toward the shelter of the balcony overhang. She believed that Diego would not shoot her, that he would know enough of Barker's plans to beware of harming her, and she was ready to take the chance.

"Back," she screamed, as she flung herself. "Back—back—back!"

Go Ahead was quick enough, but only just quick enough. Diego's pistol cracked, and the ball grazed the top of his head, and then, plunging downward, cut a little curl from the top of Stella's wavy locks.

Before he could fire again Go Ahead and Stella were out of his sight, under cover of the balcony; and Go Ahead, thrown for the moment off his aim, had Wade and Barker again under cover.

"You saved my life, Bob," he said, smilingly.

"That's nothing between friends," laughed the girl, excitedly. "But if you like, you can save mine now. Keep those men standing where they are for ten minutes."

"Oh, sure! Is that all?"

"Yes." With the word the girl turned and ran to the tall window opening under the balcony on the outside world, leaped into it and then out and down.

Fleetly Wade and Barker sprang forward, furious to see the girl escape; but they stopped at a gesture from Go Ahead's pistol. "Hold on, people," he said. "You heard what the boy said. Better not move for ten minutes." His voice was very kind.

Wade laughed fiercely. "Boy?" he grated.

"Oh, well. Call him a man if you like," Go Ahead conceded. "He sure did act like one."

Wade opened his mouth to speak, but a furious oath from Barker silenced him. "Shut up, you fool!" he yelled.

Go Ahead laughed. "Talk as rough as you like, fellows," he said, "but I guess you'll have to wait till the ten minutes are up before you can mix it."

As the ten minutes dribbled away Go Ahead caught the sound of furtive footsteps on the planking of the balcony over his head. Evidently, he guessed, the man who had fired at him was leaving the balcony to try to slip upon him by some other way or to set an ambush for him when he started away after the ten minutes were up.

Where would he watch—at the window or the door to the hall? Go Ahead did not rate the fellow's intelligence very high and guessed that he would watch at the window because Bob had gone that way. Still, if he were just a little more intelligent he would probably watch at the hall door, just because Bob had not gone that way. After all, it was just a guess.

What was the answer?

To Go Ahead it was plain enough. Go Ahead and chance it!

Abruptly his eyes gleamed. Forward he leaned, pistols extended menacingly. "You d—n scoundrels!" he raged. "Ill-treating a boy like that! Ought ought to be killed. By heavens I will kill you!" From his hands blazed alternate streams of fire.

Wade and Barker could not know that he aimed above their heads; and they did not wait to investigate. Pell mell they rushed for the door to the corridor and flung themselves through it. And instantly a revolver began to crackle.

Go Ahead knew what this meant and that he ought to leave by the window at once. But curiosity held him. To the still-ajar door he ran and peered through the crack just in time to see Wade stagger back and fall, Barker hurl a sheath knife through the air, and Diego drop his pistol with a howl as the knife drove into his right arm.

This was enough for Go Ahead. Leaving Diego to fight it out with his employer and his employer's henchman, Go Ahead jumped out through the window.

His horse was gone, presumably taken by Bob; but Wade's horse was still standing hitched in the corral; and in a moment Go Ahead was on his back and was speeding away.

CHAPTER VI

When Stella leaped from the window she intended to run to the corral for Wade's horse, which she knew was tethered there. But when she saw another standing close by, held in place only by his trailing bridle, she guessed that it was Barker's, jumped on it, and sped away.

She felt no qualms at leaving Go Ahead to restrain Wade and Barker, and she had forgotten Diego. But before she had gone a hundred yards she remembered him and checked her horse. Diego was armed and was watching. Go Ahead (whose identity she did not know) appeared to be a stranger; he did not know the ins and outs of the ranch house; Diego might ambush him and— She would go back and fight it out with him. It was all right for a girl to run away, but she was not a girl; she was a man. Men stood by each other to the death; she would do the same.

Her hand dropped to her belt—and found nothing; and she remembered that Go Ahead had failed to give her back her pistol. Except for a small sheath knife she was unarmed. Her going back would merely add to the difficulties her champion might find in getting away. He was a man, all right; no doubt he would manage things satisfactorily—if she did not go back to hamper him. On the whole—unwillingly, she spurred her horse and raced away to the north once more. But from time to time she looked back wistfully. For some reason her heart was unusually heavy within her.

As he leaped to the saddle of Wade's horse and raced away he saw afar to the north, the trail of dust that marked Stella's course; and instinctively if not quite automatically he followed it.

For awhile Go Ahead rode on silently, not hurrying to overtake the fleeing youngster but merely following his trail. He was thinking deeply; but his thoughts were clearly not unpleasant, for after a while a slow smile curved his lips.

"Some boy," he muttered in admiration. "Some boy! I'll tell the world so. Good looking, too. 'Bob!' Good name for a likely lad. Seems to fit him somehow. Wonder what that big lout was jumping on him for? Darn it! I ought to have shot the cuss."

As he talked to himself Go Ahead was cantering along, watching the dust line before him. Undoubtedly it was getting thinner, perhaps because he was falling further behind or perhaps because the soil was changing and Bob's dust did not so readily rise in the air.

Meanwhile, Stella, pausing for a moment on the crest of the slope, had seen, two or three miles ahead, at the crest of the next swell, the men whom she was pursuing. They seemed to have halted for a moment. The distance was of course too great for her to make out the reason for their stopping (anywhere except in the desert they would have been practically invisible to her); but she guessed that they were looking back for her and Wade. So she rode on, faster than before.

In the second "valley" she came up to them and tailed on to their plodding procession.

No one spoke to her as she came up; and she spoke to no one.

There was no particular need for speech, and our plainsman is conservative in the use of language—except of course when he goes to town and paints it red. After a while, however, Black Kennedy, a special crony of Wade's, who had known all about the plan to hold Stella at the ranch, dropped back to her side.

"Where's Wade?" he asked.

Stella glanced at the questioner slowly and indifferently. "Wade?" she echoed. "Left him at the ranch." Stella knew that Kennedy was close to Wade, and she had decided to hold her tongue about the latter's conduct toward her until she got back to the Roost.

"Humph! Where'd you get that horse?"

"At the ranch. My horse was lame."

Kennedy knew that the girl's horse was lame, and he knew also how it had come to be lame. What he wanted to know was how Stella had managed to get another horse after he had personally seen to it that every other mount at the ranch house except Wade's had been sent away. Frowningly, he stared at Stella—and made another discovery.

SELECTING AN AIRPORT

The announcement of the selection of the site for the new city airport by the Airport committee appointed by the mayor has been delayed and will probably be announced next week.

There are several reasons why the airport should be located on the Hilltop. There is plenty of land available in this section that would be ideal for the landing field. This land is level and would need but little work to make it suitable for landing and taking off. The land is also well drained and presents no danger of being flooded. The air is pure and is not polluted with smoke. Neither is there danger of fog as there would be in a site near the river.

Another reason why the Hilltop is ideally situated for an airport is that it is but a short distance from the heart of the city. Two main thoroughfares and several short cuts lead to the business district, having street railway service and good paving.

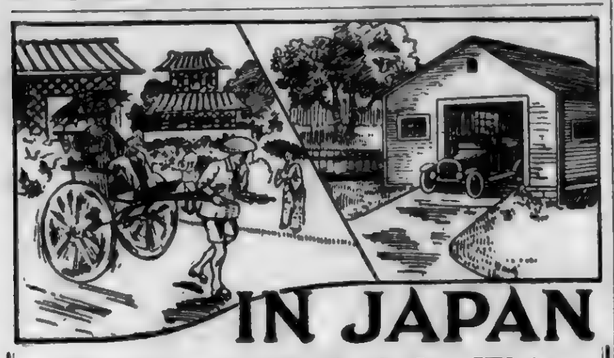
LIVING LONGER AND DOING MORE

The average length of life has been extended fifteen or twenty years in the past fifty years. Men are not ready for the grave at forty now. Instead they are living until they are fifty-five or sixty. And it is becoming a common thing to read in the news of those who have passed the century mark and are enjoying life.

With the increased stay on earth another situation has presented itself that was not common in years of the past. It is no longer an easy task for the young man to step out into a position of big pay and rapid advancement. Instead the old hands at the game are holding on and are really producing regardless of their age. The young man must take his turn it seems or create a field of his own.

The man who is really attracting attention in his younger days in this age must be truly worthy of advancement. And business heads are realizing this competition and giving some of the bigger responsibilities to the young man.

FORERUNNERS OF THE PICNIC



Beginning on Monday, members of the Hilltop Business Men's Association will give tickets with each purchase of 50 cents in their stores. These tickets will be deposited in designated places by the following Saturday and a prize drawing will be held every Saturday preceding the picnic on August 22.

Anyone buying from Hilltop merchants is elegible for the drawing. The purpose of the contest is to advertise the annual Hilltop picnic sponsored by the Business Men's association and make it a success for all concerned. The money for these cash prizes is being donated by the business men themselves.

This contest means that several people will be winners of cash money. There will be but one way to get in on the prizes and that is to buy from the members of the Hilltop Business Men's Association who are backing the picnic.

They say women must suffer to be beautiful by the rules of the beauty shop. And it is also true that we've got to smell the smoke if we burn the rubbish in our back yard.

Chautauqua time is here but this entertainment is to be missed this year. Bringing such a group of artists to the community reflects the attitude of the people in that section toward clean entertainment. We are looking forward to an opportunity to bring them back to the Hilltop next year.

The Spectator

"Women may degrade themselves with cheap masculine imitation."

WOMEN POLITICIANS.

Republicans and Democrats have nominated their candidates for president and in the conventions, woman sufferage was evident. Feminine delegates entered the arena, had a speaking part and came out of the ring wearing victorious smiles. It was considered another step for the women toward gaining equal rights, . . . single standards, . . . or what you may call it.

Red Pullin, when I interviewed him in regard to his idea of the place of women in politics, stated that he believed things were as they should be. He believes that women should have their say in the operation of the government as well as the operation of the home. "This business of marrying should be made more of a co-operative undertaking. Why give the woman the hope to care for and the children to raise and turn all the other stages of the building of a family and the running of the state over to the man? Why not divide the duties and each take responsibility for the outcome?

"I believe a man should marry a woman of intelligence and ability equal to his own and that both should enter in public life and both take an interest in the home."

THE WOMAN'S PLACE.

Just after meeting Red Pullin I chanced to meet Sir Littleton and with the same topic fresh in mind I asked for his ideas, he being unmarried but ever ready to give me his thoughts about the opposite sex.

"I believe," said Sir Little, "as does Red Pullin, that the man and the woman should take an equal part in all the activities of the home and its development but I contend that some women are going to far in the race for equal rights."

He continued by saying he believed that women would be better able to dominate men by feminine charm rather than by imitation. A woman should consider that she has inborn qualities that are far different from those of men and should glorify in her womanhood. Trying to imitate man in every respect is degrading to the woman.

"Marriage isn't the death of personality for women or is it the death of love as so many are believing today," says Mr. Littleton. "Neither do I believe it to be a trade whereby women make their living. There is nothing to be shocked about. Women may be doing things different from the times of their grandmothers but probably in the end it will be for the best even as have the radical things of other times."

TAKING THE AIR.

Last week an opportunity came for me that was for the time quite an event but which in a few years will be a common occurance. With a friend I looked at the city as we passed over it 2000 feet above the ground. Covering a distance of ten miles in a few minutes and gliding down to earth was what might be termed a thrill but rather I would call the anticipation of the flight the thrill because, once the ground is left behind the safety and the ease of flying is realized and enjoyed.

I would predict that the flying industry will equal that of the automobile within the next few years and that it will be a common thing to go back to grandma's in an airplane instead of the jingling sleigh or the one-horse shay.

THE STICKER.

Professor Tittle was telling me a short time ago of some of the maxims of the past that no longer hold true and one of particular was "Stick to one task; no tree grows tall if it is often transplanted." Says he, "It is true that a person can't be changing positions every week and expect to get ahead but it is also true that a lot of trees never grow because they were planted in the wrong soil. You should move out of the house before it falls in during a storm."

NEW SYSTEM OF STUDY OUTLINED FOR SCHOOL

Through the initiation of Supt. J. G. Collicott of the Columbus public schools and C. A. Pollock, director of the summer school session, the work of the elementary schools during the summer of 1927 was organized into a new system of study units. This new plan departed from the regular group method of teaching and placed emphasis upon the individual pupil and his needs. Many teachers were so pleased with it that they used it with great success during the fall term.

So well did the plan work in the elementary schools, that at the first 1928 general meeting of all the summer teachers of the city, plans were formulated to include the junior and senior high school subjects in the study units of the summer school program.

Under the plan, the subject material of the text books is organized into units of study which makes for definiteness and the setting up of specific goals. The planning of the units and their solving, trains the pupil in habits of independent work and increases his ability to help himself, which is not alone essential to a good scholastic record, but also to a successful life in the world of affairs after graduation.

The carefully planned assignments enable each pupil to progress at his own rate. The most capable can complete their minimum essentials early and then take up supplementary work to enrich their experiences. The teacher, under the unit plan, has more time to assist the slower student, who needs special attention and encouragement, beyond that which can be given in the ordinary group method of teaching.

Each pupil possesses an individual progress card which shows his daily achevements of the assignments for the various school subjects. The room class chart shows the progress of the entire group.

Principals and teachers at Central High and Highland summer centers are enthusiastic over the new plan and report that it meets with favor among the students. They announce that in a number of cases, the individual progress charts of the pupils, indicates that many scholars are ahead of their daily assignment tasks.

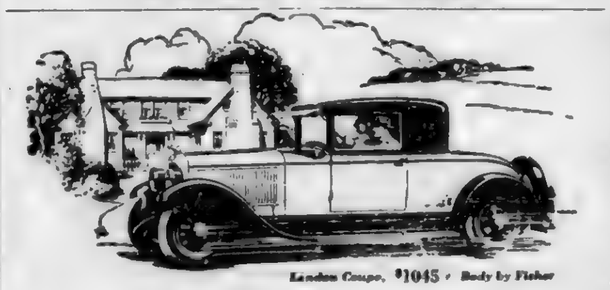
Rayon Prints Outstanding On Summer's Fabric Program

The lovely new rayon weaves such as have so conspicuously entered into the fabric realm are creating quite a sensation in the fashionable world. They are not only supremely attractive, but their adaptability and the wide variety they offer, have gained for them emphatic approval.



It should be remembered that rayon is in no sense an imitation of silk. It is not an imitation of anything. It is an entirely new production. It stands on its own merits, having an individuality all its own, being the result of modern invention which has achieved for it certain qualities not possessed by any other material.

The fact that the best designers both here and abroad are creating of rayon crepe, rayon voiles, rayon taffeta and rayon lace, costumes for every fashionable hour, adds to the prestige of these interesting new weaves. To illustrate, this picture shows a strictly sports costume and a charming dressy afternoon frock and they are both rayon. For the summertime dress to the right the stylist uses a handsome rayon voile, which is as exquisitely textured as the finest sheerest silk batiste. The remarkable thing about rayon voile is that it launders perfectly. That is one of the fascinating features of rayons in general, even those which have the aspect of expensive satin or brocades can be tubbed without fear of injuring them.

Rayon crepe, a plain color for the skirt, with a georgeous print for the blouse, is the chosen medium for the two piece sports costume shown to the left. When one realizes that this costume can be satisfactorily washed, the advantage of using it for practical, wearable daytime costumes is readily sensed.

Not only is rayon woven into fabrics for informal wear, but it is interpreted in luxurious velvets, moires, satins and as before mentioned it takes form also in beautiful lace.

Registering a gain of more than 62 per cent over any previous six months in its history, the Oakland Motor Car company for the half-year ended July 1, sold a total of 161,548 Oakland and Pontiac cars, W. R. Tracy, vice-president in charge of sales announced recently.

The six months record compares with shipment of 99,306 cars during the corresponding period in 1927, and 69,597 from January 1st to July 1st in 1926.

Not only was this period the largest on record, but June also was the greatest month in Oakland history, with 30,245 cars sold, Mr. Tracy said.

A record high day also was reached on June 30, Mr. Tracy announced, when 1677 Pontiac and Oakland sixes went out to dealers so that they might have sufficient cars to meet the unprecedented demand for this popular General Motors line.

The half-year volume was reached, he pointed out, despite temporary shutdowns in the Oakland plant incidental to moving machinery and assembly operations from the old factory to the modern centralized Oakland and Pontiac plants.

The production rate of the company places it among the first five in the industry in point of volume.

The Sandman Story

by Martha Martin

ABOUT MR. YAK

"Yes, I've been asked to tell my story," said Mr Yak, "and I am indeed glad to oblige.

"I like to think that people are interested in knowing about me, and I always like it when children come to the zoo and when they ask what I am.

"It is nice to have people interested in one.

"Of course it is nice to have people interested in two or three, but when I said that it was nice to have people interested in one I meant it the way I've heard creatures tall—I meant that is was nice to have people interested in me. I said 'one' because that sounds better and more superior.

"Well, we come from Tibet and Central Asia, and we are hitched to wagons in the home country and carry people about in these wagons or carts.

"We also carry bundles and we pull plows. We do a lot of work at home.

"Yaks give milk and from our hair splendid ropes can be made, and because they saw us hitting flies so successfully with our tails many of our tails have been made into fly swatters.

"If we meet an enemy we fall on him to show him that we think he ought to go down before us.

"But for the most part we're very good natured. Weather doesn't bother us. In fact we like the cold, cold weather which some of the animals don't like at all. And we're happy in the zoo.

"We believe that lace and all sorts of wonderful things have been made from our hair, and you will admit that it is handsome hair.

"It has been said somewhere that women had beautiful hair, but goodness me, Yaks have beautiful hair, too. Women shouldn't keep all the glory to themselves.

"Now Methuselah, the Giant Tortoise, shows a good disposition. He enjoyed the last snowstorm we had immensely. He didn't complain and long for other weather.

"King Cobra is changing his skin for a new one, but he is so cross. Last year when he did this they had a horrible time with him.

"The old skin didn't come off across his eyes and the keepers tried to help him with it, but gracious, he'd try to attack them, and they had to keep on their guard.

"As it was they ran great risks in what they did. But they were brave and splendid about it.

"King Cobra didn't really deserve such attention, for they were trying to help him and he was ready to kill them!

"That wasn't very decent of him, was it.

"Well, they forgave him and put bushes with twigs and underbrush in his cage so that he could rub against these and help pull off his skin, but he wasn't grateful in the least.

"He is certainly a bad creature.

"But here I am, a good creature, and many of us have given rope, and food and lace and cloth and fly swatters, and no end of gifts to people, as I've said.

"I am grateful for my happy home in the zoo."

"Well," said Billie Brownie, who had been listening to Mr. Yak's story, as you may imagine, "I do like you, Mr. Yak. I like your name. I like everything about you. Is there anything else you can tell me?"

"I believe I forgot to tell you the most important thing of all," said Mr. Yak.

"I belong to the ox-en family. And of course, perhaps I should not be boastful about not being a weather grumbler on the cold days when others are complaining, for when Yaks are free and wild they live near places where there is always snow.

"Well," said Billie Brownie, "I like the winter too, and now that we're speaking of it I will sing you my winter song which I made up on my own here this afternoon. I do hope you will like it, and if you do it will be a great honor if you will allow me to dedicate it to you.

"That means, Mr. Yak, that I would like to put on the top of the song that it is TO MY GOOD FRIEND MR. YAK."

"Wait until you see if you like the song," said Billie Brownie, and then he sang this song:

Mr. Yak, the Polar Bear and I
All feel so very, very spry.
For we like the cold which is so bracing,
And we're happy that the winter time we're facing.

And Mr. Yak thought the song a fine one!

COCA-COLA CARTON IS MADE POPULAR

The special family carton of six bottles of Coca-Cola introduced to the public in December of 1927 has become a very popular item in the leading groceries, drug stores and confectioneries in Columbus and surrounding neighborhoods.

The popularity of this item is easily apparent. If you have ever tried to balance four or five bottles of any beverage on top of an armful of groceries or other parcels you have no doubt found that it is practically an impossible feat. The Coca-Cola family package containing six bottles of this delightful beverage has solved this problem and is particularly convenient for use on picnics or motor trips. According to the Coca-Cola Bottling company the first six months since the introduction of this package over 15,000 homes have consumed more than a quarter of a million bottles of Coca-Cola.

GLENWOOD GIRLS GUESTS AT CAMP

Nature Hikes, Boat Rides, Hand Work and Council Ring Feature Entertainment

Thirty-one girls from Glenwood park had the honor of being the first group of girls to attend the Indian village sponsored by the city recreation department on the banks of the Scioto above the Storage dam.

The girls left for the camp on July 9 and returned on the following Wednesday morning. They left the park at 8 o'clock and later took the bus at Long and Water streets. Fifteen girls from the Lincoln playground joined the Glenwood girls at the bus stop.

If You Would Be Like This Roman Discover Four Stone Age Mummies

A son of Rome, not the stronghold of Caesars and Mussolinis, but that small town four miles west of Columbus and close neighbor of the Hilltop on the National highway, has gained fame for himself and put this neighboring village on the map.

Harold W. McCracken, son of Mr and Mrs. J. O. McCracken, 40 Pasadena Ave., Rome, is leader of the Stoll McCracken Arctic expedition in the Aleutian Islands in the Bering sea. And news of the work of the expedition was recently printed in The New York Times.

They report the finding of the mummified remains of inhabitants of the stone age. Tortured by cold and the elements this little party discovered the work of human hands in a very inaccessible place. Digging in a mound half covered with moss and mud, and built up from heavy flakes of surrounding granite and sank deep in a natural vault of rock they discovered an Arctic sarcophagus consisting of a large wooden burial vault containing the mummified remains of three adults and one infant. Bone nails and lore were used in the structure.

Many weapons and tools for use in the other world were in the vault. The bodies were dressed in sea otter and bird skins. One was dressed as if being that of a king or ruler while the others were plainer. The conclusion of the find is that a seamstress and a hunter and their favorite child were put to death to care for the wants of the chief in the world to which he went.

The mummies have been loaded aboard the Morrissey, the expedition ship, and will be brought to the authorities of the American Museum of Natural History of New York.

McCracken is a former Columbus man. He attended Ohio State university in 1915 and 1916, where he studied natural sciences. During that time he went on an expedition of the university into Alaska to study plant and animal life. Two more trips into the frozen north were taken following the war.

Ribbon in Multi-Colors Trims The Sheer Frock This Season

If you are making up a pretty, sheer material and are wondering how best to finish the edges, why not border it with grosgrain ribbon in several colors? Ribbon used in a trimming way is featured throughout the season's smartest modes. The use of two or three colors is exploited and even as many as four and five shades are combined to form borderings.

The handsomest effects are achieved by picking out certain shades in the printed material of the dress, repeating them in the trimming ribbons. The attractive frock in the picture shows a fashionable ribbon trim. The dress itself is made of a flower print voile and it is bordered with navy, old rose and apple-green ribbon. The kerchief about the neck, which is of white crepe, enters into the color ensemble, in that it is finished with the same ribbon bordering as that of the frock itself.

These days, a gay silken square or triangle tied about the shoulders gives a nonchalant air to the majority of costumes. The fad began with the kerchief scarf as an accessory but so popular has the idea become, designers have taken, as is instanced in the model here shown, to incorporating it as an actual part of the dress rather than considering it as a separate item. The kerchief square is a very clever way of settling the neckline problem which so often confronts the home dressmaker. It can be made either of the very fabric of the dress or of a different material related to the ensemble by employing an identical embellishment of a ribbon border as illustrated or of similar hand-worked motifs and colorings.

But to return to the subject of ribbon used as a trimming. Many of the bouffant party frocks of organdie, point d'esprit net or of some other equally as modish a sheer fabric, have their flounces edged with narrow colorful ribbons.

One of the most charming ribbon effects is that of the duotone or triple girdle made of broad very soft satin ribbon in two or three pastel colors. These floppy bows with long trailing ends grace many a tulle or lace evening frock.

"Where's your gun?" he demanded abruptly.

Stella raised her eyes slowly and looked the man in the eyes. "I let Wade have it," she answered coldly. "He wanted it. Anything else you want to know?"

There was a lot more that Kennedy wanted to know, but he saw no way of learning it without resorting to extreme measures, which would certainly stir up opposition by Stella's friends in the party. He was sure that something was wrong, but he could not imagine how the girl had got away from the ranch house except by Wade's consent—and he could not imagine Wade giving that consent His inability to make even a guess as to what had happened cut the ground from under him.

"No!" he answered at last, frowning heavily. "I ain't got anything else to ask you just now. But I reckon I will have later." With a flirt of his reins he cantered back to the head of the column, where, as Stella noted, he began to talk angrily with Gopher Joe (another croney of Wade's).

Half an hour later a rider coming from the direction of the Roost appeared in the distance and, coming nearer, turned out to be Jack Green. There were greetings this time, of course, for Green had been away for a month or more and his friends wanted to know where he had been and what he had done while he was there. Green had answers ready, and after a few moments the party moved on, leaving Green to go his own way.

Green, however, did not go on. He simply waited till Stella, who at sight of him had taken pains to fall well behind the others, came up to him. Then he fell in beside her and began his tale.

"Did a young puncher show up at the J-B ranch while you were there?" he questioned, cautiously but eagerly. "A regular he-man about twenty-five years old?"

Wonderingly Stella turned her eyes on him. "I guess he did!" she exclaimed. "There couldn't be two of them could there? Do you know him? Who is he?"

"He's your forty-leventh cousin from Virginia—the one your dad sent me East after."

"Good gracious!" Stella could swear on occasion; brought up as she had been she could not have failed to pick up more or less profanity; but she seldom used it, for Fair objected. This time, however, her startled feelings found relief in the strongest oath at her command—an oath that one of the younger bandits had taught her years before when she was very young, explaining at the time that it was such an awful "cuss-word" that she must never use it except under the very gravest provocation. Long since she had learned that all this was merely the conception of humor held by the young scapegrace, but she had never entirely got rid of the impression that it made upon her mind, and in moments of stress she still resorted to it. "Good gracious!" she swore, once more. "You don't mean it?"

"Yes, I do!" retorted Green. "He ain't a bit like most eastern dudes. He's all right, he is. An' your dad hoped I'd get to the ranch before you left so's I could fix things up. But my horse put his foot in a gopher hole and broke his leg and I had to go back for another. An'—"

Stella was not listening. Her thoughts were moving fast. "What did dad want you to fix?" she questioned eagerly.

"Eh? . . . Oh! He wanted you to join him an' go East with him right away while you've got the chance by bein' away from the Roost. He said he knew you wouldn't want to go, but that—"

"Got a spare gun?" Stella's cut in was abrupt.

"Yes-s. But—"

"Give it to me!" Stella snatched the revolver from Green's hand almost before he could get it from his holster. Then she jabbed it into her own and whirled her horse to the rear. "Let's go," she cried, over her shoulder.

Green's wits were not so quick as Stella's but his muscles worked automatically; and in a second he was by her side. "How come?" he questioned.

"Oh, come on, goose! We'll talk later,"

"Just as you say, Bob; just as you say." Green also spurred his horse and the two shot away.

But it was not to be just as Stella said. The volte-face of the two was quickly noticed by the others, and a chorus of shouts rose behind them. "Hold on! Come back! Where you goin'?" rang Kennedy's voice above the rest.

Stella turned in her saddle and waved her hand impudently. "Going back to the ranch," she yelled. "Want to see Wade again." Then she turned her back on the men and scurried away as if everything was settled.

But out of the corners of her eyes she kept watch to the rear.

Green did the same; and a moment later he snickered. "You ain't stopped them none," he remarked. "Most all of them are after us."

Stella did not answer immediately. But she chirruped to her horse, and he let out another link in his speed. Then—

"It's Black Kennedy's doings," she explained. "He was real peeved when I came up a while ago. He wanted to know, you know. And I didn't tell him, not so's you could notice it. He's a pal of Wade's and I reckon he knew the dirty trick that Wade and Jim Barker tried to play on me at the ranch and couldn't make out how I'd got away."

"But—but—but—" Green was gasping. "How did you get away?"

Stella chuckled. "That cousin of mine you brought from the East dropped in. Oh, yes! He dropped in, all right. And what he did to Wade and Jim Barker was a plenty. . . . Hello! What's that?"

"That" was the whine of a bullet traveling overhead. The horses of the fugitives were better than those of the pursuers and had been steadily widening the interval between the two groups, and Kennedy, in the lead, but finding himself falling behind, had sent a bullet as a warning.

"Declaration of war," grunted Green.

"That's what. Black Kennedy means business. Well, let him mean. I'm not going back to the Roost. I hated to go back and make more trouble for dad by telling him what happened at the ranch, and I was only doing it because I hadn't anywhere else to go. Now I have. I've got a cousin to go to, and—oh—yes I found out this morning that I've got a fortune waiting for me in the East; that's why Barker wanted to marry me. I'm going to find— What's his name?"

"Name's George Ashmead Morton; but everybody calls him 'Go Ahead' an'—"

"'Go Ahead'!" Stella shrieked with laughter. "Oh, oh!" she choked, a moment later, "some of those Eastern dudes must be real sensible, after all. . . . Well, I'm going to find dear Gooey, and gooey East with him."

Another bullet sang through the air, this time very close to Green's head. Stella noted it and swung around in her saddle.

"Jack," she cried, "there's no use in your coming with me. I know all I need to know about Go Ahead. And dad needs you. You make a motion to try to stop me and slip up on it, and then stop and wait for the others and tell them—"

"Nothin' doin'!"

"Yes, there is. There's a whole lot doing! And there'll be a lot more if you don't obey orders p. d. q. Kennedy's shooting at you; not at me. He knows mighty well that Barker doesn't want me dead. I wouldn't be a bit of use to him dead. Now you drop out and tell some lie—"

Another bullet whistled by, and as if it were a signal Stella whirled her horse and drove him with stunning force against the mare that Green rode, bowling the smaller animal completely over.

Green, good horseman that he was reacted instantly but hopelessly; barely did he succeed in jerking his feet from the stirrups and springing clear as the mare crashed to the ground.

Stella's horse reeled, too, from the shock, but quickly recovered himself and, touched by the spur, shot away like an arrow. As he went, Stella, crouching low in the saddle, called over her shoulder: "Bawl me out to the boys, Jack. Give me a roasting. Understand?" An instant later she topped the rise up whose flank she had been racing and vanished from the sight of the pursuers.

And then, as she straightened up in her saddle, she faced Go Ahead, who had been racing up the other side of the slope to learn the meaning of the popping rifles that he had heard.

CHAPTER VII

Stella went straight to the point. "Glad to see you," she chortled; "'specially as I'm in trouble again. If you're not bound for anywhere in particular maybe you won't mind using my way. There're some fellows back there over the rise that seem to have a grouch on me, you know."

"Sure I know." Go Ahead did not speak until Stella stopped,—but well before that time he had spun about and was galloping beside her. "Funny how many undesirable citizens there are in the country nowadays," he observed.

Stella nodded. "Ain't it the truth?" she answered. "But what're you doing up here?"

"Came after you. Felt sort of responsible. Wanted to be sure you got home safe. Still want to. Who are your friends over the crest?"

"Nobody worth talking about. But I guess we'd better hurry some or they'll come pestering around." Stella touched her horse with the spur and it quickened his pace. "You from the East?" she asked.

Go Ahead laughed. "Discovered!" he exclaimed, gayly. "I thought my make-up was perfect and here a—a—shall we say a sixteen-year-old boy?—sees through it the first crack out of the box."

Stella dropped her head quickly in order to hide the gleam in her eyes. That morning, for the first time in her life, the fact that she was a woman had really been brought home to her (neither Barker's proposal nor Fair's warning had done it before); and she was only too glad that this Eastern cousin of hers had not guessed her sex.

Her first real thought was that his ignorance gave her an opportunity, herself unknown, to try him out and find out what sort of man he really was. The events of the morning had corroborated what Fair had told her and had deeply shaken her faith in the "boys" among whom she had been brought up; the scales had at least partly fallen, and she had begun to see them as they really were. Naturally, in her first spasm of disillusion she had begun to wonder whether all men were the same where women were concerned—whether, specifically, the particular man beside her was the same at heart.

Instantly, as was her wont, she decided to claim no kinship with this cousin of hers and to conceal her sex until she had found out for herself whether he—and the new world which he represented and into which she was going—was any better than the men and the old world from which she was about to depart.

To revolve all this in her mind and to think up an answer to his hinted question as to her age took her about three seconds. Then she looked up. "You might say sixteen if you've a mind to," she returned, laughingly. "And I didn't guess you were from the East from the way you acted up when you jumped in at the window this morning. By the way, what's your name? You haven't told me."

For a moment Go Ahead hesitated. He was traveling as George Morton, which, while it had the advantage of being his own name, was less conspicuous than his common appelation. He might easily tell this youngster that his name was George Morton. He opened his mouth do to so; then switched in mid-action. "My name's Morton," he said; "commonly called Go Ahead because I like to butt into things. But I'm not using that part of it these days, and when other folks are 'round I'd rather you'd call me—"

"Gooey?" suggested Stella.

"Er—well, yes, if you like."

"All right. Now tell me what you did to those triplets I wished onto you at the ranch."

Go Ahead chuckled. "Didn't do a thing to them," he replied. "Just sicked 'em on to each other and came away and left them to fight it out. Haven't seen any list of casualties yet."

Stella turned her horse to the west before she answered. She had glimpsed something ahead. Then—"Reckon there weren't any," she remarked, with the utmost carelessness. "Less'n perhaps it was Diego. It's most too far to be certain sure, but country beyond that'll foot most of those fellows that are after us, maybe all of them. Listen, and I'll tell you about one or two turns. You never can tell when you'll want to know, you know."

The girl's voice showed not even a tremor. It ran along smoothly—as smoothly as if she were chatting about some different subject under purely normal conditions. Glancing at her in wonder Go Ahead decided that she simply did not realize the danger. And in this he was right; Stella with the gang had been chased before and on such occasions had never seen anyone seriously wounded or caught; and she had come to come to believe and she had come to believe herself and her friends immune.

Meanwhile the outlaws steadily closed in from both sides. They did not fire, however; being on the flanks of the fugitives, who rode side by side, they could not fire at Go Ahead without running the risk of killing Stella, and even Kennedy's gang knew better than to do this. Besides, it seemed for the moment unnecessary. Their slanting approach, though it brought them nearer, yet inevitably brought them more and more directly behind the fugitives. Soon the one broad target would separate into two distinct ones. Then it would be reasonably safe to concentrate their fire on Go Ahead.

By and by single bullets, fired apparently by a single marksman on the left, began to whistle closer and closer to Go Ahead. Stella noticed this, and for the first time anxiety began to show in her manner. "That's Jim Barker shooting," she explained. "He thinks he can shoot, and I guess he won't risk anybody else hitting me. I'm afraid I've got you into a fix."

"WE PAVE with BRICK"

That bit of information marks his community as having discriminating taste—able and insistent on having things worth while.

And why not? At most, the difference in first cost amounts to only a few cents a yard, and important economies as well as complete satisfaction are assured for years to come.

Brick, toughest wearing surface man makes, does not rut or crack up. Being waterproof, moisture does not get below the surface to start destruction. So it protects the expensive part of your pavement—the part you cannot see.

Brick pavements as built today are smooth-riding; safer; easy on the eyes. Records show it to be far the cheapest pavement in the end.

GETTING WHAT YOU GO AFTER

Business is a peculiar thing. A merchant may have all the needs of a family on his shelves and his prices may be as reasonable as any but if he persists in letting the people wait until they need his article before they buy he will lose business.

A business success might easily be measured by the things he went after and the force he used in trying to get them. This force might be measured in service, quality, price or method of sale or the personality of the man himself.

Big business has today gained such a stronghold because it has been sponsored by those who go after things. The man who has the same store his granfather sold cheese and crackers and hardware in fifty years ago and persists in running it by grandma's methods soon finds that the prospective buyer doesn't care for his cheese and crackers and hardware.

HILLTOP CHURCHES

Another one of the many things the Hilltop has to be proud of is the church going population here. There are 18 churches on the Hilltop.

One of these churches ranks as having the largest membership in the city. All the others have hundreds of members. For the most part these 18 churches have well arranged and beautiful buildings. Many of them are planning new homes in the near future.

These churches have been established for many years in most instances. They are not the work of a small group who withdrew from the mother churches to establish an easy going religion of their own. The Hilltop is well represented with churches.

COMPARATIVE BEAUTY

Have you ever driven over the city and compared other sections with the Hilltop in beauty? True there are other spots that surpass our community in the number of fine homes and beautiful buildings. But it is also true that this section of the city has moderately priced homes and home sections that will compare equally well with any in the city.

There is much room here and hundreds of people are not forced to live in crowded quarters. The homes are placed in a greater area thus providing more freedom to move about and more possible beauty spots produced at the hand of the landscape artist. Wide streets and many shade trees and parks and playgrounds go toward making this an ideal community.

A recent visitor in the city mentioned the fact that Columbus was unusual in the respect that it was a large city and yet was not crowded. This accounts for its beauty.

THE PRIZE DRAWING

Members of the Hilltop Business Men's Association are giving tickets with every 50c purchase made at their business places during the period from Monday until August 22, the day set for the annual Hilltop picnic. These tickets are good in the prize drawing for the $400 in cash to be given by the association the afternoon of the picnic.

However there is a private drawing conducted by a committee of local business men every Saturday night and the holders of the two lucky numbers will receive $10 and $5 respectively at the picnic. These drawings on Saturday night will be fairly conducted in every respect. There will be no discrimination.

The winning numbers will be announced on Monday. Holders of the tickets will certify that they have the proper ticket with R. O. Harrison at the Hilltop Bank. The same stubs that were winners in the Saturday night drawings will be used in the grand drawing at the picnic and will have a chance to win more of the prize money. This is a rare opportunity for Hilltop people who buy from the local merchants.

There are two kinds of statesmen today. Not all the credit goes to the man who sways the world with words. The business man has become a statesman by taking a part in the work of running the government. He rightfully deserves a place there. A government can be made better by more business leaders and less politicians.

One of the greatest sources of entertainment for the newspaper editor is reading the flowery worded stories of the amateur and listening to the requests that the stories be printed as written.

The man who continually criticizes doesn't get a very large audience once people have heard him. As James T. Fields states in his poem dealing with the subject, "The barber keeps on shaving."

The man with much money who is responsible for the large manufacturing establishments of the country is more of a help to society than the man who grumbles because one of his fellows has more than he possesses.

One of the reasons cited by the manager of the Columbus airport for locating the new landing field on the Hilltop was that the air in this part of the city is the purest and cleanest in the city. Clean air is one of the requisites of a good flying field.

The Spectator

"I have had much trouble but none of it ever happened."

MODERN AESOP

A herd of cattle grazing in a field became aware of the presence of their owner who was bringing them salt. All were very fond of salt and gathered around the man to get their share. But the owner instead of giving salt to each member of the herd, placed one large brick of salt in the field.

The cattle nearest the salt brick took advantage of their positions and began licking it with their tongues. The owner of the herd had placed the salt brick in the field because it meant there would be no waste and all the cattle would get more salt than they could if he had given each a handful of loose salt. What was to his advantage in the saving was also to the advantage of the cattle. But there were some members of the herd who felt there was discrimination in the method and withdrew to a far corner of the field. Consequently there was no salt left when these members returned.

Says Captain Sentry who told me the story, "Two thousand years ago Aesop may have said 'Jealousies do not pay.' The same thing applies to the man who continually feels that he is being given the worst end of the deal."

HENPECKED HUSBANDS

"A man who loves children and has a wife who doesn't is about as bad off as a man without a country," was the expression of Sir Littleton one evening last week when several members of the club met in an informal way at his home.

He pointed out an old man, tall and gray but full of life, playing with several children across the street. "There," he said, "is a good example. He loves children and has none of his own. He has plenty of money but is burdened with a wife who feels that the work of raising children should be left to someone else.

"Furthermore she takes it upon herself to forbid him playing with children above the ages of four or five years. It isn't a matter of this man not having the ability to care for himself but instead it is a case of a henpecked husband wasting his life away by letting the wife who gives nothing in return, rule his every action."

You'll do better at Seiller's after all.

CONFIDENCE

Several members of the club have discussed the possibilities of the religious healers that are making themselves known in most every city today. Red Dullin presented the situation by saying there is much truth in what these religious men and women claim they can do.

"The way they cure is by making the afflicted person think. The first thoughts are of God and thereafter it is a matter of having confidence in themselves. As long as a person continues to believe he is a victim of tuberculosis or some other such ailment he is growing into that very condition. He soon loses all hope for recovery and neglects his physical development to such an extent that his weakened body is not capable of resistance.

"If a person will but put every effort forth to accomplish the desired end and have unfailing confidence in himself and believe that the thing can be done, it can be done. If a person fails to see himself in the picture as he would like it the picture will never be a realization.'

You'll do better at Seiller's after all.

AS A MAN THINKETH

The man who believes he is beaten, is. The person who thinks someone else will accomplish more, generally finds himself thinking the same thing many years after. The person who has the confidence in himself to believe that even the best and the hardest things can be accomplished has more potential energy than forty men who allow themselves to continue in the rut made by the person who has gone before.

The dying man who called his children to his bedside for a few parting words of advice set a good example in the life he had lived. Said he, "My children I have had much trouble in my life. . . . but none of it ever happened."

"Trade Your Smiles."

You Can Help

Every individual should have a part in building the neighborhood in which he lives. It is evident that this section of the city is growing rapidly. There is plenty of room for expansion and this expansion must be made to co-operate with the present condition of the Hilltop as a community. . . . clean, well planned and with stores of service conveniently located.

Your part in building this bigger Hilltop is in the co-operation you give the local merchants now. They are offering you service and quality and have made this section outstanding for its good community stores. They have built such stores through the confidence of the people. They will continue to build in this Hilltop expansion movement by continued confidence and faith of the residents of the community.

Remember you are having a part in building the Hlilltop when you patronize the merchant who has your interest at heart.

The Sandman Story
by Martha Martin

COWS WITHOUT HORNS

"My name is Mooly Cow and I have no horns. Moo, moo, moo, I have no horns," repeated Mrs. Mooly Cow.

"Moo, moo, moo," said Mrs. Black Poll Cow, "I haven't any horns either."

"The same is true of me," said Mrs. Red Poll Cow, "and what is more, none of our little ones have horns, as they follow our example.

"We don't mind it because other cows like horns. It's just not our way."

"Why talk of horns and whether you have them or not," said Miss Jersey Cow. "The important subject to be talked about is that of milk."

"Milk is important," said Madame Jersey Cow, "Oh yes, there is nothing so important except perhaps cows themselves and good food for them to eat."

"Well," said Miss Jersey, "I do give milk. There is no mistake about that.

"Now the Guernsey Cows give good rich milk, too. They are much the same as we are. They belong to the same great family."

"Ah, yes," said Miss Guernsey, "that is true.

"We Don't Mind It Because Other Cows Like Horns."

"The Jersey and the Guernsey give the rich milk. Now the Holstein Ladies say that they prefer quantity to quality."

"True," said Madame Holstein, "I would rather give a lot of milk than a small amount of very rich milk such as the members of your family do.

"It is nice, of course, to give rich milk, but I think it is nicer to give lots of milk. Now the way we do means that many, many more people can have milk than if we did as you all do.

"You are not so generous as we are That is simply a family way of yours But when you do give, you give handsomely. That is the way of the Jersey and Guernsey families.

"Now I hold the world's record for the amount of milk given—for the greatest amount of milk ever given. I do not mean that I, myself, hold this great record, but the Holstein family holds it.

"There is nothing selfish about that. Nothing small or stingy.

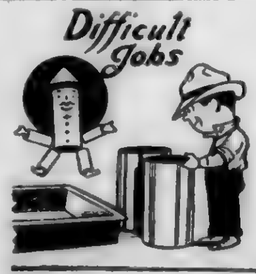
"Ah, yes, our family holds the world's record for generosity in milk giving."

"Well," said Miss Guernsey, "we're good-sized cows and we think that some cows should not think only of quantity but should think of richness and such important things.

"We're rather rich looking ourselves, splendid looking we've been told, and we want to give the kind of milk that is like ourselves."

"Sometimes we've been fed up and given some of the Jersey milk to make us fat," said one of the Holsteins, "for we are fed well when we're out prize winning; or are hoping to be prize-winning cows.

"We're fed well all the time, of course, too.



"I do believe that we hold the butterfat record, for we've given eight pounds of butter a day—apiece.

"Ah, they have a silo on the farm.

The Holstein family were spotted black-and-white coats and Miss Jersey wore a lovely fawn-colored costume.

But they talked no more now for awhile as it was milking time, and they all went and lined up so as to be all ready.

They all felt quite satisfied with what they could do and in the talk they had had.

Cocoa

4 cups milk.
2 tablespoons cocoa.
3 tablespoons sugar.
¼ teaspoon salt.
1 cup water.

Mix cocoa, salt and sugar. Add water. Cook for five minutes stirring to prevent burning. Add milk and heat but do not boil. Serve

Toasted Crackers with Marshmallows

Place a marshmallow in the center of small soda crackers arranged in a pan. Heat in a moderate oven until the marshmallows become soft and slight brown. Serve immediately with cocoa.

Broiled Steak

The steak should be cut at least one inch or more thick. Wipe with a damp cloth. Trim off superfluous fat. Grease the wires of the broiler well to prevent sticking. Rub the meat on both sides with salt and pepper. Place on broiler and sear first on one side and then the other. Then lower blaze and cook on one side until done and turn and finish cooking. The steak is ready to turn when the under side has a puffy appearance. Do not test by piercing with a fork as this allows the juices to escape. When done serve on a hot platter.

Pineapple Dressing

Take the juice from a can of pineapple, warm and add two tablespoonfuls of butter well blended with one tablespoonful of flour; add two egg yolks well beaten, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, and cook until smooth and thick. Add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and mix well. Turn set away to cool. Add one-half cupful of whipped cream and serve.

Creole Sauce

To one-half cupful of rich white sauce, prepared by using one tablespoonful each of butter and flour, cook and add one-half cupful of rich milk, add two tablespoonfuls of minced onion, four of green pepper. Add one small can of tomato soup just before serving. Add seasonings to suit the taste.

White Sponge Cake

Sift one cup flour and add one cup sugar, 3 teaspoons baking powder and pinch of salt. Sift all together several times. Add one cup scalding milk and beat until smooth. Add vanilla and fold in stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs. Bake in a slow oven in an angel food pan (ungreased). Invert pan when done until cool. Remove from tin and frost with any icing.

School Date Set

An attempt to extend the vacation of the children in the Columbus public schools was halted Monday when the board of education turned down the proposal submitted favoring the opening of school on the first Monday following Labor Day instead of the day following Labor Day as has been practiced here for some time.

The reason advanced by Stewart L. Hoover, member of the board, for the extension of the vacation was that many mothers were forced to cut their vacations short in order to be home in time for the opening of school.

School will open this year on the day following Labor Day.

EASTERN MOUNTAIN TRIP IS DESCRIBED

P. W. Drumm Gives Account of Motor Trip to the Eastern Coast.

On Monday morning, July 2, our crowd, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Speckman and children Carl William and Elizabeth, together with Mrs. P. W. Drumm and the writer, started for the cool breezes and hot sandy beaches of the Atlantic ocean, Atlantic City, New Jersey, being our objective. We made our journey in auto.

Leaving Columbus at 8 o'clock and following the National highway, we landed in Washington, Pa., about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. We then left the National road and went a northeast direction to Greensburg, a distance of 43 miles where we struck the Lincoln highway. Greensburg is a city of several thousands and is 211 miles from our home, according to our machine measurement. We stayed all night there and found very good accommodations. We then travelled the Lincoln highway from there to Philadelphia.

The mountain climb was not difficult for the road is fine and the mountains with one or two exceptions are not steep, especially is this true of the Allegheny range.

Laurel Hill mountain is 2648 feet and to the top of Bald Knob it is 2905 feet, this is a long mountain, as is also the Siderling of the Blue Ridge range, measuring about 7 miles.

Grand View and Grand View Points on Lookout mountain, including Ray's Summitt, are all interesting on general principles, ranging in latitude from over 1400 to 2000 feet. Ray's Summit is 1958 feet, Grand View, 2000. The Tuscarova Cove mountain is over 2100 feet.

Although nearly upon the summit, the road has been widened and tourists going either way find here a resting place. A large building stands here for the accommodation of those who are hungry or thirsty.

For sale here are cards showing points of interest and souvenirs of all description.

Looking east and south the observer can see three states and scenery that baffles description. It is magnificently lovely and shows the wonderful design of the All Wise Creator and the exquisite finger touches of the Divine hand. On every side you can hear the exclamations from the sight-seeing crowd, expressive of their wonder and delight, "Wonderful!" "Beautiful!" "Grand!"

Eastern Pennsylvania is a fine country and apparently very prosperous. While we saw little or no wheat in Ohio, the Keystone state has large fields of fine wheat ready for the sickle.

The second night we stayed in Gettysburg. Having toured this battle ground before, we spent little time, but we went to see the house in which Miss Jennie Wade lived and where she died by a bullet from a Confederate soldier's gun.

Miss Wade was shot while at work in the house and was the first woman killed in the war. This was July 3, 1863. This house is well preserved and shows the rooms and some furniture that was then in use. The hole made by the bullet is plainly seen.

We passed through a number of cities, but we admired Lancaster the most. This city of 50 or 60 thousand is beautiful and progressive.

One of the things that attracts the attention of the tourist is the numerous large and well kept estates that fringe the highways.

The newer resident portions of Atlantic City are exceedingly beautiful. The beach is find and the ocean view is excellent.

We found everything orderly and no extremes in dress either way. Our hotel accommodations were good and no more expensive than some of the small towns. On our return trip we tarried in Philadelphia to explore Independence Hall, which was the seat of Congress when the place where the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Old Christ church is an interesting place with its old fashioned pews and high pulpit. It was built in 1695.

We were in the pews once occupied by Franklin, Washington and Jefferson, and others.

We visited the home of Betsy Ross and birthplace of our flag at 241 Arch St.

We also drove out to the naval yards which is a sight worth while.

Many points of interest are to be seen here. Going on to Collegeville, Pa., we struck the William Penn highway which we followed to Harrisburg, passing through Reading and several large towns. From the capital we came back to Greensburg and thence to Washington, Pa., where we spent the night and returned home the next day.

We have not the space to speak in detail of our trip. The weather for the most part was good and the roads fine. The scenery all alon gthe way is wonderful and there was not a monotonous hour in our travel of 1150 miles.

Aside from the Ohio, we crossed many beautiful streams, viz the Delaware, Susquehannah, Juanita and others.

We had no machine trouble, no sickness and nothing to mar our pleasure. If you are going east take the Lincoln highway at least crossing the mountains.

P. W. DRUMM.

The artist, James McNeill Whistler, sold his portrait, The Princess from the Land of Porcelain, to Leyland, a shipbuilder, who hung it in his dining room. Since the room did not harmonize with the picture, Whistler "offered to redecorate the walls if Leyland would remove a distasteful red border on the rug. Eventually, it was necessary for Whistler to undertake extensive alterations in the original decorations of the dining room, so that The Princess might have an appropriate setting. Thus came into being the famous "Peacock Room," every inch of whose walls is covered with blue and gold, with the peacock as the motif.

Ionaco Office,
Columbus, Ohio

Gentlemen: I have suffered with muscular rheumatism and pains in my back for many months. The pain was very severe and I tried everything I knew of to get relief, but without result. About one month ago I purchased an Ionaco, and today the improvement is much marked. I do not have the severe pains, and generally I believe the Ionaco has improved my health.

My son, now 21 years, had suffered from rheumatism for a long period, and two physicians said they could do nothing for him after long treatment. He had been unable to work and suffered intense pain at times. He has also used the Ionaco and now he has returned to work.

I fully believe that Ionaco is the best investment that any family can make, as I have proved by experience that it does restore health, and I feel that it has and will continue to save me great expense.

You have my permission to use this letter as you see fit and I will be pleased to tell any one what the Ionaco has done for me and my family.

Thanking you for your courteous and assuring you of my appreciation and cooperation, I am,
Very Sincerely,
Wm. Raine.

Ionaco Office,

Gentlemen: In October 1926, while engaged at my work as a locomotive engineer in making a sudden stop to avoid an accident, I wrenched my back and groin, and I have had intense pain in both at different times and suffered considerably.

I have been examined several times, but no one could give me a direct answer as to what was wrong.

Through a friend I heard about Ionaco and I have been using Ionaco several weeks and I can truthfully say it has given me relief when all other methods I have used, failed.

And from my own experience I know that the Ionaco is a real investment for any home. You may use this letter as you see fit.

Yours truly,
William S. Hays

Doll Day at Glenwood Playground

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

Glenwood Park playground took on the appearance of a day nursery Friday afternoon when Hilltop children exhibited dolls of all descriptions, sizes and colors in the doll show sponsored by the playground directors.

In the above picture are shown some of the prize winning dolls and the owners. At the top is Mrs. Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., one of the judges, holding Darleen Thomas 3, of 1230 W. Broad St., and one of the prize winners. Another doll is at Mrs. Randall's right.

Other prize winners in the doll show were: Eleanor Adair, 39 Whitethorne Ave.; Anna Whitstone, 2008 Fairmont Ave.; Mary Elizabeth Helmert, 181 N. Roys Ave., and Gloria Ann Martin, 252 Nashoba Ave.; Jane Evans, 5, of 154 S. Ogden Ave.

The show was not for girls alone but since the boys could not bring out dolls they came arrayed in costumes of many colors and representing various characters. Winners in the costume contest were: Harold Roth, 1945 Fairmont Ave.; Joseph Zeier, 1936 Fairmont Ave., and Alfredia Candy, 1935 Floral Ave.

Manager George Pekras of the Ritz Theatre gave tickets to the Ritz to the winners of both contests. A large stick of candy was given all those who were entered in the show.

Deems, who has just returned from California where he attended the World Sunday School convention in session July 11 to 18 at Los Angeles. He was a delegate from Hope Memorial Sunday school. Mrs. Deems and son Ralph were with him.

Deems stopped off for 35 minutes on his return trip at Albuquerque, New Mexico, to see Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hughes, formerly of Elden avenue. As he went to board the train he was handed a copy of the Hilltop Record. This was thoroughly devoured he states.

There were 7032 delegates at the meeting and 53 countries represented. There were 187 delegates from Japan. The meetings were held in the Shrine Temple whose 9000 seats were filled at all sessions. An open meeting in the Hollywood bowl seated 35,000 at the "Festival of Song."

While on the trip they travelled 7000 miles. The itinerary included Royal Gorge, Pikes Peak, Salt Lake city, Feather River Canyon, San Francisco, Pasadena, Long Beach and back via the Santa Fe route.

Miss Stella Rowley, Huntington, W. Va., was a guest Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Isabel Burnside, 92 N. Powell Ave., en route to Rochester, N. Y., to visit with relatives.

STREET CAR WRANGLE MAY CAUSE SECTIONAL BATTLE

A hornets' nest was stirred up in the city with the routing of the Main-Neil cars over Front street, and room for much argument on the part of the Hilltop and the West Side was presented with the action of city council in ordering the cars back on High street Monday night.

When the cars were first taken from High street and placed on Front street there was a cry from North side business and civic associations to the effect that Front street was not safe for women and children at night. In this respect they took a direct swing at the Hilltop and from all indications inflicted a blow that is being felt.

Fred L. Sulzberger, vice president of the Hilltop Business Men's association, spoke in favor of re-routing the cars from the standpoint of city expansion and reminded members of council of the action taken two years ago in removing the West Broad street and Cemeteries cars from High street. At that time it was understood that the re-routing of West Side cars to Front street was the first step toward the distribution of cars over more of the downtown business district.

Council decided to return the cars to High street by a vote of 4 to 3 Monday night. Arguments of all kinds were presented by supporters of the old route. It appears that a more equal distribution of traffic in the downtown business district is not desired by the High street merchants and they are supported by the North end group, in making Front street appear unsafe for women and children.

Councilman Miller, who originally voted for the re-routing, changed his vote on Monday. Councilmen Green, Welsh and Zimpher voted for the re-routing and Karnes, Lewis and Wohrle voted against the change. Councilman Lewis claimed that he was not in favor of shifting something on other sections that he did not want for his own section.

Following the vote to place the Main-Neil cars back on High street Lewis made motion to re-route West Broad cars back on High street but his motion was lost for want of a second. Councilman Miller failed to come to the suport of Lewis. Green moved to amend the motion by asking that Linden cars be placed on High street but he too failed to get a second.

BANKING KNOWLEDGE IS TOO GOOD HERE

A knowledge of banking may be well in most instances but it is not always best to demonstrate to strangers is the conclusion of David Smith, colored, 802 S. Oakley Ave., who reports to police that he lost $64 in a demonstration to two colored strangers Saturday night.

He states that he was met at Broad street and Oakley avenue by the two strangers. One had $500 and said he didn't know what to do with it. Smith advised him to bank it but the stranger claimed he would have to wait 90 days before he could withdraw it. Smith demonstrated his knowledge of banking by showing the stranger he could withdraw his money anytime, and he drew out $64 he had in the bank.

When he returned to the bank with what he supposed was his money and the $500 of the strangers for deposit he found the package contained only newspaper scraps.

Mrs. C. B. Bowers, 164 S. Westmoor Ave., has returned from a vacation trip in Albany, O., where she visited Miss Florence Brown, and Lancaster where she visited Mrs. F. J. Fink.

Mrs. Isabelle Burnside and daughters, 92 N. Powell Ave., attended the funeral of Mrs. Burnside's brother Mr. John A. Mackintosh in Cleveland Thursday. Mr. Mackintosh was in his 80th year of age.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Churton and son Paul of Huntington, W. Va., have been guests since Saturday at the home of Mrs. Isabel Burnside, 92 N. Powell Ave.

MORE NUMBERS ARE PLACED IN HILLTOP STORES

Thousands of tickets were given out by the Hilltop business men during the past week and their supply was being restocked early in the week as two more prize winning numbers were announced on Monday morning in the stores of the members who are participating.

The second private drawing was made on Saturday night and the winning numbers were displayed Monday and through the week.

Holders of the winning numbers will be awarded the $10 and $5 prizes at the Hilltop picnic to be given August 22 at Westgate park. No money will be given out until the day of the picnic. The Saturday night prizes will be awarded and the grand drawing will follow. The cash prizes in the grand drawing will consist of $75, $50 and $25 and several smaller prizes.

A lady in Hiltonia addition reports that she holds the stub for the $10 prize in the drawing of July 21.

Drawings will continue to be held every Saturday night until the week of the picnic and the winning numbers will be displayed every Monday morning. Holders of the winning numbers should report to R. O. Harrison at the Hilltop Bank as soon as they have found their numbers to be the winning ones.

Members of the Hilltop Business Men's association are giving the tickets with every 50c purchase or every 50c received on accounts.

Many merchants have provided boxes or containers in their stores into which the stubs may be placed. All stubs should be deposited before 6 o'clock Saturday in order to be eligible for the drawing to be held on Saturday nights. The main ticket stations are in the following stores: Neuenschwander's Grocery, 2223 W. Broad St.; Hilltop Bank, Park and Broad street; Hauntz Grocery, Hague and Broad; Scott's Shoe Store, Ritz Theatre Bldg.; Purdy's Confectionery, Columbian and Sullivant avenues.

Tennis Tournament Entries Are Called

Tennis entries for the city-wide tennis tournament sponsored by the city recreation department should report by August 15 to the playground supervisors. There will be singles and doubles for boys and girls under 16 years of age. There will be singles and doubles and mixed doubles for all over 15 years.

The horse shoe tournament entries should also report to the playground instructors at this time.

Sewing classes at Glenwood playground will complete their work within the next two weeks and will place it on exhibit in the stores of local merchants. There will be an open day for visitors soon.

Auto Turns Over

Serious injury or death was narrowly escaped Friday evening when the Ford sedan in which Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Smith and small daughter, 201 N. Warren Ave., were riding, turned over on its side at Hague and Steele avenues after being struck by an Overland touring car. The sedan was damaged slightly. No injuries were suffered by the occupants of either car.

Miss Mildred Baker of Huntington, W. Va., is spending the week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hartley, 2731 Steele Ave.

"BOOGERS" IS KILLED; MILDRED IS SAD

Sadness reigns in the heart of Mildred Welch of North Oakley avenue. She is grieving because of the parting of a very dear friend who's name was "Boogers."

"Boogers" was only a little black and white dog but was evidently a little better and a little more appreciated than most dogs. He was struck by an automobile early Monday morning at Broad street and Oakley avenue and died soon after while lying in the street, with Mildred pouring her tears and sobs out over his body stretched on the pavement as passing pedestrians and motorists gathered around. The car that hit "Boogers" did not stop.

Indications are that "Boogers" received proper burial and continues to be missed.

Jean Calland, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Calland, 84 N. Wheatland Ave., was bitten by a cat Thursday while visiting at the home of C. D. Smith in Big Plain. Another small child was also a victim of the enraged animal. The cat was killed by a neighbor.

New Era Ushered in Here With Landing of Air Mail

First Plane Carrying Mail Arrives at 6:18 Wednesday Morning From Cleveland.

Although air mail lines have been operating since 1918 in other sections of the country a new era was ushered in at the Columbus Airport on Sullivant avenue Wednesday morning at 6:18 when the first mail plane of the new Cleveland and Louisville line came down from the skies carrying letters a few hours old from Cleveland and Akron.

Days of the first stage across the mountain, the first ride of the pony express through to the coast and the driving of the last spike in the Union Pacific railroad in 1869 joining the two coasts by rail were recalled as this new era of transportation of mail became a realization in Columbus.

Plane number one of the Continental Air Lines, piloted by William M. McConnell, carried two bags of mail for Columbus from Cleveland and Akron. Two sacks were picked up from here. Postmaster Tibbetts was at the field to greet the first plane. The plane was off the field at 6:25 on its way to Dayton.

Formal opening of the Airport was planned for last night with the landing of the return plane from the south. Several planes were to land at the field with the air mail plane. Postmasters from Louisville, Cincinnati, Dayton and Akron were to be aboard a tri motored Ford plane on their way to Cleveland where they will be the guests of the postmaster there.

Ships on their way to Dayton, Cincinnati and Louisville will stop at the Columbus Airport every day at 6:25 a. m. and on the return trip en route to Akron and Cleveland at 6:45 p. m.

New Rates Effective

With the opening of this new mail route cheaper mail rates are effective. A letter to any point in the United States may be mailed at the rate of five cents for the first ounce and 10 cents for each ounce thereafter.

The following cities will have practically over night service with Columbus by connections made with eastern and western routes: Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Chicago, Detroit, Buffalo, Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

RANDALL FAVORS CHILD PROTECTION

"Love and companionship around the family circle are better guarantees of liberty than standing armies," Cecil J. Randall, Republican candidate for Judge of the Domestic Relations court said when he spoke on Tuesday night before a meeting of friends in the North End.

"American ideals can best be preserved by maintaining the home life on a higher plane," he said. "Home is the cradle of citizenship. The American home is the greatest juvenile court in the world. The majority of the juvenile delinquency cases come from broken homes."

Randall advocates protection of children and prevention of delinquencies. He is a resident of the Hilltop, living at 1989 W. Broad St., and is known to Columbus as its first public defender. At present he is president of the board of education.

Moonlight Dance Is Picnic Feature

In preparing for the big Hilltop picnic to be given at Westgate Park August 22 by the Hilltop Business Men's association the entertainment committee did not overlook the feature of entertainment for the evening. Another moonlight dance will be given to begin at 8 o'clock and continue until about 12 o'clock.

A good orchestra has been hired for the evening and a large section of the street will be roped off for the dance. The paving is new and smooth and will make an ideal outdoor dancing place. The wide streets at the intersections will provide ample space for the dancers. Adequate police protection will be supplied for the evening and the grounds will be well lighted. The dance was well attended last year. There is no charge for the dancing.

Baby Contest

All mothers desiring to enter their babies in the baby contest and parade to be held at the picnic should register at one of the following places either afternoon or evening August 9, 10, or 17: Sulzberger's Store, 2391 W. Broad St.; Dr. J. H. Czatt, 2657 Sullivant Ave., or Dr. J. T. Craddock, 2774 W. Broad St.

Age limits are 6 months to 18 months inclusive.

Plenty of entertainment is to be provided for the children and grown ups during the afternoon. Games of various kinds will be sponsored by the recreation department. Many cash prizes will be given the contest winners. A big treat is in store for every Hilltop boy and girl too. Last year 500 pounds of peanuts were given away.

The basket dinner picnic promises to be a success from all reports. Whole families will turn out for the affair to be held in the shade of the trees of Westgate Park.

Autos Collide

The car driven by Edward Underwood, 523 S. Harris Ave., collided with another at Wheatland avenue and Broad street Sunday. Lawrence Griner, 1306 S. Third St., riding with Underwood, was cut and bruised.

May Continue

Meetings of the Heavenly Scientist association in the tent on the West Broad Street School grounds will probably continue after August 5. Services are held every evening at 8 o'clock and on Sunday at 2:30 and 8 p. m. by Rev. J. Daniel Carrick.

WORK OF THE BIBLE SCHOOLS

Last Friday marked the close of a very successful term of the Hilltop Daily Vacation Bible school and other Bible schools sponsored by Hilltop churches. The enrollment has been larger than ever before and larger teaching staffs have been employed. This all goes to show that the schools have been satisfactory and will continue to be operated in future years.

The combined Bible school sponsored by several Hilltop churches and open to all denominations brings our attention to the fact that it isn't denominationalism that counts so much after all. Doing the right thing for the children of this community was the purpose in the minds of the founders of the school. In this they have been successful.

Prize winning flowers are products of the Hilltop too. Just visit the Hilltop Glad Show on August 13-14 and be convinced.

Property owners in Bexley have been ordered to cut the weeds on their vacant lots. The Hilltop could be improved likewise if some such action was taken.

Tourists may come and tourists may go but they fail to stop at Columbus for want of a tourist camp. Shame on Chris for treating visitors thus.

A bottle thrown into the Caribbean Sea was picked up by W. Hannapin on the west coast of Ireland, after it had traveled 2800 miles. It contained a note requesting it should be returned to William Beebe, who had dropped more than one thousand such bottles during his cruise almost a year ago. Thirty-one have been recovered up to the present time, mostly from Central America.

TO MAKE AN UNUSUAL BASKET PILLOW

To make an unusual cushion in the shape of a basket, an ordinary square pillow may be used as the base. Chalk lines or pencil marks may then be drawn upon it the shape of the basket, and the sides of the pillow sewn on these lines, pressing the feathers inward as the sewing progresses. The sides may then be cut off leaving the pillow in a basket shape.

Gray green or old rose moire silk makes an excellent basis for the cover, its heavy weave suggesting a basket texture. Two yards will be sufficient for the cushion. Strips of dull gold braid sewn onto the moire silk crosswise give an added basket effect.

An effect of overhanging flowers is made by sewing different shades of pale green colored satin ribbon, leaf shaped, upon each other. Full blown flowers at the top are made with rose-colored satin or taffeta, buttonholed with chenille.

Chains of gilt braid form the handles at the side of the basket, and the rings are made of thin curtain rings buttonholed with heavyweight embroidery silk.

The horse obeyed, and the instant he did so the bunch of grass flew to one side, revealing Go Ahead's face, and the sand stretching from it erupted as Go Ahead sprang from it, ran a few feet forward and vaulted to the horse's scrappers, behind his rider.

The first thing the man knew was when, coincident with the shock, he felt a pistol jabbed into his ribs and heard Go Ahead's order, calm but with deadly emphasis, "Get back across the crest, quick, if you want to live."

The man did want to live, and he obeyed instantly. Few men would have hesitated to do so under the circumstances. His horse, reweled deep and hard, swung round and almost vaulted over the crest in half a dozen convulsive bounds, stopping only when he squarely struck the horse of a second laggard who was toiling up the slope, and sent its rider flying from the saddle.

Before Go Ahead's bandit could recover from the shock he felt himself tossed to the ground to join his fallen companion. An instant later both men, struggling upward, found themselves staring into Go Ahead's revolver. "Hands up, boys," said Go Ahead blandly.

The two men obeyed promptly: there was nothing else that they could do. As they lifted their hands Go Ahead whistled and a moment later Stella came flying over the crest, gun in hand.

When she saw the two prisoners she whistled, too, then put up her pistol, and began to dust the penetrating sand out of her clothes. "Well, for the love of Mike," she demanded "were you born lucky or did you learn it in a correspondence school?"

Go Ahead grinned. "Both, I guess," he answered. "I thought I had one house, but I didn't really hope for two. Just collect those chaps' guns; will you, Bob?"

Stella obeyed, willingly enough. She had seen the men's eyes quicken with recognition, and she wanted above all things to prevent their saying any thing that would betray who she was. As she approached, she frowned at the two and shook her head slightly; then, an instant later as she took their guns, she muttered both a plea and a command: "Keep your mouths shut and I'll help you." Then she went over and caught the still trembling horse that had been ridden by the second bandit.

Meanwhile Go Ahead was gesturing to the men. "Hit the trail you came by, boys," he ordered. "Go straight. I'll be right behind you in a minute."

The men faced about and started for the rear. As soon as they turned Go Ahead rose cautiously to the crest mounting it till he could see over it and scan the expanse of the valley.

Then he came back. "Your horse all right, Bob?" he asked.

Stella nodded. "Reckon so," she said. "He's shaken, but he can travel, I guess. See anything of the boys when you looked?"

"Not a thing. They've cleaned disappeared: turned off at the north end of the valley, probably. Let's go while the going is good."

A few bounds of the horses brought them close to the backs of the two prisoners, who were industriously plodding away. "Now, boys," said Go Ahead, "we've got a long walk before us, but it'll be over and done with. See? Now get a move on, quick!" The last word came like a pistol shot.

The men "got a move on" instantly. They were riders, not foot travelers but under Go Ahead's urge they hit and maintained a speed of which they would never have thought themselves capable. They knew that their fate lay in his hands. Up the slope and over the crest that Go Ahead indicated they hurried with scarcely a pause until they were well down on the other side.

Then Go Ahead shouted to slow them down, when they were reasonably out of earshot, in order to rest them and the horses, on which at any moment his and Bob's lives might once more depend, and also that he might talk to the boy at his side.

Long before he had become convinced that Bob had been a member of the bandit gang, but he was also convinced that the boy had definitely broken With it and would probably be willing to talk about it more or less freely. Go Ahead had no intention of breaking the pact that he had made with Fair through Jack Green, either in letter or in spirit, but he did want to know how things had gone at Robbers' Roost since Green had left a month or more before, and particularly he wanted information about his Cousin Stella.

So he began. "Bob," he asked, rather startling, "you know Fair's foster daughter, don't you?"

Stella jumped, far more noticeably than she had when the bullets had begun to whiz past her. "You mean Stella?" she gasped.

"Yes, of course. You must know her."

Stella gasped again, but not because of Go Ahead's assumption that she was familiar with the affairs of the Robbers' Nest gang. In fact, it never occurred to her that he was supposed not to know. It was merely the abruptness of the question that took her aback.

But she answered promptly; it never took Stella long to recover herself. "Yes, I know her," she admitted. "But I didn't know you did."

"I don't. But I'm interested in her all the same. I've heard a good deal about her, first and last, and I'd like to hear more. What sort of a girl is she?"

Scornfully Stella shrugged her shoulders. "Never thought of her as a girl," she sniffed. "She dresses like a boy and acts like a boy and swears like a boy. And she's a lot tougher than most boys." Out of the corners of her eyes Stella watched the effect of her words.

They were not what she had expected. Go Ahead did not look at all surprised or taken aback. "Poor child," he murmured. "Poor child."

Suddenly Stella found herself furiously angry. Like a little tigress she turned on Go Ahead. "You'd better not let her hear you call her that," she grated. "She's a darned lot better than your Eastern girls that can't do anything but flirt and polish their fingernails."

Go Ahead glanced at the angry youngster and laughed delightedly. "I beg your and her pardons, Bob," he said. "I hadn't the least intention of offending you or her. I was only thinking how much she'd 'eat.'"

"Humph. Ever think how much she's had?" Stella's anger was fading but it was not yet gone.

"Eh? . . . By George, that's an idea. No, I hadn't thought of that. Now that you suggest it, I guess she's had a lot of things that a lot of girls would give a lot to have had. I don't doubt that she's enjoyed her life. She must have enjoyed it if she didn't hate it."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, she's led a boy's life, as you said. Some girls like that just as most boys do. But those that don't like it usually hate it, especially when they begin to be grown up. Stella's eighteen, isn't she?"

"Maybe."

"Well, we're all Father Adam's children when we're young, boys and girls alike. We all like to run and shout and kick our legs. But after a while we begin to change, and part of us discover that, they're Eve's daughters. Then they want another life, unless, as I say, they're really boys at heart. Then they love it. If Stella does—"

"She does."

"That's what I understood. That's why I said 'poor child.' You see, Bob, we can't stay eighteen or twenty-one forever. We grow up, and these mannish girls have a dreadful time when they have to shift their views. I guess Adam was a hunter and a farmer all his life, and his sons take after him. But I'll bet that Eve got mighty tired of the hunting game sooner or later and longed for a home where she could bring up little Cain and Abel; and her daughters sooner or later take after her—thank God."

"I don't know what your driving at," Stella's tones were cold.

"No? I thought you would. Stella will get tired of the life she's leading. Probably she'll realize all in a minute that she's sick to death of it and that she wants to lead a real girl's life. And then, when she tries to lead it, she's very likely to discover that she isn't fitted for it. She won't want to go back to the old life and she won't be satisfied with the new one. Of course, it might be different if she met some one whom she loved and who really loved her—like you—"

"Like me!" An emotion that might have been rage shook Stella from head to foot. "Me love Stella Fair? Me! You—you—you— Oh!—" But she choked and became inarticulate.

"Good Heavens!" Go Ahead stared in utter astonishment. "What the devil! Look here, old man, you must have misunderstood me. Forget it; I'm liable to shoot off my mouth too much when I get somebody at my mercy." Go Ahead reached out his arm, as a touch of his bridle sent his horse crushing against Stella's and passed it over her shoulders. "There, there, boy. Don't hold it against me, whatever it was. I like you. I never met a boy I liked so much at such short acquaintance." With a final pat he started to withdraw his arm.

With a Final Pat He Started to Withdraw His Arm.

But Stella went with it. Instinctively she swayed toward him turning in her saddle as she did so, buried her hot face on his shoulder, and burst into a storm of sobs.

LOCAL INTEREST IN PRIMARIES WAXES AS DATE APPROACHES

Candidates Briefly Discussed for Benefit of Busy Voter—That He Who Votes May Know.

By MARSHALL ROBIE

As the date set for the Republican and Democratic primaries approaches interest in the selection of candidates to carry the standard of their respective parties increases. The names of 90 Republicans and 58 Democrats will be presented to the voters for 33 state and county nominations. The Hilltop Record gives below a brief summary of some of these candidates.

GRAHAM P. HUNT

Prohibition on a common sense basis, modification of the Volstead law, and honesty by candidates for office, are advocated in the platform of Graham P. Hunt, candidate for the Democratic "short term" nomination for the United States Senate, made public this week.

Mr. Hunt, in announcing his candidacy, declared that voters have a right to know, before they vote, what all candidates stand for, and announced his own complete support of the program of Gov. Al. Smith, and the platform of the Democratic party.

"Temperance, rather than prohibition," is his own description of his stand on the question.

"No one seriously wants to see the return of the saloon. I am opposed to that myself," Mr. Hunt declared. "I do want an arrangement on the use of liquor that can be enforced. The pretense of enforcement we have had during the last seven years has weakened respect for all law, has weakened the cause of temperance, has resulted in vast economic loss, in higher taxes, and in a multitude of evils, bootleggers, hijackers, hip-flasks, roadside petting parties, unknown in the days before so-called prohibition."

The Ohio primaries August 14, will be the first real test of the strength of Gov. Smith. It is generally conceded. Mr. Hunt is running on the principles advocated by Gov. Smith. A heavy Democratic vote for Hunt will be a strong indication of the party's endorsement of its own action at the national convention.

CYRUS LOCHER

For five years Director of Commerce in Governor Donahey's cabinet, United States Senator Cyrus Locher is a candidate for re-election to the Senate subject to the Democratic primaries.

He was born 48 years ago on a farm at Bluffton, Putnam county, was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan, studied law at Western Reserve, and practiced in Cleveland where he now lives. He served two terms as assistant prosecuting attorney, was elected twice as prosecuting attorney and served as the law director of the city of Cleveland under Baker.

CHARLES V TRUAX

Holding the largest portfolio in Governor Donahey's cabinet for six years Charles V. Truax as Director of Agriculture has supervision over ten departments including fish and game, dairy and food, feeds and fertilizer, animal and plant industry, markets and marketing, crop reporting and the state fair. Director Truax was born at Sycamore, 1887, is married and has three children of school age. He has been both farmer and editor. He is affiliated with the Methodist church and all branches of Masonry. Subject to the Democratic primaries he is a candidate for the full term U. S. Senate.

JOHN W. BRICKER

Two terms as special counsel in the Attorney General's office gained for John W. Bricker an experience which well qualifies him for the duties of Attorney General for which office he is candidate subject to the Republican Primaries. During this time—four years, from 1923 to 1927—he tried on behalf of the State 150 cases. One hundred and thirty of these were before the Supreme Court.

In this connection it is pointed out by friends of the candidate that three Judges now on the bench of the Supreme Court signed his petition of candidacy; as well as Federal Judge Hough, Mayor Thomas, City Solicitor Charles Leach, Judge John R. King, Phil S. Bradford, past president of the Franklin County Bar association, and Dr. W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State university.

Born on a farm in Madison County 35 years ago, Bricker came to Columbus at an early age. He was graduated from Ohio State university with the class of 1916 and admitted to the bar the following year. He is a world war veteran having served in several branches of the service for 18 months and was honorably discharged from the coast artillery at the close of the war. He is married and lives at 2342 Fremont road. The Common Pleas Judges of Franklin County have unanimously endorsed his candidacy.

EDGAR ERVIN

Born on a farm in Meigs county, Edgar Ervin, Republican candidate for the nomination of Lieutenant Governor, taught school for eleven years and practiced law for fifteen years. From 1905 to 1910 he was a member of the Ohio Legislature, and for five years he acted as attorney trust examiner for the State Department of Banks. For two years he was vice president and trust officer of the Citizens Trust & Savings bank. He is married, has six children and lives at 195 Fourteenth Ave.

FRED W. POSTLE

For nearly 16 years Fred W. Postle, candidate for Congress, lived on the Hilltop. He served on Council in 1914-15 and again from 1924 to 1927 and voted for every west side improvement including the Westgate park purchase, sewer relief for the Hilltop, bridge in Eldon avenue playground and many new streets south of Sullivant avenue. As a member of the Charter Commission he helped draft present form of city government. He was born on a farm at Alton, Ohio, and has practiced law for 21 years.

FRED J. MILLER

Fred J. Miller, Presiding Judge of the Municipal Court of Columbus and candidate for Congress from the Twelfth Congressional District of Ohio, has long been active in Republican politics and is a staunch supporter of Herbert Hoover, candidate for president.

Miller, born and reared on a farm, a graduate of North High school and Ohio State University Law school, was appointed as one of the four judges in the Columbus Municipal court in December, 1922, to succeed Judge Frank Ruth. Until then he had been engaged in law practice in Columbus except for time spent in the army during the World war. He was elected as Presiding Judge of the same court in November, 1925, to fill the unexpired term of Judge John E. Seidel, who resigned.

He was re-elected Presiding Judge.

His active part in the Hoover campaign for the presidential nomination elected him as a delegate to the Kansas City convention. It was while attending the convention that he was urged to announce his candidacy for Congress at the primaries of August 14.

He is active in Aladin Temple of Shrine, York Lodge, F. & A. M., B. P. O. Elks, Loyal Order of Moose, Odd Fellows, Eagles, Columbus Athletic club, University club and many other civic and fraternal organizations.

CARL H. VALENTINE

Born and raised in Columbus Carl H. Valentine, Democratic candidate for Congress, spent six years in railroad and railway mail service and practiced law for 18 years. He is married and lives in Upper Arlington.

COL. WILLIAM H. DUFFY

Identified with the material growth and physical improvement of Columbus, manifest in the construction of the storage dam, the city hall, the proposed safety building and many miles of paved streets, Col. William H. Duffy, the master-builder, is again presented to the voters of Franklin County at the Republican Primaries for re-election to the State Central Committee. As Director of Public Service, Duffy is responsible for the new city hall than which there is none finer in the country. He worked over the plans with the architects and personally supervised every detail of construction. To him credit is largely due for Columbus being known as one of the best paved cities in the world.

Politically active since 1898, it will be remembered that Col. Duffy first came prominently before the public eye in the Roosevelt campaign of 1904 when he was associated with Chas. Dick, then State Chairman. He conducted Mayor Thomas' successful campaign in 1919 as chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee and has since been identified as a leader in city politics. In 1920 he was first appointed Director of Public Service which office he now holds.

A veteran of two wars Col. Duffy enjoys a host of friends of all political faiths and is known to practically every one in Columbus. Members of the State Central Committee to which he seeks re-election serve without pay. The office is an honorary one and it is predicted that the Colonel will receive a record complimentary vote at the forthcoming Republican Primaries.

LOUIS F. MILLER

In Louis F. Miller and Mrs. William H. Wiley the Democrats of Franklin County will find ample ability to represent them on the State Central committee. The names will be presented to the voters at the Democratic Primaries August 14, and it is stated among those who watch the political trend that they will receive liberal recognization at the polls. Serving as Fire Marshall since 1923 Miller first came into public view as Deputy Sheriff and later as Chief Deputy U. S. Marshall under President Wilson. He now serves the Democratic party as State Executive Committeeman.

MRS. AGNES B. DICKINSON

Among the five candidates for state legislature to be nominated at the primary, August 14, Republicans of Franklin county will have the privilege of including a distinguished woman lawyer, Mrs. Agnes B. Dickinson.

Mrs. Dickinson is a graduate of the College of Law, Ohio State university. She is now engaged in practice. Before beginning the study of law, she was engaged in newspaper and publicity work and associated with the secondary division of the Ohio Sunday School association. Mrs. Dickinson was president of Kappa Beta Pi law sorority and of Women's Pan-Professional Council at the university. She has served as executive secretary of the Franklin County League of Women Voters. She is a member and former president of the Women's Association of Commerce, the W. C. T. U., the American Association of University Women, Delta Omicron Music sorority the Columbus Bar association and numerous other organizations.

MARK S. EVANS

He attended Columbus public schools, was graduated from Ohio State university with the degrees of B. A. and LL. B. and practices law. He is affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church and Humboldt Lodge F. & A. M.

Republican Primaries August 14th

KENNETH L. GOULD

The war interrupted a successful banking career for Kenneth L. Gould, Republican candidate of state representative nomination, who has had seven years experience in that line. He joined the colors and after hostilities had ceased began the study of law at Ohio State university. He has practiced for four years in Columbus, is married and has one son. Among his supporters are: Phil S. Bradford, Charles Beck, C. C. Crabbe, C. L. Corkwell and James A. White.

JERRY S. McKINLEY

Born on a farm just west of Columbus, Jerry S. McKinley is a candidate for re-election to the Ohio Legislature. Last term he served on the Building and Loan, Civil Service and Public Parks and Building committees and was present at every session of the legislature. A business man at the head of a chain of stores for thirty years McKinley is well qualified to hold office. He is past president of the Postmasters League numbering 42,000 postmasters.

HENRY W. METCALF

Henry H. Metcalf, attorney at law, is a candidate for one of the five Republican nominations for State Representative. He is a World war veteran and member of American Legion. He was educated in Columbus public schools, North High school and Ohio State university, is married, has one son of school age and lives in Grandview.

GRANT P. WARD

Against a field of 17 opponents at the Republican Primaries two years ago, Grant P. Ward won the nomination for representative and was duly elected the following November. His name will again be presented to the Republican voters on August 14, for re-election to the same office. During the last session of the Legislature Ward served on the Finance, Utilities, Elections, Reference committees—an unusual record for a first term member.

Ward was born at Wellston, Jackson county. Like so many others who have achieved a notable place in public favor, he began life as a school teacher—establishing a fine record at Crestview and Hubbard schools in Columbus. He was educated at Ohio State university where he received both his A. B. and LL. B. For ten years he was scout, assistant football coach and director of intramural athletics at State. This latter department he developed to the point where over 80 per cent of the students participated in some form of athletics.

Kinsman Lodge of Masons, B. P. O. Elks and the American Legion carry his name on the roll. A World war veteran, Grant is well known through the county and his friends predict an easy victory based on a fine record of achievement.

WM. C. WENDT

Wm. C. Wendt, who has served in the Ohio Legislature on the Welfare section of the Finance committee, dealing with penal and correctional State institutions, Reference, Public Health and Roads committees, is again a candidate for re-election in the Republican primaries. He was born in Columbus, educated in the public schools and graduated in pharmacy at Ohio State university. For 30 years he has been president and general manager of Wendt-Bristol Co., is a member of the Congregational church, B. P. O. Elks and the Exchange club.

His legislative program includes a reduction of state expenses by increasing production in penal institutions and just cutting down the overhead.

CECIL J. RANDALL

Long a resident of the Hilltop, Cecil J. Randall, candidate for Judge of Common Pleas Court, division of domestic relations, believes that children should have first attention in consideration of home difficulties. A product of the public schools Randall holds two degrees from Ohio State university. He has practiced law in Columbus for the past 16 years, is married and has two sons and two daughters of school age. Columbus' first public defender he has served on the Board of Education for four and a half years and now holds the honorary position of president.

JUDGE MAHAFFY

On January 1, 1930, Franklin County will have a new branch of the Common Pleas Court, known as the "Division of Domestic Relations," created by the State Legislature to handle all domestic and juvenile cases.

The Judge, who will preside over this important division, will be chosen at the November election.

Judge Mahaffy is a candidate for this office, subject to the Republican Primaries, Tuesday, August 14, 1928.

His education was acquired in the public schools and Ohio State University Law school. His experience of seven years on the Municipal Court bench together with a sincere purpose humanely and fairly to administer the duties of this office qualify him to be the nominee of the Republican party, say his supporters.

JOHN M. LEWIS

Those on the Hilltop who attend Council meeting are familiar with the well known voice of John M. Lewis candidate without opposition for Probate Judge and resident of the West Side for 28 years. Born in Grandville, Ohio, 1875, Lewis was graduated from Denmison with the class of '97; admitted to the bar in Iowa in 1898 and taught in Central university, Carlisle, Iowa, while studying law. He came home and practiced law in Columbus ever since. In 1923 he was elected to Council and is Chairman of the Judiciary Committee. He is affiliated with the Columbus Lodge F. & A. M., Columbus Chapter Royal Arch Masons, Columbus Commandery, Knights Templar, Scioto Consistory Aladin Shrine, AIU and Modern Woodmen.

HARRY T. PAUL

For 25 years of his 43 years residence in the County, Harry T. Paul was employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad in the accounting and fuel departments—a record of which any man might be justly proud. His subsequent business and public activities including the management of a successful transfer and storage business and three and a half years as Chief Deputy in the Sheriff's office are also justifiable cause for a natural but reserved pride. All this fades like last summer's straw hat, however, when the discussion turns to one Master Richard Tolbert Paul, the Deputy's nine-months-old grandson.

Harry T. Paul is well known in fraternal circles being affiliated with several Masonic orders including Knights Templar, and the Shrine. He is a 32nd Degree Mason and Past Monarch of Achbar Grotto. His name also appears on the rosters of the Knights of Pythias, Dokkies, B. P. O. Elks, Eagles, Moose, Modern Woodmen, Woodmen of the World, Aero Club of Columbus, Lyons club, Columbus Automobile club. He is a trustee of the Buckeye Republican club.

The office of Sheriff is the most sought after County office this year, but according to prevailing opinion among those in a position to know, Paul stands the best chance to receive the Republican nomination at the primaries on August 14. There is no telling what may happen but at press time Paul is out in front of a field of six worthy contenders.

FRED. J. HEER

While the printing business founded and developed by Fred J. Heer is one of the biggest in Central Ohio, it does not by half represent the total of his life's activities. A foremost figure in church, educational, banking and political circles, "F. J.," as he is affectionately known to his friends, is interested in everything that makes for better and cleaner American life. The Spectator

"The weather is the most talked of thing in the world."

HOT WEATHER

A walk around the block during these warm days will bring at least twenty good-sized complaints about the heat. They range anywhere from "Warm enough for you?" to "If it gets much hotter I'll die." People begin to think you are under the weather if you fail to mention that ever present fact that it is hot.

The temperature is relatively low here though, after all. The air is cooled by occasional breezes and rains. We fail to remember that other sections of the world have more reason to feel the heat than we do.

If it is winter time, we complain of the cold, and now we talk of the heat. So there is more truth than fiction in saying the weather is the most talked of thing in the world. Regardless of the season the weather is a good topic in most any embarrassing situation.

VACATION TRIPS

Captain Sentry was telling me of his vacation and ended by saying, "Everything has changed for me since I took that trip. It does a world of good for a man to leave his everyday routine and mix with different people and different scenes. Thinking of the same things every day deadens the brain. I feel like new, now."

After all vacation trips are just about the same to a man as an overhauling is to an automobile. And Captain Sentry points out that we are about like school children. The business man or the laborer needs a change and a period of play. More efficient work is the final result of a vacation.

WHAT TO DO

To make our club more versatile we have in our number a college student, Jack Wordley, attending the local university and working during the summer to gather enough shekles to meet the expenses of belonging to a fraternity and enjoying some of the many other pastimes of a typical college student.

Jack is industrious enough it seems but often becomes dissatisfied when he thinks along the lines of what he wishes to do in the future. He was telling Professor Tittle a few days ago that he believed he was wasting a lot of valuable time by working every summer to make his school expenses. He believes that every young fellow should gain a lot of experiences by travelling and seeing the world.

Says Jack, "It's a hard job to tell what to do. Since I have planned to enter journalistic work and am studying toward that end I feel that the experiences gained by travelling over the country will be highly valuable to me some day. If I should take to the road and see these things now I would be compelled to miss a part of my school and would be delayed in being graduated.

"On the other hand if I work now and have a degree within another two years I will be headed for a job immediately and begin building in another direction. Then I will begin to have responsibilities beyond what I have at present and will be unable to take these jaunts that appeal so strongly now."

DECIDING ON A CAREER

Professor Tittle, being well acquainted with the workings of young people's minds says there is only one thing unusual in the case of Jack. He is reasoning his case of wanderlust and a future out, whereas most students jump for the easiest thing for the present.

This matter of deciding on a career is a great problem for the college student. Professor Tittle says that he has observed that it is especially difficult for girls. The recent education movement for women has been highly responsible for the great number of women in business and the professions today. College education for girls is no longer just a simple process of being enrolled in an institution for a period of four years and receiving a degree for satisfactory work. The girl must consider what she would like to be and like to do after she is out of school. Most all professions and businesses are open to women in this century and the responsibilities of making improvements in the present system are on their shoulders, too.

But even so the young lady who is about to enter college and specialize in her work makes a stumbling block out of the question "What course is best?"

"And the appointed day for the feasting under shade trees and on the soft grass arrived. The gasoline buggy puttered forth unto said shady spot loaded with paper plates, napkins, bananas, oranges, friend fowl, pastries ice cream freezer, kids and other branches of the family tree. And with the opening of the last can of olives as the food was spreadeth out on the face of mother earth all were set to partake. But lo, out of the windows of the sky tiny drops of moisture came down to mingle with the food. And it came to pass that after much excitement and in the exposure the remaining bits of picnic goodies were devoured at home, for it is spoken "Picnic and ye shall have rain."

Oldest Oakland Employe Drives Oldest Oakland

The oldest employe at the Oakland Motor Car company factory in Pontiac, Mich., appropriately is the owner and driver of what is believed to be the oldest Oakland car in daily service.

He is W. E. Noble, 74, who has served the Oakland Motor Car company and its predecessor, the Pontiac Buggy company, for upwards of 34 years. He is the connecting link between the quiet horse-drawn days when Pontiac was a sleepy little village on an old Indian trail, and the dynamic automotive present.

For that matter, his car almost qualifies as a similar link. It dates back to 1913.

Back in 1894 Noble was master trimmer for the Pontiac Buggy company. He trimmed buggies until 1907 when E. M. Murphy, president of the Pontiac Buggy company, deciding that after all there might be something to this horseless carriage idea, set one little building aside as an automobile factory. Mr. Noble was transferred to automobile trimming. The first Oakland was a two-cylinder, assembled affair with daily production limited to not more than two cars.

"I worked on this old car of mine when it was built back in 1912. She's about 16 years old now, but she runs good. I took the top off eight or ten years ago and never put it back. Always did cater to the open car.

"How many miles on her? No idea at all. As I recollect, when the speedometer stopped working somewhere along in 1920 she had 80,000 or 90,000 miles on her. Since then I haven't paid much attention to the miles.

"When will I get a new car? Oh, I've got one for the family. Me, I'd rather drive the old bus. We sort of seem to understand each other."

AIRPORT P. O. MAY BE ESTABLISHED

Bids Asked for New Postoffice Building on West Side.

Heaviness of the air mail may cause a branch post office to be established on the grounds of the Columbus Airport on Sullivant avenue in the announcement of Assistant Postmaster Green. CAR HEARING SET FOR SEPTEMBER 10

Councilman Green Proposes Four Changes in Lines; May Get Light.

Final hearing on the rerouting of the West Broad and Cemeteries cars will be held at the city council meeting September 10. The proposal for rerouting was made Monday night in a resolution presented by Councilman Green. Four lines will be affected by his resolution if adopted.

The stand of the Hilltop Business Men's association in regard to the matter will be presented at the hearing.

BASKET DINNER PICNIC FEATURE

Families Urged to Take Basket Dinner to Westgate Park, August 22.

Pickles, olives and sandwiches will be all in style at the Hilltop picnic to be held at Westgate park Wednesday, Aug. 22. A change in the manner of conducting the picnic is in store for this year and the committee has planned a big basket dinner to be served under the trees of the park.

First registration for the baby contest to be held at the annual Hilltop picnic will be today. Mothers may enter their babies at any of the following places either afternoon or evening: Dr. J. T. Craddock, 2774 W. Broad St.; Dr. J. H. Cratt, 2057 Sullivant Ave.; Sulzberger's Store, 2391 W. Broad St. Babies from six to 18 months inclusive are elegible. Another registration will be held tomorrow and again on August 17.

Every family of the Hilltop is urged to be present with baskets loaded down with good food to be served at 6 p. m. This does not mean that all the dinners will be laid out for people to help themselves. Each family will provide its own dinner and serve only those of their own group or friends. It is meant that the picnic shall be an outing for the whole family and that they should be on the grounds all afternoon and evening. The many acres of shade provide ample space for picnic dinners. There will be plenty of fresh water on the grounds and soft drinks will be served at the stands. There are two rest rooms in the park.

There will be plenty of entertainment during the afternoon and evening.

Cooper for Governor

Dear Friends,

Do we stop to consider the importance of the primary vote? Too many of us have the careless way of letting a few voters nominate and elect the men who represent our government.

All of us desire to be loyal and patriotic citizens, but are we loyal and patriotic if we do not vote at the primaries? We all wish to do our duty to ourselves and our government, but fail in that duty if we neglect to support our government by voting at the primaries.

It is there we should choose the man who can serve us best. The past record of Myers Y. Cooper, the Republican candidate for Governor, qualifies him. Let us grasp the opportunity of getting his services by supporting him at the primaries, August 14, 1928.

Very sincerely yours,
—Adv. Charlotte Hook Truitt.

Luckily the horses moved together for a few strides, then drew apart very slowly, giving Stella time to regain her seat. Go Ahead let her go sullingly.

"You poor kid," he said. "You've had a dreadful day, haven't you?"

Stella straightened up like a steel spring that had been bent.

"Dreadful?" she cried. "Wh-what do you mean? This has been the most wonderful day in all my life." Unmistakably she meant it.

Go Ahead gasped. He did not understand. Even if he had had the key he might not have understood. But he did understand that the boy was hysterical and needed to be quieted down.

So he shifted his ground. "Well," he asked, "aren't you going to tell me any more about Stella?"

Stella told. But what she told was not what she would have told ten minutes before. Her mood had shifted utterly. No longer did she try to shock Go Ahead by tales of Stella's toughness, nor to astonish him by magnifying her courage and skill. Instead she racked her brain to recall things that brought out the feminine side of her character.

And Go Ahead ate up all she said. "She's got a mighty loyal friend in you, Bob," he said, at last. "I like what you've told me, and I like the way you're told it. Now tell me something about yourself. You've left the band for good and all, haven't you?"

"Yes."

Stella had been wondering at the "Well, what are you going to do?" back of her head about that very thing. Already she had made up her mind that Go Ahead was altogether different from any other man she had ever known and that she would go East with him. Sooner or later, too, she would of course confess her identity. But she was not quite ready to do this yet; for a time at least she wanted to keep her secret—her vivid imagination conjuring up many possibilities that would be exciting and would open the way to no end of fun. So she countered.

"Huuuph!" she answered. "I haven't made up my mind, quite. Where're you heading for now? This is the way to Loboville."

"That's what I figured it out to be. I'm going to take my prisoners in and turn them over to the sheriff."

"What! Why! Good Gracious!" Stella swore her big oath. "Don't you know that Barker's the sheriff and that he's the man you—"

Go Ahead's eyes twinkled. "Sure I know it," he answered. "And I'm having a lot of fun trying to imagine what he'll look like when I turn his own men over to him."

Stella nearly shouted with glee. "Ohhhh!" she cried. "Won't it be great to see his face?"

Go Ahead turned in his saddle and regarded the girl gravely. "I hadn't exactly calculated on taking you with me," he said. "I'm told that there's a good place called Bridget's in Loboville where you might wait for me—"

Instantly Stella exploded in the language that she had heard about her all her life, and demanded furiously. "I want to know what you've seen me do today to make you think that I'm that sort of a four-flusher?"

"I don't—"

"Yes, you do! And I want to know why. I want to know quick, too."

Go Ahead threw up his hands. "I apologize," he said humbly. "You're true blue and all right, Bob. I never doubted it for a minute. I just felt somehow that I oughtn't to let a kid like you risk yourself, especially when the cards were stacked against him. Forgive me." He held out his hand.

Willingly Stella grasped it. Tears theretofore practically unknown to her, welled to her eyes, and she strove desperately to wink them back. "I couldn't stand having you think I was a da-da-d—a coward," she gulped.

Go Ahead's own eyes were a little misty. "You needn't ever worry about that, Bob," he said. "Coward would be the very last thing I'd ever think of calling you. Here,"—impulsively he burst out with what he had intended especially to keep secret—"I'll tell you something. I'm a cousin of Stella Fair's, and I'm out here to take her East with me. But I've got to get her away from Robbers' Roost—or wait till Fair sends her to me at Bridget's—"

"Bridget's!" This was Green's plan; Stella knew nothing of it.

"Yes, I don't know how long it'll all take—not long, I guess. And I'd be mighty glad if you could stick around till I get her and then go East with me and her. You—you'll be a big man some day if you'll come."

Stella bowed her head over her horse's neck. "No," she murmured, "I'll never be a big man. But I'll stick around till you're ready, all the same."

CHAPTER VIII

The chase by the bandits had followed an irregular course, leading at first southwest, then west, then south, with the result that some two hours after Go Ahead and Stella had shaken off their pursuers they found themselves at the crest of the last swell of the series that rose to the hills behind them.

Here in the scant shadow of two or three mesquite bushes that helped to hide them from possible foes Go Ahead halted his party, ostensibly to give the prisoners a rest but actually to give Barker as much time as possible to get back to town.

"I'd like to surprise J. B. as much as I can, Bob," he explained, "and I can't do it if I get to his town first, for somebody's sure to tell him I'm there before I see him. 'Rush a man off his feet' is a pretty good rule to go by. So we'll wait and let him get in if he's going to do it."

Stella wrinkled her brows doubtfully. "What makes you think he's going there today?" she asked. "More likely he's still hunting for you, and he wouldn't expect you at Loboville. He'd know I'd warn you away from there, and he'd look somewhere else."

"That's the way I figured it out.

A Frank Talk
WITH Republican Voters

(BY H. E. BARTHMAN)

THE government of Franklin County is a big business institution, requiring millions of dollars of taxpayers' money every year to maintain.

Voters and taxpayers should be vitally interested in how THEIR MONEY is spent and their government run.

As a County Commissioner it has been my business to supervise the spending of YOUR money.

I am asking another term as Commissioner on my record as YOUR PUBLIC SERVANT.

Let me give you a few reasons why you should support me.

It has always been my purpose to faithfully discharge the duties of this important office. I therefore solicit your support upon my record of accomplishments as your County Commissioner and if successful, pledge to give to the Citizens of Franklin County the same faithful, impartial, and efficient service that has characterized my administration in the past.

In the administration of the affairs of this office I have catered to no cliques or individuals who profit by public moneys.

I have tried consistently to protect the public treasury. By my vote, as County Commissioner, I forced the saving to the taxpayers of more than One Million Dollars ($1,000,000), which had been voted for public purposes.

I have insisted that every county employee should give a dollar's worth of service for a dollar's worth of pay, and have consistently opposed and voted against dozens of unwarranted salary increases.

I have voted on every occasion to hold down the budget and thereby keep the tax rate from being increased.

I started the fight in Ohio to abolish the old-time custom of county sheriffs profiting from the feeding of jail prisoners. When I started this fight the sheriff of Franklin County was receiving 70 cents a day for boarding each prisoner, when investigation disclosed that it was costing him less than 15 cents a day. At that time I forced a reduction in Franklin County to the legal minimum of 45 cents a day. Later, I was instrumental in having a bill introduced in the General Assembly which became a law, providing that the sheriffs of Ohio shall feed prisoners at cost. The records will disclose that this action resulted in saving thousands of dollars of the taxpayers' money each year.

I have worked tirelessly for good roads for Franklin County. Today we have more miles and better roads than any county in Ohio, if not in the nation. In the building of these roads I have insisted on getting a dollar's worth of road for every dollar expended.

If I have been the kind of County Commissioner you yourself would be, if you were in my shoes, then I feel I have a right to your support in the Republican Primaries. I will appreciate your support, and pledge you that if nominated and re-elected, I will give the county the same kind of service that I have in the past.

RANDALL'S CANDIDACY

On next Tuesday voters of two major political parties will nominate candidates for state and county offices. Nomination by primaries being used in lieu of the former methods of nomination by caucus or convention, thus giving the electors of the state the opportunity of naming the candidates to be voted on at the general election in November.

The most important office in the county for which a candidate will be nominated is that of Judge of the Court of Domestic Relations, which has to do with the future of not only the adult but with the influence of the future citizens of the county—the children.

Cecil J. Randall, attorney, residing at 1989 W. Broad St., is a man whose integrity, ability and experience has well fitted him to administer the affairs of this important office, we believe better than any other candidate for the nomination.

Randall was the first Public Defender of this city, and at present is president of the Board of Education, now serving his second term. His record in both these public offices has been clean cut and above censure.

Residents of this section should feel it a great honor to have Randall nominated for this office next Tuesday. However Randall does not base his candidacy on friendship, but on his ability and a sincere desire to administer the affairs of the Court of Domestic Relations in a fair and impartial manner.

Randall's nomination next Tuesday will mean that a man of ability, experience and integrity will be the candidate for Judge of the Court of Domestic Relations of Franklin County on the Republican ticket at the general elections in November.

STREET CAR SQUABBLES

A sectional fight is in progress as the squabble over street car routes continues. Main-Neil cars should run on High street is the decision handed down by council and with it comes a plea from the West Side and Hilltop that the West Broad and Cemeteries cars be put back on High street. But the Mt. Vernon avenue merchants object to the plan and ask that the cars remain as they are.

It is generally understood that a distribution of the cars over the business districts of the downtown area is desirable from the standpoint of city-wide progress. But the people of this district base their fight on the fact that North Side merchants claim Front street to be unsafe for women and children. At first this appears to be a slam directly in the face of Hilltop people but on second consideration it is not as bad as it appears.

Whereas the West Broad cars are running on Front street at present they do not run in the section referred to by the North Side people. Front street from Broad to Spring is becoming an up-to-date business district but we question the district around Maple street and the market. In truth there is no basis here for wanting our cars back on High street.

WHERE IS OUR LIBRARY

"Leave a thing to be done by the city and it is practically dead," has been a saying often turned to when municipal enterprizes were being discussed. We have a good instance of the same thing here at home.

A new building has been erected for the housing of the new branch library at Hague and Broad. It has been completed for several weeks but there is no sign of activity yet. Months after the appropriation was made by council to provide for the branches we continue to have no library.

Now that council has been convinced that Front street is unsafe for women and children of the North Side, would it not be well for council and the North Side interests to see that Front street is cleaned up.

About the hardest thing to face in a community is the problem of working with people who persist in believing the other person wrong at all times.

The people who always complain about the way other people do things aren't often found trying to do them better.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

Dear Sir: Considerable discussion and I fear ill feeling has been created by the action of city council last week in the rerouting of cars.

There certainly is a demand for the rerouting of cars through the business district and I hope it may speedily be accomplished and while I feel that council should have given the proposed rerouting of the Main-Neil cars via Front street a fair trial I do not believe it should cause any sectional feeling since they saw fit to rescind their previous action.

It is true that the people of the West Side are inconvenienced to some extent by the present routing of West Side cars, yet it was stated by council members at the time the change was made that "this was the first step in a general rerouting of all cars of the city."

Instead of the West Side people bearing any malice toward the people of any other section of the city, I believe they should use every legitimate means to see that council carries out the rerouting plan as proposed two years ago, or give all street car lines access to High street without the inconvenience now existing on some of the lines.

Harmony.

To the Editor:

I have been interested in following the street car situation here and especially so since the Hilltop and the West Side have been drugged through the dust by the North Siders and by city council during the past week.

I have reference to the action taken by council when they ordered the Main Neil cars back on High street, after the North Side business men and other associations claimed that Front street was unsafe for their women and children. This has all turned out to be a slam right in the face of the Hilltop and West Side. Does this mean anything other than that the North end people are better than those from the Hilltop?

When it comes to picking the best section of the city I feel that the Hilltop will stand up with any in the city. I am maintaining that the people of the Hilltop are as good as those of any other section of the city.

It was probably an oversight on the part of those who wanted the cars back on High street to use the argument they did. In truth they were only looking for their own business interests and could not stand to part with any of the High street traffic.

Since the Main-Neil cars have been ordered back on High street I feel that the West Broad cars should also be rerouted around High street and down Broad street. We should feel that we are as deserving of the High street route as any other section of the city.

A Reader.

And it so happened that there were some who ried the talked of fad and preached its alue for the sake of comfort and economy. But in the same city there were designers and garment makers who realized the loss to be created by such a fashion. But with the presentation of the silver goblets to the winning shavers there was much consternation in the ranks of the maters. SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

BACK TO METHUSELAH

Bernard Shaw, the Irish dramatist and paradoxical philosopher, in his book "Getting Back to Methuselah," puts forward the theory that human beings could live a thousand years, or even three thousand years, if they had a mind to.

He points out that nobody has ever explained why a parrot should live ten times as long as a dog, while a turtle is almost immortal.

On the other hand, he contends that even the cleverest and most experienced of men are mere children when they die.

So he comes to the conclusion that among the matters apparently changeable at will is the duration of the individual life.

He calls the great Weismann as a witness.

That biologist pointed out that death was not an eternal condition of life, but an expedient introduced to provide for continual renewal of the race without overcrowding.

Men, according to Mr. Shaw, don't live long enough for the simple reason that they have made up their minds to decay and die at a certain time.

But if a race has the power to make a mistake, it also has the power to remedy it.

So that if man now fixes the term of his existence, say at three score years and ten, there is no reason why he should not fix it at three hundred or three thousand. He might even go further and place a "circumstantial selection limit."

That is to say he would go on living until some fatal accident would put an end to him.

The Shaw theory, whether it is to be taken seriously or not, is in curious contradiction to that put forward by Sir William Osler, the celebrated Canadian physician, some years ago.

He held, in spite of all the evidence to the contrary, that a man never did any really original work after forty, and should be put in a lethel chamber at sixty.

This did not prevent Osler from resigning his chair at Johns Hopkins in 1904, when he was fifty-five, and accepting the Regius Professorship of Medicine at Oxford.

The success which he achieved in that place ought to have caused him a great deal of worry because it destroyed his own theory of human utility.

WILLIAM H. EVANS

William H. Evans is the farmer candidate for the General Assembly on the Republican ticket. He has been the president of the Farmers' Union for 20 years, and through his influence has made that organization a big factor in all legislation that pertains to the interest of the farmers and taxpayers of Franklin county.

He attended O. S. U. and graduated from the University of Michigan. For a number of years he taught school in the rural districts, having acted as superintendent of the Perry township schools for three years.

Since the farmers of Franklin county have not elected a representative on the Republican ticket for 20 years, Mr. Evans declares the farmers are entitled to one of the five to be elected.

Mr. Evans was a candidate in 1924 and received 5890 votes at the primaries.

Multitudes Will Gather at Picnic Sayeth Solomon

And it came to pass that the day of festival arrived and there was much joyfulness on the Hilltop. With the crowing of the cock there were signs of unusual activity and those that did sleepeth were aroused from slumbers by the heavenly sounds of Big Bens. There was much activity in the domiciles. For it was written, "The twenty-second day of the hottest month of the year shall be set aside for picnicing."

And when the last crumbs of the morning meal had been partaken and the last strip of browned swine flesh stored away with the boiled hen fruit all the people hastened forth to their duties to make way for the gathering in the shade of the large trees.

With the sounding of the noon whistles all stores were closed and clerks and merchants hastened forth to the big jubilee. And at the picnic grounds there was much activity as the multitudes gathered. As the small boys and damsels ran races for prizes and ate peanuts to the tune of the "how-de-you-dos" of the old folks, there was a cry went up from the fairer of the young maids for a bathing girl revue. But lo, for the lack of water except that present in the soft drinks their wishes could not be satisfied. And they went away satisfied with the prospect of such an event on picnic day 365 suns later.

And as the wise ones did predict there was a baby show and parade in which all the fond mothers of the village exhibited their offspring with much delight and whispered to their neighbors, "Junior can't help but win." But with the presentation of the silver goblets to the winning shavers there was much consternation in the ranks of the maters. But rioting voices were soon drowned out by the ballyhoo of the business men as they dispensed soft drinks to the Republicans and others.

But the promising part of the picnic was yet to come. A cry of "food" went up and hungry faces looked apprised and necks stretched in the direction of the familiar words. It was then that the 57 varieties presented themselves in gala attire and were devoured by the hungry thousands.

And it came to pass that the time for the drawing of the cash prizes arrived and the multitudes assembled again and as the judges spake the lucky numbers the holders thereof came forth and claimed the shekles. And there was much rejoicing among the winners, and they sayeth, "Surely it doth give profit to those who tradeth with the local merchants."

Soon there was a flare of trumpets and jazz instruments as the master of ceremonies proclaimed, "On with the dance." And there was a wild swinging of hoofs as the tall trees echoed the stampede.

And as the clocks gave forth the sound of midnight the Hilltoppers wended their way home, footsore but happy. And so endeth another Hilltop picnic.

Sacred Concert

Westgate Park Scene of Annual Community Party

Entertainment Provided for Whole Family; Program to Start at 2 o'Clock.

Next Wednesday will mark another page in the history of the Hilltop. It is the day of the annual community picnic sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association. It is predicted that the crowd will outnumber all previous crowds for the afternoon and evening get-together.

All plans have been completed by the picnic committee of which H. G. Deems is general chairman. The routine of the afternoon and evening were laid out at a final meeting held at Matsonia, Monday evening.

Program Outlined

The affair is scheduled to start at 12 o'clock and continue until midnight. The first event of the afternoon will be the baby parade in which many decorated baby carriages and floats will participate. It will be led by a prominent Hilltop man. A silver loving cup will be awarded the best decorated carriage. The parade will start at 2 o'clock and probably continue until 2:30. Efforts are being made to have the parade filmed.

The baby judging will start immediately following the parade. A silver cup will be presented to the winning boy and girl. Hilltop doctors will be in charge of the judging and a complete physical examination will be given each baby.

Many Contests

Many games and contests are in store for the children during the afternoon. Cash prizes will be given the winners in each event. The contests will begin at 2:30 and probably continue until 4 o'clock. All children of the Hilltop are invited to take part in the games. They will be directed by playground directors from the city recreation department.

A recreation ball game will be played on the park ball diamond in the afternoon when the Hilltop Bank team meets Hauntz' grocers.

Basket Dinner

The basket dinners may be served at any time the individual family wishes. They will probably be served from 5:30 to 7 o'clock. Many Hilltop families have planned to have their groups together for the dinner.

Following the dinner the drawing for the cash prizes is scheduled to start at 7 o'clock. All the tickets received during the five weeks preceeding the picnic are eligible for the drawing. They will be placed in a large rotating wheel on a truck in the center of the grounds.

The weekly prizes of $10 and $5 will be awarded first and the drawing for the grand prizes of $75, $50 and $25 will follow. Alternate numbers will be drawn for the grand prizes and in case the holder of the first number drawn does not call for it before September 1, the next alternate will receive the prize. When the prizes are not called for at the picnic they may be received at the Hilltop bank before September 1.

Moonlight Dance

Of interest to most of the picnic crowd will be the moonlight dance which will begin at 8 o'clock. A ten-piece orchestra has been hired for the evening. Several features have also been planned, including a prize waltz and some old-fashioned square dances with an experienced caller. Modern jazz will hold its place however.

Car Petitions Will Be Sent to Council

"September 10 should be a red letter day for the Hilltop in council," says Fred L. Sulzberger, leader of the fight to have West Broad cars placed back in High street, when he referred to the public hearing on the matter set for that day.

Several petitions are in circulation on the Hilltop at present and will be presented to council the night of the hearing. It is also hoped by those desiring the change to have a large group of local residents at the meeting.

Sulzberger announces that petitions may be signed at his store, Millikin Hardware, Shank's Men's Wear and a store at Hague and Broad, to be designated later.

On Vacation

W. C. Dyer, director of Glenwood playground is spending the week on the Ohio river. He will also motor to Charleston, W. Va.

Dog Bites Child

Bonnie McDonald, 12, of 720 S. Terrace St., was bitten by a dog Saturday evening while visiting at the home of M. E. Leach, 740 S. Terrace St. She was treated by physicians at the home. The dog was penned up for investigation by the board of health.

Baby Contestants May Enter Friday

Children from Six Months to Three Years Eligible for Baby Parade.

Another chance will be given tomorrow for registration of babies for the baby contest to be held at the annual Hilltop picnic next Wednesday. Mothers desiring to enter their babies in the contest should register either Friday morning or evening at one of the following places: Sulzberger's store, 2391 W. Broad St.; office of Dr J. T. Craddock, 2774 W. Broad St.; office of Dr. J. H. Csatt, 2657 Sullivant Ave.

All babies from six to eighteen months inclusive are eligible for the contest. A silver loving cup will be awarded the prize baby boy and also the prize baby girl. Hilltop doctors will do the judging. Several nurses have been secured to care for the babies while being examined. Results of the examination will be quicky tabulated and the awards made at the completion of the judging.

One of the main features of the afternoon will be the baby parade in which decorated baby carriages and floats will present a colorful scene. All babies from six months to three years are eligible for the parade. A prize will be awarded the best decorated float.

The baby parade will begin at 2 o'clock. The judging in the baby contest will start at 2:30.

The judging of the babies will be at 4344 S. Huron Ave., a private home. A final chance for registration will be given at the picnic but the committee desires that entries be made before that date if possible.

WATERMELON CONTEST HAS MANY ENTRANTS

Everyone seemed all wet at Glenwood playground Friday afternoon. The reason for all this was that a watermelon eating contest was in full swing with about 125 contestants entered.

Melons for the contest were donated by R. G. Hauntz, grocer. In addition to the eating of the melons there was a seed shooting contest for both distance and accuracy. Winners of this contest were Helen Wilson and William Hayes. Judges of the contest were W. C. Dyer, Miss Mary Moler and Miss Irene McKinley, directors of the playground.

Another activity of much interest at the park recently was an old fashioned mumble peg contest. Forty boys and girls took part in the game which lasted for five and one-half hours.

Rita Sweeny, 135 Lechner Ave., won first prize among the girls under thirteen years of age. Dorothy Butts 45 N. Mills St., was crowned girl champion of the grounds. Louis Cramer, 3624 Olive St., was winner of the boys group over 14 years of age. Paul Guderiere was champion by defeating all others. Donald Vance and Robert Hayes were runners-up.

Concessions

Mr. Lane is in charge of the concessions on the grounds at the Hilltop picnic next Wednesday. As in previous years the association will operate a soft drink stand.

In describing a stage production, a dramatic critic used exactly six words. He summed it up as "quite a lot of not much." These words could well be used in describing some our activities. We bustle around at projects that in the end are futile. Time, money and energy slip away from us, and all that we have to show is frazzled nerves. What price pleasure?

A GREAT RECREATION CENTER IN WESTGATE CITY PARK

Westgate park, one of our Hilltop playgrounds, is considered one of the best spots in the city for picnics. Nearly every day, during the summer months, family picnics are held in the shade of the large trees. It is a tract composed of many acres and affords ample space for the large crowd that will attend the Hilltop picnic there next Wednesday.

There are two rest stations at the park and also drinking water.

The moonlight dance in the evening will be held in a roped off section of one of the wide street intersections. It is smooth concrete surface and makes dancing easy. Members of the city police force will route the traffic during the afternoon and evening so as not to crowd the picnic grounds.

Drawing for Cash Prizes Will Begin at 7 o'Clock

Are you lucky? Will you be listed in the winners of the cash prizes to be given at the picnic next Wednesday?

Another drawing was held Saturday night and the last weekly drawing will be this Saturday. The winning numbers will be placed in the stores of the merchants Monday.

Then the long looked forward to time will come at the picnic when the cash prizes amounting to $400 or over will be given away to those present on the grounds. This will take place at 7 o'clock on a truck in the center of the picnic grounds.

The winning numbers at all the Saturday drawings will be called for and when presented to the officials they will be given the cash awards of $10 and $5 for each five weeks preceding the picnic. Then immediately following the Saturday awards all the stubs including the winners of the Saturday prizes will be thrown into a large container and mixed in preparation for the grand drawing for the larger prizes.

First prize will be $75 in cash. Second prize is $50 and third is $25. Several smaller prizes will also be awarded. They will include $5 and $1 in cash.

In case the holder of the numbers for the grand prizes are not present three alternate numbers will be drawn. All the numbers will be published later and the prizes will be given at the Hilltop Bank if called for before September 1. In case no one calls for the prize the first alternate will receive the award.

First Hilltop Picnic Was Held at Buckeye Lake in 1909

Interurban Cars Transported About 500 to the Picnic the First Year; Increased to 1200 in Third Year.

Days of the first Hilltop picnic and succeeding ones are recalled with the approach of probably the biggest one at Westgate park next Wednesday.

We are told that the first community picnic was staged back in 1909 when the Hilltop was in its infancy. L. M. Seiller, brother of M. W. Seiller, local dry goods merchant, was then in business on the Hilltop. He and Wyatt L. Millikin, local hardware dealer, conceived the idea of bringing the whole community together at a picnic.

The first one was held at Buckeye Lake as were the next two. The lake was a favorite amusement center at that time. The problem of transportation for the crowd was solved by chartering two interurban cars. But the number increased to such an extent that two more cars were ordered out just before the day of the picnic. Between 400 and 500 residents of the Hilltop met at Mound and High street where they boarded the picnic excursion for Buckeye Lake.

And with this information we learned that the Hilltop had a band of its own at that time and the band made the journey. Grant Long, officer, went along.

The second year found the picnic to be so popular that six cars were chartered and about 800 people spent the day at Buckeye Lake. On the following year 1200 people attended the big get-together and boarded the cars at Hague and Broad.

Mr. Seiller and Mr. Millikin state that the first two picnics were successes in every way except the financial outcome. The deficit for the two years was taken care of by these two men who had started the picnics. The third picnic was a financial success.

With the formation of the Hilltop Improvement association in 1912 the picnic was sponsored by them. It was held at Buckeye Lake again and for the fifth time in 1913. In 1914 the Glenwood shelter house was completed and for the first time the annual picnic was given at home. It was held in connection with the dedication of the new building.

Expenses of these picnics were meant to be defrayed by the advertising in the program issued the day of the event. However this was often low and the doctors helped by putting their names in the bulletin.

And so through the years has the Hilltop picnic continued. Then in 1926 the first ox roast was held and credit for this idea goes to Fred L. Sulzberger, chairman of the committee from the business men's association. Thousands of people gathered at Sullivant avenue and Rams boulevard for their old-fashioned barbecue sandwich. The meat was roasted in the open by "Cap" Fagley of the Columbus Fire department and was pronounced as being most delicious.

Then in August of 1927, another ox roast was held in Westgate. A greater crowd than ever before assembled on the grounds for the good time. It was followed by a moonlight dance.

And so stands the brief history of the Hilltop picnics. Next Wednesday will add another chapter to the history of these bigger and better picnics.

PRESENT ASSOCIATION FOUNDED AUG. 4, 1925

C. M. Marsh Was First President of Business Men's Organization.

Known as the Hilltop Improvement association for many years the Hilltop business men reorganized their group in 1925 and have since been known as the Hilltop Business Men' association.

The first meeting for the association organization was held August 4, 1925, at the Hillcrest church building. Twenty-eight business men from the Hilltop were present: C. M. Marsh was elected the first president of the new organization. Other officers were: C. O. Miller, secretary; O. C. Voss, vice president and Fred Sulzberger, treasurer. All ministers of the community were made honorary members.

On December 3, 1925, the association was incorporated under the laws of Ohio. And in the record of the corporation we find the purpose of the organization. It was formed for the purpose of "advancing, promoting and maintaining the general welfare of the manufacturing, mercantile and civic interests of the community and to encourage wise and useful legislation and to oppose legislation which is prejudicial to said interests."

NEW OFFICERS

Last week members of the Hilltop Business Men's association elected officers for another year. And with the election comes opportunities for greater work in the association for the good of the Hilltop.

Much credit is due to the retiring officers for their services during the past year and for their hearty co-operation during the coming months. To the new officers the best outlook for a successful year is based on the co-operation of all members.

YOUR PICNIC

Back in 1909 two Hilltop business men conceived the idea of a Hilltop picnic and down to the present year this idea has continued to be favored by the business men of the Hilltop. Another picnic day will soon be with us. Wednesday, Aug. 22, is the day set for it and the place is Westgate park.

This is your picnic. It is planned by Hilltop business men and sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association but it is for everyone and the whole community is invited to be present.

The spirit in which the business men have worked for this event is to be lauded. Much time and money has been given toward making the picnic a success and no return on the investment is expected except the good will of the Hilltop people.

It is meant that Wednesday afternoon should be the time of a joyful get-together at one of our own parks. Entertainment of a nature pleasing to all has been provided and the whole family may share in the good time from noon till midnight. The basket dinner at 6 o'clock should be of interest to every family. If the weather permits there should be several hundred dinners served in the shade of the large trees.

Probably one of the most interesting features of the picnic will be the baby show in the afternoon and the grand drawing for the cash prizes to be held in the evening. Then follows the moonlight dance in a roped off section of the street.

This is your picnic and you should be there to enjoy it. Come on out and mingle with the people of your own community.

The Spectator

"While people laugh together there is no danger of quarrels"

SETTING THE PACE

Several new buildings have been erected lately in our community and Red Pullin was commenting one evening last week on the improvement these structures are over some of the old "shacks" and pointed out several of those business houses that have served their time in the field and continue to be pressed into service.

Says Red, "It's a wonder some of the old buildings don't blush with shame when they are surrounded by the later and more modern business houses. You can expect the inside of the store to be about like the appearance on the outside. The trouble is that people don't venture into the old buildings because there is nothing to attract them from the outside."

JUST A LITTLE LAUGHTER

The person who laughs and smiles at the jokes he hears is the most liked and the most successful. Professor Tittle says. "Numerous wars could have been prevented if men had only laughed at the same jokes."

Laughter is about the best exercise a person can take. While the muscles of the body are being exerted to bring forth a chuckle or a succession of loud ones the brain is being relieved of the strain of other burdens that require thought.

And this idea of laughing at the same jokes to insure friendly relations is generally applicable to everyone. While people laugh together there is no danger of quarrels. Just a little more laughter and a few more smiles makes every day more pleasant. Neither one is tiresome.

TELLING THE WORLD

Members of the club gathered at Captain Beatty's home last evening to listen to a special radio program the captain had told us would be broadcast. In addition to the particular program he had in mind we tuned in on many other stations and heard programs from all corners of the globe.

"This marvelous invention is relatively new," said Red Pullin, "a few more years will find many improvements. It is hard to realize that we are here listening to people who are hundreds of miles away from us. The world is being told what is going on in all its corners. The radio is about the same to the world as a nervous system is to a person."

YESTERDAY AND TODAY

A few hundred years ago found the Pilgrim fathers landing on Plymouth rock in snow and cold. They had spent many days on stormy seas. Months passed before they could have word from the friends and relatives they had left behind. When they left port no message was received until a ship had returned months later.

A few weeks ago an American girl, typical of this age of adventure, flew over the same route followed by the Pilgrim fathers and landed near the port they had sailed from. Only a matter of a few hours stood between America and Europe for this young woman. Upon her arrival all the world knew of her safety. Radio had the air filled with news of her success.

Yesterday the world would have believed the air filled with witches and devils if they could have had the privilege of listening to words coming from the air. Today we accept it as a matter of scientific development and look to the future for greater wonders.

FASHIONABLE BOBS

Sir Little, while in the presence of several members of the club last night called our attention to a young lady passing in the street who had hair dropping nearly to her shoulders but yet having somewhat of the effect of the bob. Evidently she was allowing her hair to grow long. Sir Little commented on the style by saying it pleased him very much and he admired the girl with this style hair dress.

I notice about the city that there is a tendency for this style to become more popular than ever. It does away with the extreme bob but yet retains the beauty of long hair.

You'll do better at Seiler's after all.

Entertainment

M. S. ACREE

Mr. Acree is another member of the picnic committee and will see that plenty of entertainment is furnished for the crowd in the evening. J. E. Hite is the other member of the entertainment committee. They believe the slogan "on with the dance" is a popular one and have provided a moonlight dance for the picnic crowd.

You'll do better at Seiler's after all.

Some Consolation

"Well, Mrs. Johnsing," announced the colored doctor, after taking her husband's temperature, "Ah has knocked the fever outen him. Dat's one good thing."

"Sho nuff," was Eliza's reply. "Does dat mean he's gwine to git well den?"

"No," replied the doctor, "Dey's no hope for him; but you has de satisfaction of knowin' dat he died cured."

Solomon Says

"And it came to pass that the sons and daughter grew to maturity and after their years of growth the head of the family, known to all as papa, considered his duties in making their daily bread and clothes near an end. But lo, the tides did turn with the times and poor papa found only a greater demand on the exchequer. Daughter did needeth clothes for the formal hop and son did needeth a tuxedo and a car. And when bill paying time made its monthly advent there was less in the money coffers than ever before. 'Verily I sayeth unto you, get ye hence and make your way in married life' was the verdict returned by the family head."

The Ward of Robber's Roost

"That's the way I figured it out, Barker's likely to send his men back to his ranch with orders to watch out for us and send him word—"

"He can telephone. He's got a phone at the ranch."

"All right! To telephone him if we show up there. Then he'd arrange with Wade to scour the hills to the north for us, and he'd probably go back to Loboville to fix things there. It's a gamble what he'll do; but shucks, life's full of gambles."

Stella admitted it and relapsed into silence. She was rather tired, not so much from the work she had done, though she had been up nearly all night before, as from the nervous strain of the day.

Go Ahead, however, knew nothing of the gun and whiskey running and did not realize how tired she must be. So he harked back to the old subject and asked for further information about Stella.

"Is Stella pretty?" he asked.

Stella frowned. "Oh, she's got the usual number of teeth, and she's got good hair—if she'd let it grow," she answered. "But she won't let it grow—or she can't. She— Oh, she just looks like a lanky boy. You'd never think that she was a girl."

Unreservedly Go Ahead laughed. "Oh, wouldn't I, though," he retorted. "No girl in boys' clothes could ever get by my eagle eyes. You wait and see."

Stella sniffed. "All right," she promised. "I'll wait and see!" Then her strong white teeth clicked sharply. Go Ahead's boast settled it, she told herself. Not for the world would she tell him who she was until she had taught him a lesson.

A moment later she looked up to the arch of the sky. "Most time to go, isn't it?" she asked.

"High time." Go Ahead got to his feet. "Come on, boys," he called to his prisoners. "I know it's tough, but cheer up; in a couple of hours you'll be resting peacefully in a nice cool jail in charge of Sheriff Barker."

The two men, who had been sluggishly rising, straightened up as if galvanized. "You goin' to turn us over to Jim Barker?" demanded one whom Go Ahead had heard the other call "Hen."

"That's the idea. Sorry if it doesn't suit you. . . . Hold on! Maybe I've got the name wrong." Go Ahead turned to Stella. "Didn't you say the Loboville sheriff's name was Barker?" he asked.

Stella nodded.

"Thought so. . . . Yes, Barker's the man. "Got any objections?" Go Ahead looked at "Hen."

That individual, a lean and lanky fellow, nodded frowningly. "Yes, I've got objections," he rasped. Hen was quick to catch on and to play up to Stella—as he thought. "I object to the whole d—n thing and to Jim Barker in particular. You ain't got any right to hold us up this way, an'—"

"Tut, tut, tut! Tell it to Barker; and the faster you hop along the quicker you can tell him. March!"

Go Ahead watched them go with a twinkle in his eye. "That'll help square you with Barker, Bob," he suggested as he mounted his horse.

The rest of the ride was silent. The two prisoners hurried along with a briskness that equaled that of the first half mile after Go Ahead had captured them; Go Ahead himself was planning well in advance, and Stella was immersed in her own thoughts—which were decidedly confused.

And so they came to Loboville.

Few people were visible, but among those that were Go Ahead, watching keenly, spied black Caesar hurrying away toward the other end of the street.

At the same moment Stella plucked Go Ahead by the arm. "That's Jim Barker's office close to the courthouse," she explained, excitedly, "and that's Barker, just getting off his horse."

Coincidentally the two prisoners recognized Barker and almost ran toward him.

Go Ahead and Stella followed swiftly.

Go Ahead nodded. "Howdy!" he said. "I suppose this is Sheriff Barker, isn't it? Glad to meet you, sheriff. Hoped I'd find you here. I've brought along a couple of bandits that I cut out of Fair's gang this noon. Bob tells me that the horses they were riding belonged to you. So I brought them in as horse thieves. Glad to turn them and the horses over to you."

Barker gasped. Almost literally he had been swept off his feet. That the man who had so humiliated him only a few hours before, the man whom he and his men had been chasing and trying to kill, should walk serenely into the very center of his web, bringing with him the girl over whom the entire war had originated, was really incredible. And that this man should bring in two of his own ranch hands as prisoners and two of his own horses and should turn them all over to him with such a speech was an actual nightmare. He did not know what to answer.

Meanwhile a crowd had been gathering with extraordinary rapidity. And the very large part of it that had heard Go Ahead's speech was sufficiently informed as to the conditions to realize that the smiling young man on the horse was making a monkey of the sheriff, and they were listening eagerly for the answer. More than half the crowd consisted of the sheriff's friends and would stand up for him if necessary; but even these were snickering inwardly, behind their poker faces.

Barker knew all this. He knew that he ought to answer quickly and sharply, that he ought to crush this impudent young puncher who was deviling him. But somehow he felt peculiarly helpless—not exactly afraid but bewildered.

Briefly, Go Ahead had his goat—and had it unmistakably.

Wavering he raised his eyes, and, over the heads of the closely contiguous crowd, he saw Captain Carter, of the United States troops, loafing along the street toward him.

That settled it. Barker could do dirty work in the presence of his own men; he could even attempt it in the presence of men whom he could intimidate into keeping still; but he could not risk it in the presence of the regulars. Besides, he had had more than one taste of Go Ahead's methods, and he judged that that young man, and Stella, too, were dangerous. silent they stood looking at him so smilingly.

So he threw up his hands—metaphorically. At the two bandits he glared, then at the horses. "Hanged if they ain't my horses," he choked, though desperately striving to speak rationally. "Where'd you catch them d—n scoundrels?"

Go Ahead did not hasten to reply. Deliberately he dismounted, while Barker stood waiting. Then—

"Oh, back in the hills to the north," he answered, carelessly. "They and some other bandits were chasing me and Bob. And, do you know, sheriff, these fellows had the nerve to say they were acting by your orders."

How It Started
By JEAN NEWTON

A "CATSPAW"

"They can't make a catspaw out of me," is a way of saying that one will not be used as a tool to do an unpleasant job to serve some one else's purpose.

The word "catspaw" has a legitimate meaning in the parlance of the sea. It is the nautical term to describe the light air which ruffles the surface of the water in patches during a calm. Frequently heralding a storm, this "catspaw" is said to have been named from the fact that certain frolics of the cat will indicate to one experienced enough the approach of a gale.

It is not from its nautical significance, however, that the term has found a place in modern slang. For the origin of its use as a synonym for "it" or "fool" we must turn to the old fable of the monkey who wanted to get a nice roasted chestnuts out of the fire, but did not want to burn his fingers in the hot ashes. To serve his purpose he used the cat's paw. And the cat knew better, the next time.

NIGHT FLYING TO START SOON

Airport Lights Being Installed Now; to Be Ready in Ten Days.

Field lighting equipment to be used for night flying at the Columbus Airport, Sullivant avenue will be placed in operation in about ten days according to the W. G. Henderson Co., who are installing the lights. Taking off and landing at the field will be safe at that time.

The boundary lights are white and clearly define the outline of the landing area. They are spaced 250 feet apart around the field mounted on pipe standards about three feet above the ground. The red obstruction lights are placed on dangerous obstructions about the field. Very few of them are needed at this field.

The approach lights are green and are used to mark the most favorable approach to the landing area. The floodlight projectors are installed at the edge of the landing area. The projectors are of steel drum type and are 25 inches in diameter and 19 inches deep.

The projectors will light a section several hundred feet in front of the projector and lights a sector of over 180 degrees.

Hilltop Grocer Holdup Victim

D. D. Painter Fires on Bandit and Receives Return Volley As Man Escapes.

Early Tuesday morning a neatly attired highwayman confronted D. D. Painter, grocer at 2463 Sullivant Ave., as he came from his store after checking up his books and demanded that he "stick 'em up."

The robber looted Painter's pockets of $60 in cash and $45 in checks and as he started to back away Painter reached in the pocket of his car and drew out a revolver with which he opened fire on the bandit. The other returned the volley, but was lost in the darkness of an alley nearby.

Painter related the story thus: "I had been working late and had just closed up for the night. It was then after one o'clock. A man was standing on the curb but I thought nothing of it until I got in my car and found the ignition key missing. When I looked around the fellow was standing there with a gun pointed at me.

"'Stick 'em up,' he said.

"I asked him who was going to make me."

The holdup man replied that he meant business and ordered him out of the car. It was then that Painter's pockets were searched. His bank book and ignition key were returned to him.

Painter says he got into his car and drove down the alley into which the man went, driving with one hand and firing with the other. A bullet from the bandit's gun grazed Painter's head. When he nearly ran into a telephone pole in the alley he lost sight of the highwayman.

Fifty-three Years of Wandering

Or the Story of a Hilltop Couple That Have Spent Their Married Life in the Show Business Traveling Across the Country.

"Yes sir, we're spent 53 years on the road, me and Mom, and we've been all over the country playing fairs, shows, carnivals and others amusement centers." This from "Pop" Shivers, 228 S. Oakley Ave., when interviewed by the Record reporter.

But after all there seems to be no place as good as home to "Pop" and "Mom" and so they have a home of their own to which they return after they have taken their long jaunts over the country with the showboat or what ever company they happen to be playing. And this little home, as it sits down on Oakley avenue hasn't been changed much since it was first built many years ago. "Mom" has planted several trees about the outer edges of the lot and it now appears as a hut in a jungle from a distance but in truth it is one of the coolest spots on the Hilltop.

"Pop" tells us that he has been a resident of the Hilltop for the past 25 years and believes it to be a wonderful place. When he moved here there were no houses on Oakley avenue except the one which he now occupies.

Down in the side yard of the Shivers' home is a large truck painted in gala colors and appearing as if ready for the road. "Pop" says another trip had been planned for the summer but due to the illness of their son, Dan Shivers, 147 S. Oakley Ave., they have refrained from the wanderlust feeling that seems to be calling them.

"Pop" W. A. Shivers is 75 years of age, and "Mom," his wife, is 73. They have been traveling together on the road since they were married 55 years ago.

Starting with a few smaller show ventures, Mr. and Mrs. Shivers gained possession of a show boat on the Ohio river in 1881. Playing the part of Signor Chilo, "Pop" was a magician and ventriloquist while "Mom" took tickets at the door. The show boat business was good and they bought a larger boat which they named Signor Chilo's Wonder. But after they had gathered trunk loads of money the malaria came on in 1884 and they lost their boat and four of their children died.

With the passing of the show boat for them they started out across the land with "Pop" playing Diamond Dick, the medicine man. Several freaks also attracted the crowd. At one time they had John Handsome Craige on exhibition. He was the world's largest fat man and weighed 907 pounds.

"Pop" is a photographer by trade and while he is waiting for his son to get well he has turned one of his wagons into a studio.

RANDALL LAUDS OWN COMMUNITY

Citizenship of Hilltop Is Unsurpassed Says Candidate; Thanks Friends.

Cecil J. Randall, unsuccessful candidate for the nomination for Judge of the Common Pleas Court, Division of Domestic Relations lauded the Hilltop and West Side in the following statement after election:

"The campaign is over and by a small margin I failed to secure the nomination. I have congratulated Judge Mahaffey upon his success.

"It is impossible for me to personally thank the great number of men and women who in all sections of the county, so loyally fought that I might have an opportunity to serve the community on the bench of the new Court of Domestic Relations. However through the press, I desire to express my sincere appreciation of their splendid interest in the cause which I sought to advance.

"It is especially gratifying to me that on the Hilltop and other sections of the West Side, there was such an overwhelming expression of loyalty and confidence. The old adage that 'a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country' did not prove to be true in this campaign.

"I shall continue to believe as I have in the past that the citizenship of our community is unsurpassed by that of any other section of the city."

This old world isn't so crooked as it may at times seem. This was pointed out last Wednesday when a lady appeared at the home of Patrolman John Phillips, 275 N. Warren Ave., and offered to pay him 25 cents which she claimed she had borrowed from him more than two years ago.

She had lost her purse containing all the money she had with her while shopping down town, and approached Phillips and asked if he had found her pocketbook. She explained her situation and Phillips responded by loaning her a quarter. He had not heard from her until she paid the debt.

A picnic of a different nature was in store for the crowd this year but all was merriment from beginning to end and when the last members of the group trekked their way home last night they were recalling incidents of a favorable afternoon.

Frocks of Lively Print Topped With Coats of Selfsame Silk

The call of the midsummer mode is to complete the costume picture with a complementary coat. Greatest enthusiasm is shown by both fashionists and fashionables for this new custom of matching the coat to the frock.

This popular matching mode finds its happiest expression in the realm of gay print ensembles which top lively patterned dresses with coats of the selfsame lively patterned material. The picture emphasizes the fact that this colorful ensemble vogue which is so prominent in the midsummer landscape features both "the long and the short of it" as far as coats are concerned.

The model to the left, as you see, is the fashionable seven-eighths length. It is a highly colored affair from start to finish, its navy silk background being cultivened with a print done in vivid scarlet and buff—quite Spanish in its coloring. The hemline of the dress and its diagonal front opening are scalloped. A piping of plain red outlines all the edges.

One is almost justified in referring to the three-piece sports costume in the right as a travelogue ensemble, because of the fact that the printed crepe of which it is made is one of those new scenic silks, this one cleverly depicting certain famous playgrounds of the world. There are palm trees and little figures and sea and sky and such, adroitly depicted so as to produce a handsome all-over design. The colors are particularly fetching, harmonized and blending so as to produce a fascinating pastel effect.

Another important style feature of this sports frock is the fact of the blouse being sans sleeves. The sleeveless mode is spreading. This however, need not alarm those who do not admire unsleeved frocks. Likewise those to whom sleevelessness is anything but becoming may solve the problem of being chic by wearing a sleeved coat of the identical material as that of the dress. Most of the sheer costumes for dressy garden party wear and the like stress a matching coat as well as do the smart sports outfits of silk and crepe, of pique or linen as the case may be.

Up to this moment the two captives had kept silence. They had realized that they were mere pawns in the game, not supposed to act of their own initiative. However, they did not know what Barker wanted them to say. But when he denounced them they imagined he was playing a part and became suddenly eager to follow his lead. Consequently, when Go Ahead shifted his attack and centered attention on them with such bewildering suddenness, they burst into clamorous speech.

"We didn't!" they cried. "He's a liar, Jim. We never named your name."

A roar of laughter swept the crowd—chiefly from Barker's own adherents. Under its impact his always swarthy face grew actually black with anger. Toward the men he sprang.

But Go Ahead stepped in his way. "Hold on, sheriff," he protested. "I'm not questioning the right of a man to beat his own dog, and if these men told the truth when they said they were yours, go ahead. But if they lied—" Go Ahead paused suggestively.

"Lied? Of course they lied! I never saw them before." Barker was on the defensive—though he could not imagine how he had got there.

"Then I don't think you've got any right to manhandle them."

Barker squirmed. He felt confusedly that there was something wrong in Go Ahead's argument, but for the life of him he could not find the error. Incontinently he surrendered.

Around he looked, then called to one of his deputies, who was pressing toward him. "Hey, Miller," he ordered. "Take these horsethieves and lock them up."

Then, as the deputy caught hold of the bewildered men, Barker turned to Go Ahead. "Come into the office, will you?" he invited. "I'd like to get this story straight."

But Go Ahead shook his head. "Thanks," he said. "I'll drop in later. Just now Bob and I want to get something to eat. We're hungry. Guess we'll go to Bridget's and get some grub and a room."

"A room?" Barker's eyes bulged. Was it possible that this man had not yet discovered Bob's sex?

Go Ahead did not understand. With some perplexity he answered. "Why yes," he said. "Bridget has rooms, hasn't she?"

"Yes. But you—you—you—" Barker broke off. He had meant to say—"Ain't married yet, are you?" but he caught himself just in time. Abruptly he realized that Stella did not look like a girl to anyone present except himself and to two or three others who knew the facts. He also realized that for him to recognize Fair's daughter would be to supply another thread for the web of evidence that seemed to be closing about him.

"Oh, sure, you can get rooms there," he agreed, hastily. "Drop in at the office any time when you get ready."

Go Ahead turned away, passing through the throng that opened for him and Bob. On its outskirts he brushed against Caesar, who, with the rest, was apparently looking on. Go Ahead stopped and looked at the negro as if the latter had asked him something.

"Haven't got time to talk horses now, boy," he said loudly. "If you've got any bring three or four around to Bridget's after dinner tonight." Then he walked on.

CHAPTER IX

Bridget's was built on the "system of units" plan. Originally a good-sized adobe building, it had been supplemented by frame and even by galvanized iron additions until it had taken on a nondescript, not to say heterogeneous, aspect.

When Go Ahead saw it he grinned. "Did somebody build it from the correspondence school directions in the Women's Home Chronicle telling how to build a home out of a soap box and a tin can?" he asked.

Stella's eyes widened. "Why!" she exclaimed, "I never thought of it in that way before; but that's just what it does look like." Then her innate loyalty to her friends got the better of her sense of humor. "I don't care," she protested, "it's clean, and the eats are good and Bridget's a good sort. She's been mighty good to me, and I'm mighty fond of her."

"Good boy! Stand up for your friends. I hope she's got a room for us."

"I'll go in and see." Coloring faintly, Stella scurried around the side of the house, darted into the adobe section, from which appetizing odors were floating out upon the air, and precipitated herself into the arms of a comfortable looking Irish woman who was cooking at the stove. "Oh, Bridget, Bridget!" she cried. "I'm so glad to see you."

"Arrah! And is it yourself, mavourneen?" Bridget's arms closed about the slim form of the girl. "Sure, it's the long time since you've been in, so it is. . . . Ah! You needn't be tryin' to explain at all. It's meself that knows what's been goin' on. . . . Why, why, darlin'! What's after being the matter with ye?"

Stella was sobbing on the woman's motherly shoulders. "Oh, oh, Bridget!" she gulped. "I'm so miserable and so happy and so—so—"

"Whist, whist, child! That's enough for one bit. . . . Who is he, darlint?"

"He?" Stella tore herself free. "Sure! Sure it's a man in it, there is. Whativer else should a girl be happy and miserable all at once for?"

Stella drew herself up. "You're all wrong, Bridget," she said, coldly. "I'm not a girl. I'm a man and—"

"Not a girl? Arrah! Ain't ye now? Think of that!"

"No I'm not." Stella stamped her foot. "I'm a man—or a boy, anyway. And I'm going to stay one. I—I—Oh! Why won't the men let me alone?"

"God knows, dearie. But I'm thinkin' maybe it's just because they are men—the poor omadhouns. Who's been troublin' ye now? Barker?"

"No! Yes! Oh, it's too long to tell now. But Wade and Barker trapped me at the J. B. ranch this morning. And if Go Ahead hadn't come a—"

"Who come along?"

"Go Ahead. My cousin from the East. Dad sent for him—"

"Sure an' I know. Fair sent me word about him a month ago. It's a fine mouthfillin' name he's got. But I suppose he got it because he was most unlike it. Likely he turned out to be a lah-de-dah dude." The Irish woman dropped her eyelids to hide the twinkle.

"Dude! Dude!" Stella laughed scornfully. "Well, if you'd seen the way he handled Wade and Barker this morning and Barker again just now—Oh! I wish I had time to tell you all about him, but it would take me a week. But he's a real man and—and he's nice, too."

Bridget shrugged her mighty shoulders. "An' wouldn't anybody be nice to a pretty girl cousin the first time he sees her?" she scoffed.

"But I'm not pretty. And he doesn't dream that I'm a girl—and I'm not. I won't be a girl! And he mustn't know it if I am."

Bridget stood back and ran a shrewd, appraising eye over Stella's face and figure. "Im thinkin' maybe it's right you are," she conceded. "It's a lot more like a rowdy boy than a girl you're lookin' right now. But in three months belike—or maybe in less— Well! It's not sayin', I am. An' as for pretty—but no matter about that. Where is this buckaroo of yours?"

"Out in front. He's looking for me—the Stella me you know—and he doesn't know he's found me. He's come here to wait for word from dad where he's to meet me. But—but"—the girl's face crimsoned—"he says he wants a room—a room—for us, and—"

"And why not—"

"Bridget!"

"Seein' that it's a boy you are?"

"That's different."

"So it is. So it is. Sure, child, it's only teasin' you a bit I was. I'll give him a room, but as all my spacious guest chambers are full I'll have to give him a wee small one next to me and to put you in another small one at the front of the house."

"Bridget!"

"Ah! It's the one next to me I'll give you if you're wantin' it so bad as all that. . . . An' now I'll go see whether it's give my consent I will. . . . Oh, whist! child, I'm not doubtin' that it's all right he is. But I'll give him the once-over before I trust him or any other man. An' if he ain't all right, sivver a step will you be goin' off with him."

Stella, however, clung to her. "He is all right, Bridget," she panted. "He is. Dad sent for him—"

"So he did. But he's never seen him."

"No-o. But I have. And I know a man when I see one. He came out here to help me, and he got into dreadful trouble—that is, it would have been dreadful trouble if he hadn't been so splendid— Oh! If you'd seen the way he handled Wade and Barker and Diego, too. Everybody calls him Go Ahead—and"—a shadow crossed the girl's face—"and it makes him so venturesome and—"

"There, there, darlin', don't be takin' on so. You can just tell him who you are an'—"

"But I don't want to tell him who I am. I—I want to ride and talk and—and all that with him first—"

"Indade an' you won't!" And Bridget resumed her interrupted progress to the front of the house.

Meanwhile, Go Ahead had sat him down on a bench near the front door and had been trying to concentrate his mind on the revision of his plans, which had been somewhat disarranged by the completeness of Barker's surrender. Go Ahead was familiar with Barker's type and he knew well that such men are never so dangerous as after they are beaten, for then they fight by proxy or from ambush. To recover his lost "face" Barker must somehow destroy his adversary, and he would not dare to fight fair. Go Ahead knew that it became him to guess what Barker would try to do next and to forestall him.

But he had great difficulty in keeping his mind concentrated on the problem. Just as he would get a train of thought straightened out and running smoothly, some act or word of Bob's would pop into his mind and he would lose his pace, go off at a tangent, and later find himself miles away from the conclusion at which he had been aiming.

After this had happened several times, he jumped to his feet, fuming. "Confound that boy and his scrape!" he raged, to himself. "I've got to get him and his troubles out of my head. He's a good k.d. but he isn't the whole works by a long shot. He's just an immaterial cogwheel, after all."

Go Ahead glanced at the watch on his wrist. "Where the devil is the boy, anyway?" he fumed. "He's been gone long enough to rent this whole room. . . . Oh, he's all right at that. Looks sort of effeminate maybe, but—oh, well. You never can tell about these kids. Lot's of 'em haven't got sense enough to be afraid. . . . Oh, hello, Bob! I thought you were trying to buy out the place."

Stella and Bridget had come upon him unawares.

Stella was confused for the first time since Go Ahead had met her. She had no answer ready to his chaff, and she responded only by introducing him to Bridget—and she did this awkwardly. Bridget's stern stand in regard to him, to say nothing of her insinuations, had left the girl ill at ease.

Bridget, however, quickly swept all awkwardness aside. "Bob's been tellin' me how you helped him out this mornin'," she said. "Sure an' it's myself that's mighty grateful to you for that same. Bob's like me own boy; I brought him up, so to speak. An' that Wade is a dirty blaggard to try to hurt a gossoon half his size. Bridget's eyes searched Go Ahead's face as she talked for any sign that might betray consciousness of Stella's sex.

But she saw none. Go Ahead only grinned. "Help him?" he retorted. "It was he who helped me and saved my life. Have you seen him in action, ma'am? No? Well, you've got something to live for then. He does honor to your bringing up. I think I never saw a likelier youngster—if he wasn't so darned venturesome."

Bridget rolled her eyes at Stella, who grinned reluctantly. "Yes," she answered, glancing back to Go Ahead "an him so slim and ladylike, too." Bridget was determined to probe Go Ahead's mind to the very bottom.

"Sure thing. He's good looking enough to be a girl." Go Ahead grinned maliciously at Stella, who was looking down and blushing deeply. "But he doesn't fight like a girl; no, ma'am. He and I have got to be great pals in short order."

Bridget was satisfied. "You can't always be tellin' about young things like him," she replied, with a meaning that Go Ahead was far from suspecting. "You'll be after wantin' rooms?"

"I've come from the East to get my cousin Stella," he said. "I believe Fair sent you word?"

Bridget nodded. "Most a month ago," she answered.

"The messenger had difficulty in finding me, I believe; and then of course he had to take some time to find out whether he could trust me. We left for here a few hours after he broke the news. He said that you would probably have a message for me."

"I only knew that you were comin'."

"Well, in that case, I was to stay here till it did come in some form or other. So you see my story is pretty indefinite. If you can put us up—"

"Sure, I can do that. Green came by yesterday an' told me that you was on the way before he went on to the Roost. Most like he got there last night."

"He did." Stella chimed in before she thought.

"Why?" queried the Irishwoman, surprisedly.

"Yes. He—he was with the men who were chasing us this morning. I—I recognized him." Stella thought she had got out of her predicament very well.

Bridget accepted the explanation with a nod. "Sure! Then Fair knows you're here an' he'll be sendin' you word soon," she said to Go Ahead. "You'll be here the night, anyway. Come in, an' I'll be after showin' you the rooms. It's only two small ones I've got."

Two minutes later Bridget threw open the door of a tiny bed-chamber and let Go Ahead enter. "Bob's room is back, near mine," she said. "I'll take him to it. Supper'll be ready in half an hour or less."

At the door of Stella's room Bridget would have gone on. But the girl stopped her. "Green came to meet me," she said, hurriedly. "He brought me a message from dad. He knows that I know Go Ahead. So dad probably won't send any other message. And Go Ahead'll wait and wait till Barker manages to get him shot from behind. I—I got to get him away from here quick. Can't—can't you help me?"

Bridget looked at the girl tenderly. "You lamb," she breathed. "It's meself will get a message from father this very night."

"But—but—how can you?"

"By weeja board; how else?"

"Oh!" Stella laughed hysterically "And what will weeja say?" she demanded.

"I'll have to be consultin' it afore I'll know. But I'm thinkin' it'll be instructin' the two of ye's to go wait for that minx Stella somewheres east of here, close by the J-B ranch belike. Now I must be hurrying. Sure. I've got twenty-odd hungry men to feed in less than half an hour from now; an' if I'm not ready they'll be tearin' down the place, so they will."

Supper was ready on time and Bridget's pious escape the fate that its owner had conjured up, though no one who saw the men eat would have doubted that its escape was narrow. Like a torrent they poured into the dining room when the gong sounded, and like a horde of devouring locusts they swept the table bare.

Stella and Go Ahead were there with the first, but they stayed longer, most of the others making their escape the moment they finished their meal and scattering to affairs that interested them. Several, however, waited outside till Go Ahead came out.

YOUR ASSOCIATION

Just what is the purpose of the Hilltop Business Men's association?

Because it is made up of business men of the Hilltop is no reason to believe it to be for the sole purpose of bettering business conditions in the community. Instead the major purpose is to be of service to the community in making it a better place in which to live. Through co-operative endeavors they are striving to bring about certain improvements for this section.

They are also co-operating with other community organizations and civic improvement groups to make Columbus one of the most outstanding cities in the state and a city which we as citizens may be proud of.

This association is in truth your association. It has been formed for service to the people of the Hilltop, and Hilltop people should feel free to call upon it for improvements they desire. Every possible consideration will be given all suggestions from Hilltop residents.

FASHIONS VS. INDUSTRY

American women have a reputation of being pleasing to look at and one of the reasons is that the past few years have brought them to realize that their appearances may be improved at a little extra expense. And so the cost of beautifying has been estimated at $2,000,000 per year.

Sixty-two tons of steel were used last year in manufacturing 500,000 pairs of clippers because of the popularity of the bob. But again we hear that with the bob goes the fashion of cigarett smoking and this in turn has caused the chocolate trade to suffer because the taste of chocolate and tobacco are in opposition.

Likewise there is a fight between the textile trade and the silk growers. Woolen and cotton manufacturers say the dress should end below the knee and the stocking maufacturers say they should be above the knee. After all fads and fashions are having a large part to play with industry.

A lack of community spirit is evident in the business man who refuses to listen to proposals for community betterment just because he cannot see far enough ahead to realize an extra nickle or dime for his business from the project.

THE GLAD SHOW

A larger attendance and larger displays made the second annual amateur gladiolus exhibit, held at Hoge Memorial church last week a success in every respect.

The growing popularity of this flower is evidenced in the greater number of growers from year to year. Its beauty is hard to surpass and every home is brightened by the appearance of glads.

We welcome the announcement that next year's glad show will be held on the Hilltop.

FROM OUR READERS

Editor Record:

It is about time something was done in regard to our car service from Hague and Sullivant to Broad street. I have heard so many complaints about it. Every car should run to the Big Four, not one every twenty minutes (more like twenty-five or thirty). I stood between thirty-five and forty minutes waiting for a car going south at Hague and Broad.

Why do not the Camp Chase and the West Broad cars try to make connections. This, it seems to me, is only a matter of common sense but invariably one or the other is just pulling out. This is particularly disgusting.

It is about time the Hilltop had a little consideration from the car company.

The Hilltop Business Men's association had better get busy.

Disgusted.

"Y" School to Open Monday, Sept. 10

Students leading their classes at the close of the summer session of the Columbus Y. M. C. A. schools included T. W. Wright, 252 Columbian Ave., who was registered for work in the social sciences in the evening preparatory school where he is a regular student.

Fall classes of this school as well as of the new Evening College of Commerce, Arts and Engineering, and the Day School for Boys are scheduled to begin September 10. The Columbus College of Law will open two weeks ater, September 21.

Rescuing men from sinking ships is only part of the work of the United States Coast Guard. Through its International Ice Patrol, it gives warning of icebergs in the transatlantic lanes, and there has been no loss of life by collision with icebergs since this service was begun. The Coast Guard finds and destroys floating derelicts—deserted ships or hulks—which are exceedingly dangerous to shipping; its cutters guard the coast against smugglers and rum runners; "it assists mariner in distress and searches the sea for Atlantic flyers." Whenever such a disaster as the Mississippi flood occurs, boats carry men and supplies to help in the relief work. "The Coast Guard threw into the flooded areas 674 officers and men and 168 vessels and boats and removed from positions of peril to places of safety nearly 44,000 persons and saved from drowning more than 11,000 head of live stock," says Lieutenant Commander Leandle in the United States Daily. "They worked, men and boats, continuously for five or six weeks. Cooked food was rare in the open boats. Sleep was rare, but the men performed their functions bravely and achieved great results."

The Spectator

"The American government is the biggest business in the world.

RECORDING FINGER PRINTS.

A gentleman of our city has taken action to have finger prints of every one in the country recorded. This is one of the latest steps toward criminal detection and also serves many other purposes.

There is hardly a chance of finger prints lieing. Experts have figured that there is one chance in 184,000,000 of two finger prints being alike.

In addition to the service of returning fugitives of justice they may also be used in the identification of bodies.

ON COMMITTEES.

Red Pullin said to me one day last week, "By the time the members of a committee have eaten lunch and learned the purpose of the meeting it is time to adjourn." We had been talking of referring matters to committees for settlement.

In part I believe with Red. A lot of time is wasted by committees if they aren't spurred on to action. But on the other hand much time may be wasted in the meeting of a large group if matters are discussed from the floor. One of the surest ways of killing a meeting is to allow discussions to linger on and on.

LABELING MEN.

"Have you ever noticed in most anything you undertake you will come in contact with certain phrases that label men and are supposed to be characteristic of them. They are meant to serve as a condensed character sketch of the man." This from Sir Littleton as he sat in my office.

"For example we have a story of Washington and his truthfulness connected with the tale of the cherry tree. Lincoln has been labeled 'Honest Abe.' But going back to Biblical times we have a summing up of a famous character in 'As meek as Moses' and another in 'The patience of Job.' Present day scholars of the Bible claim that these and many other such phrases are not really characteristic of the men. And modern writers who are finding flaws in the lives of our national heroes would change the expressions that characterize Lincoln and Washington. However, I believe," said Sir Littleton, "men will continue to be labeled and by their labels you shall know them."

POLITICAL ASPIRANTS.

Just because every mother wants her son to be president when he grows up is no reason why he will ever hold political office. However it is natural that a mother should want her son to gain honors and render service.

But when son grows up other interests draw him from the training he should have in order to reach political heights. And from the business world men are wending their way into politics. Our country is being run on business principles and it has been found that men with mere political training cannot make government of the nature of ours function properly. In this case the business man has been called into service.

Yet there are political aspirants who seek the position because they see chances of graft and because political positions are considered soft jobs. Caution should be taken by the voter to throw support to the side of the man who is capable of operating big business, because our government is the biggest business in the world today.

Mothers who aspire to see their sons in high office should center their training in the business world.

A CHANGE OF TIMES.

The old manner of passing your competitor on the street and throwing your head into the air is a thing of the past," said Professor Tittle, in a group of business men at luncheon last week. "A welcoming handshake is the sign of greeting now.

"Not only is it right to co-operate with your competitor but friendly relations with every other man in your business section means profit for you. If you are not on speaking terms with your neighbor he may cause trade to be directed to another store."

ABOUT WRITING.

"Reading may maketh a wise man," says Prof. Tittle, "but it certainly is a task to decide what to read when there is so much material to select from. Periodicals abound in great numbers and the articles are for the most part worth while.

"On the other hand, cheap literature is flooding the news stands and the brilliant art covers are attracting their share of attention. Parents are allowing their children to read much of the lighter printed matter that contains no point but satisfies only the immediate liking. I would consider the books and magazines those which are remembered six months after reading and not those that are forgotten on the following day."

I agreed with my friend in part but stated that my opinion was that a great number of the so-called radical books and magazines of today aren't so bad as they appear. The reason for this is that a writer must have the subject at heart and believe and understand what he is writing about. This doesn't happen to be true with spectacular writers today because they are attempting the unusual because they know it is this type that is advertised from mouth to mouth and so increases the sale. People are writing for money and not a purpose. They seldom believe or practice what their writing preaches.

BIRDS YOU OWN

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I'll say just this
To man and miss
Who seek for joy
And search for bliss
That birds that sing
Soon take to wing
When foolish folk
Their cages bring;
And joy's a bird
As sweetly heard
That frightens at
Some selfish word,
Yes, swiftly flies
When some one tries
His joy to count,
And analyze.

Around the door
The songbirds soar,
And some have less
And some have more,
But two or three,
Or what it be,
My own birds are Enough for me.
I'll say just this
To man and miss
Who seek for joy
And search for bliss:
Don't weep and moan
For joys unknown
And miss the song
Of joys you own.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

ABOUT THE DINNER

"The dinner wouldn't amount to much without our presence," said the lamb roast.

"You would burn and you would not be very nice," said the water which had been put into the tin with the lamb to keep it from burning, "if it were not for the water."

"And you could never be cooked if it were not for me," said the stove.

"And you would never have been lighted if it had not been for me," said a match which was now what would be called a "used match."

"And you would have gone very poorly if we had not been turned just a we should have been," said the jumpers belonging to the stove.

"The oven would never have become warm if we had not made the fire burn well," said the members of the coal family.

"And we gave everything the first turn!" said the kindlings.

"You wouldn't be so good if we weren't to go along with you for the dinner," said the potatoes to the lamb.

"And They Do Need a Dessert," Said the Apple Pie.

"You wouldn't be a real meal if we didn't come along, too," said the bread.

"And what about butter?" asked the latter.

The lamb was cooking and was becoming nice and brown on the outside.

"Every one wants water," said the jug which at that moment was being filled with water.

"Every one wants gravy," said the gravy.

"And they do need a dessert," said the apple pie as it waited upon a plate.

"And a cup of tea will be welcomed by several at the table," said the tea as it was being introduced to the boiling water.

"Of course," said the salt, "some of you—such as the lamb and the potatoes would not be very good if we didn't go along with you.

"We were needed by you, potatoes, when you were being prepared."

"I know who'll ask for three lumps of sugar in their tea," said the sugar in the sugar bowl.

"And milk will be asked for, too," said the milk in the milk jug.

"The pie would never have been pie without us," said the apples, "at least it would never have been apple pie!"

"And the pie crust would have been a sad pie crust if it hadn't been for flour and baking powder, butter, water and a little salt," said these things together.

"But it needed some one who knew how to put them together," said a little creature who just appeared and who said her name was Fairy Ybab.

"Yes, it would have been a dreadful pie crust if some one had just gone and thrown all those things together into a bowl without any sense or thought or knowledge of how to make a pie crust.

"But you're all so silly, all of you.

"In the first place of all the store would never have been started without a human being starting it.

"In the second place none of you would have turned out right if you had not been properly made.

"And again you all form a part of the goodness of the dinner. The lamb plays the most important part in this meal—but everything has to work together.

"It's the same way with people. They must pull together to get the best results and the real happiness and so must a dinner to make it a success.

"You will be a fine meal—all of you—because each did its own part to make the meal a fine one. And the one who cooked the fine dinner knew how much little things such as seasoning had to do with tasty food.

"Now you're going into be eaten, dinner, but even as good as you are, you would not be enjoyed if the people didn't have good appetites.

"Oh, yes, many things together make a perfect whole!"

And Fairy Ybab was off as the dinner was taken up to be served.

OAKLAND HAS RECORD JULY

Continuing the record setting pace which has resulted in new high sale figures every month since the first of the year, the Oakland Motor Car company sold a total of 22,704 Oakland and Pontiac sixes during July, W. T. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales, announces.

This compares with 16,752 units sold in July, 1927, or a gain of 35½ per cent; and brings the total of new Oaklands and Pontiacs shipped since January 1 to 184,252 cars. Mr. Tracy said. The corresponding performance for the first seven months of 1927 was 112,888 units, or a gain of 63 per cent this year over last.

"Extensive plans laid for the late summer and fall of 1928 indicate that we will top last year's performance easily by another forty per cent or more. Sales of Pontiac sixes will take on an added spurt by reason of numerous refinements in the line announced recently.

"The national economic picture is better than we might normally have expected several months ago. Politics issues are too vague to cause industrial uneasiness. Unemployment, where it was in evidence, has subsided to normal as a result of seasonal occupations. The trade horizon is fair, indeed.

"It is significant that our July sales were especially good in the outlying farming localities. The farming industry is the recognized pulse of our national well-being. With the farmer prosperous now and confident of the future outlook other lines of industry will go forward at an accelerated pace that should make the third and fourth quarters of the year decidedly better than in 1927."

An experiment recently made at Columbia university proves that "two heads are better than one" and indicates that group thinking makes for speed. Four words were selected—"educators," "neurotics," "secondary," and "universal." Twenty groups of students, each working co-operatively, were told to get as many three-letter words as possible from the selected words, ten minutes being the time allotted. Later, each individual worked alone. The average for the group was seventy-five words while the individuals' average was only thirty-two words.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

COUNTING STARS

"They fought from heaven; the stars in their courses fought against Sisera." So sang Deborah and Barak, the son of Abinoam, exulting over the destruction of the Canaanite commander. The quotation is an example of the intimate relations which the ancients believed to exist between the stars and human destiny. The persistence of this idea down into our own times is evidenced by the number of "astrologers" who make a comfortable living from the credulous by their "horoscopes" and the prevalence of star-superstitions all over the world. As to astrology, it was regarded as a real science down to within comparatively recent times.

There appears to have been strictly no star-worship among the ancients. In the sun and the moon primitive man saw deities—in the stars celestial bodies more nearly related to and connected with himself. The stars peopled the heavens as man peopled the earth and between them existed a community of fate, the celestial influencing the terrestial, as was natural. Therefore, we see in current star-superstitions not the invocation of a god but an attempt to find out how the celestial bodies with which we are in affinity are influencing our destiny. A common superstition of the "project" class in this country and Canada is that if you count nine stars on nine successive nights (if a cloudy or rainy night intervene the charm will be broken and the project must be begun again) the person you dream of that night will be your future husband (or wife). In one section only three stars are counted. This superstition is based upon the ideas stated above with regard to the connection between the stars and their human counterpart, the counting of the stars being merely an attempt to get entrapped, as it were, with the celestial ruler of your destiny.

A Morning Meditation

by Lawrence Hawthorne

What may I ask of the glad New Year,
Whose golden dawning paints the eastern sky?
What may I hope to accomplish here
As days and seasons move so swiftly by?
What shall I promise myself to do
Before this priceless year is through?

Help me to live in a manly way,
And earn the comradeship of loyal friends.
Let me know laughter and wholesome play—
The joys on which all happiness depends.
Give me the courage and faith to see
That God will bless each day for me.

Strengthen my arms with a purpose true,
Yet keep me humble, honest and sincere.
Give me a strenuous task to do
And urge me on with never-failing cheer.
Then let me rest in the evening sun
And hear the Master say, "Well done!"

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

CO-OPERATION

It is a common thing to regard the forty years passed by the Children of Israel in their wanderings as so much punishment inflicted on them for their sins.

To take this view is to overlook the necessary past that that experience had, in turning them from a mob into an organized, co-operative nation.

O. H. Mickel, in the Inland Printer, suggests as "the truth about Moses" that the great lawgiver did not lead the Children of Israel "out of the wilderness," but kept them "in the wilderness," for the wilderness was what they needed.

The Israelites had been softened by a long period of Egyptian servitude. Their spirits had been broken by having to make bricks without straw and all sorts of indignities.

If they had been led straight to the Land of Canaan, they would have had to face the Ammonites, the Hittites and a dozen other well-disciplined and warlike tribes, prepared to defend their land flowing with milk and honey, with all the resources of their civilization.

By the time that Joshua took over the direction of affairs from Moses, a great change had taken place. The people had been made strong by a strenuous environment of mountains and deserts by proofs of Divine favor and direction.

The generation that had known the brickyards, the flesh-pots and the idols of Egypt had passed away. In its place was a hardy array of men who had learned how to fight, who were a match for the Canaanites and were ready for the fulfillment of their destiny.

But not only were they fit to conquer the promised land, they were also fit to establish a strong centralized government with definite tribal rights, when they had taken possession.

For it was in the course of the forty years in the wilderness that they received the Mosaic code, which put them in a position of superiority to all the other people in that part of the world.

It is no wonder that throughout the following centuries the recollection of those forty years was never out of the minds of the rulers, the prophets and the poets of the nation.

In all there is a lesson for the rest of the world. There is no short cut to any promised land for individuals or for the nation.

Every man and every nation destined to amount to anything must go through the wilderness. That is the only way that they can be made fit for what is before them. Above all that is the way co-operation is learned.

Lava flowing down the side of a volcano in central Oregon at one time encountered a green pine tree, three feet in diameter, and enveloped it to a depth of at least sixteen feet. However, the lava flowed so freely that no great pressure was exerted on the tree and it was not uprooted. Furthermore, the green pine resisted the heat for so long a time that the lava chilled and ceased to flow before the trunk was consumed. It grows now in the midst of the barren "lava river," green although gnarled.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

YOUR WIFE YOUR EQUAL

It is embarrassing for a wife to be obliged to ask her husband for money. Yet many husbands subject their wives to this humiliation every day.

Husband and wife are partners in life. Yet who ever heard of a business man making his partner ask for money to buy clothes or theater tickets?

"But the husband earns the money," some will say. "He is entitled to disburse it as he sees fit."

This argument may hold good in marriages where the wife does nothing but look beautiful. But if she is taking care of a house or looking after a couple of children she is doing fully as much toward making the partnership a success as her husband.

The husband who does not believe this should take care of a small house for a day or two. At the end of that time he will probably be glad to resume his loafing at the office.

* * * * * * *

Housekeeping is one of the most wearing forms of labor that can be found. And caring for small children is not exactly a vacation, either.

Let us admit that the average hard-working wife keeps up her end of the partnership. Why, then, should she not be treated as an equal?

Why should she have to come to her husband and beg for money to buy a new dress? Does he beg her to cook his supper for him?

It seems to me that the only satisfactory answer to this problem is the family budget. Expenses should be tabulated and provision made for them.

A certain amount of money should be allotted to rent, another amount to food, another amount to clothing. Some money, of course, should go into the savings bank.

* * * * * * *

When the budget is once planned and found workable it should be adhered to. It makes little difference then who has charge of the funds. If the wife has a head for figures she should be given the task of administering the budget. If the husband is the better accountant he will probably prefer to handle the finances.

Under such a system both husband and wife will have a certain amount of money to spend. Then if the husband wants a new golf suit he will have to buy it on his allowance. If the wife desires a new hat she will have to fit it into her clothes money.

But she will have a definite, regular sum each week on which she can count. And she can plan her expenses accordingly.

No self-respecting human being likes to ask another for money. Wives are human beings and most of them are self-respecting.

Vol. XII. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, August 30, 1928 No. 18

RANDALL MAY BE OPPONENT OF REYNOLDS

Hilltop Man Urged to Enter Race on Republican Ticket in November.

Attempts are being made by the Franklin County Republican organization to draft Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., as candidate for Judge of the Common Pleas Court on the Republican ticket in the November election. It is the desire of the committee that Randall run in opposition to Judge Dana Reynolds.

A committee from Republican headquarters, headed by Harry C. Arnold, chairman of the executive committee interviewed Mr. Randall Saturday and requested him to run as a petition candidate.

As yet he has not given a definite answer. His reply will be made this week however. The candidacy was entirely unsolicited by Randall. "I hadn't thought of running for the office until the committee came to me. I'll have to think it over before I give my answer," he told the Record.

Randall, who was recently defeated by Judge Mahaffey in the primaries for the nomination for Judge of the Domestic Relations Court, is considered one of the strong hopes of the Republican organization in the fall elections. His close race in the recent contest points to his large following in Columbus and Franklin county. It is figured that with the Mahaffey and Randall vote combined in November, Randall can swing many thousand votes for the judgeship.

Judge Reynolds was unopposed on his own ticket and polled 8901 votes in the primaries. The Republicans did not have a candidate in the primaries for this office. Randall polled 15,365 votes in the primaries against Mahaffey

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

In the center we have Thelma Faye Shrum, 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy M. Shrum, 71 N. Burgess Ave., winner of the baby parade. To the left is Miss Joy Freeman 9-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Freeman, 28 Nashoba Ave. She was prize winner among the girls in the contest.

Honorable mention were given to Dana Gene Shank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Shank, 546 S. Terrace St. and Marjorie Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Addis, 143 N. Wheatland Ave.

Clyde Hurley, 18, 367 S. Eureka Ave., from Glenwood playground won the city-wide horseshoe championship in the class 16 to 21 years. He won from Paul Price of King avenue grounds by score of 50-8 and 50-28.

For the championship of the city, regardless of ages, he was defeated by H. A. Workmaster of Southwood. The scores were 50-26 and 50-40.

Percy Green of Glenwood took second place in the senior division. He was defeated by Lewis Miller of Washington park. Miller in turn defeated Workmaster for the city championship.

Dyer Reports

Columbus may well be proud of her many spacious playgrounds says W. C. Dyer, supervisor of Glenwood playground, who returned recently from a visit to Cincinnati and Newport, Ky.

Mr. Dyer visited Inwood playground, one of Cincinnati's best, and one of the finest of Norwood's grounds, both of which he says are smaller than any of the Hilltop parks and have as their only equipment a few swings. There were no tennis courts or baseball diamonds near.

Many of the Ohio valley parks had swimming pools, however, which were always crowded to capacity. No provision was made for the protection of the children's street clothes.

THIS CHANGING WORLD

People are becoming acquainted with the air mail and are taking advantage of what it has to offer in the way of quick service.

Back in 1639 the general court of Massachusetts ordered the home of Richard Fairbanks to be the distributing point for overseas mail and in 1775 Benjamin Franklin was made the first postmaster by the Continental Congress. The first federal postage stamps were issued in 1847. Special delivery service was established in 1885 and the first rural free delivery was put into service in 1896. The first air mail line was established in 1918.

This is a changing world we are living in and everything is moving faster than ever before and will continue. The development of the mail system is just an example of our progress.

REVIEWING THE PICNIC

If the size of the crowd is an expression of the success of the Hilltop Picnic, the estimated attendance of 25,000 speaks for itself. The large number of Hilltop people that were on the grounds during the afternoon and evening was also an expression of the community spirit of the Hilltop. No other section of the city can boast of such a successful outing as that sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association.

In addition to the part played by the crowd, the co-operation of the various business men in this section was indeed gratifying. Merchants closed their stores at noon and turned out to help with the festivities.

Another like affair will be sponsored by the business men in future years.

Solomon Says

"And it came to pass that there was much dryness about the land and little tomatoes turned their green eyes heavenward and appealed for water. Streets in the cities became dusty and there was much need of dampness on the lawns. Bootleggers and those who would go picnicing were the only ones who believed things to be of sufficient dampness. But it came to pass that the weather prophet issued a statement that there would be rain. And for two weeks there was no sign of such, but on the morning of the middle of the second week there were showers in small quantities. And there was rejoicing with the approach of cool weather, but there was sadness in the hearts of the children for on the following week their duties of learning were to begin again. And it was written that the fall rains bring ringing of school bells.

The Spectator

Machine methods of production give us more consumptive goods.

MACHINE PRODUCTION.

We hear much talk relative to the unemployment situation and there are many who blame it on the machine methods of production being employed by manufacturers. They say the machines have turned many men out of work. Sir Little gave me a new light on the question and I, in turn, am presenting it here.

Labor must be used to operate the machines and labor must be used in producing the machines. This of course does not offset the number of men that would be required to produce the same number of finished products by hand.

But the big advantage comes through the fact that more goods are produced and more people can afford and enjoy the comforts they give.

OLD METHODS.

Nations of the world look to America as a land of prosperity and progress and it is readily seen that the reason for this is because so many people here enjoy the luxuries and comforts the people of other nations cannot afford.

In former centuries only the royalty of the kingdom or the very rich merchants were privileged to enjoy fine things. The greater per cent of the populace lived as we would say "from hand to mouth." The many hours they worked in the fields or shops during the day went to produce goods that might add to the comforts of the upper classes. In this country there is no upper class or other class distinction. There is a chance for every one to enjoy the goods produced by machines. Men are making more money and the purchasing value of their dollar is being expanded.

Other nations are lagging in this respect. England continues to hold to hand manufacturing. Machine methods are being forced upon them and they are coming to realize that the loss of their giant shipping trade has been due to the superiority of American methods. Machinery has caused the home market to be able to take care of the supply.

COUNTRY VISITORS.

Last week it was my pleasure to take an uncle, whose home is in the country to the first picture show he had ever attended. He may have had such an opportunity before but had not taken advantage of it.

The expressions and signs of his enjoyment were entertainment in themselves. The crowd assembled in such a large and magnificent auditorium gave him an insight into what the world is like and what the other half of the world is doing. He was transferred from the quietness of his country home to a noisy and bustling city.

The person who lives in the city and has all the conveniences of modern science at his call is indeed fortunate when we come to think of the routine followed by many who do not have these. Country life in some sections is superior in respects to that of the city. But on the other hand more of the country people in the out-of-the-way sections should see the advantages of the city and have an opportunity to realize the benefits of education so that their lives may be put to better use.

DEFINING NECKING.

Some time ago Jack Wordley was introduced to members of the Club and because of the versatility of the group they accepted him as a member. And so, he being a university student we ask for his opinions from time to time on matters pertaining to the young people.

Last evening Jack was asked by Sir Little to define the word "necking" as commonly used by high school and college students.

Jack began, "It isn't such an easy word after all. But I would say it takes the place of what you of the older group would have called 'spooning.' As to what you did when you were spooning is another thing, not to be brought into the definition. No doubt we have progressed much over your method though." With this he laughed and turned the topic aside.

MISJUDGING.

Many people have misjudged the meaning of the word "necking" and have labeled the young person that uses it, as one of the uncontrollable members of this fast age. But if more time was taken to discover the true meaning of the word there would be less controversy. Again the members of the Club take the stand in favor of the young people and do not paste a red label on them because they mention their necking parties.

THINGS THAT FAIL

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I thought that men must build success
On old successes. 'Tis not so
For all the champions I know
Had been defeated more or less.

The smoother road that great men tread,
I learned, a harder path they came:
And he who found the eternal flame
Had left a thousand campfires dead.

Yes, many another dream must fade
That men may recognize the true:
And men will find the thing to do
Because of errors that they made.

We winnow life as hands the wheat:
Amid the chaff we find the grain.
I say that every loss has gain,
I say the bitter makes life sweet.

From rocks that loosen great men make
A footing that they know will hold
Defeat will only make them bold
Some other height to dare, and take

On rocks that tumble toward the vale
We upward climb to find the peak:
And men shall find the things they seek
By making use of things that fail.

When he did appear, one of them, a clear-eyed, determined-looking ranchman, came up to him, with the other two closely behind. "My name's Brown," he said. "I own a big ranch near here. My friends, Nelson and White"—he gestured toward the others—"also own big ranches. We all saw you get Barker's goat a while ago. Course, we don't know just what your game is, an' we're not askin' you to spill it till you get good and ready. We're only tellin' you that we'll back your play against Barker to the limit—and that's the sky. Call on us, any time."

Go Ahead nodded. "That's mighty fine of you," he said, nonchalantly. "I'll be glad to call on you if I need help. But I hope I won't need it."

"So Long."

The three men turned away, and Go Ahead looked around for Caesar and the horses he was to bring. Caesar was not visible, however; no one was visible, for the matter of that, except one man sitting on a bench close by. So he started back to the hotel.

At the door Bridget met him. "I've just been gettin' word from Fair," she said. "If you an' Bob will be leavin' about two o'clock in the mornin' so as to get to the J-B ranch about daylight, you'll find Stella there. If you don't find her soon, ride on toward Mustin and she'll be with you afore you get there."

Bridget's words were accurate enough, as a whole, and in detail, though they were somewhat misleading in spirit.

Go Ahead's face fell. The pending meeting was exactly what he had come West for, but it had been arranged with a speed that was not altogether welcome. It involved his leaving Loboville with a suddenness that would permit Barker to assert and other people to believe that he had weakened and run away. Of course he could and would keep his promise to "drop in" on Barker before he went, but he could not afford to notify him when and where he was going, for to do so would be to endanger Stella. As a matter of fact he did not want to leave Lobosville until he had smashed Barker completely—to Fair's advantage.

Nevertheless he could not disregard Fair's instructions, the authenticity of which he had no reason in the world to doubt. He must not only meet his cousin, but he must take her immediately East. He could not get back in less than ten days, and what might happen in ten days he could not guess. However—

Abruptly he dismissed the matter from his mind. His duty was plain. He must set about it and consider later what was to be done next.

"All right," he answered. "Bob and I'll be there on time. Where's Fair's messenger? I'd like to talk to him."

"He didn't dare wait. Sure it would set him in bad if any of Barker's spies recognized him."

"All right. Er—where's Bob?"

"He stay. He's asleep now, an' if it's knowing anything about boys I do, he won't be wakin' for twelve hours if he's left alone."

"Good. I've got an appointment to keep tonight and some things to attend to right away if we're to be getting away before daylight and I'd just as soon that Bob shouldn't know ever. He'd give me Hail Columbia if he found out I'd done anything without him. So—"

"I'll not tell him."

Bridget turned away, and Go Ahead went back to the door to look for Caesar. He found him standing by obedient to instructions, he had obtained somewhere. Out and over to him he went, noting out of the tail of his eye that the fourth of the diners who had waited outside was still sitting on the bench by the door.

"Those the best horses you could find?" he remarked, contemptuously—and loudly enough for the man by the door to hear.

Caesar fell in with his lead immediately. "Yassuh!" he answered promptly. "Ain't they fine?"

"Fine? Those things?" Go Ahead bent down to examine a hoof. "Have the best three just east of town on the main road at two o'clock tomorrow morning," he breathed. Then he straightened up. "Look here," he exclaimed aloud, "I'm no d—n tenderfoot. If you want to sell me horses you bring good ones—and bring 'em by nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Understand?"

"Yassuh. Yassuh."

Down the broad white road he walked briskly, till just opposite the sheriff's office; then, turning on his heel, he crossed the road, opened the door of the office, beneath whose lowered window shades he could see a thin line of light, and walked in.

"Evening, sheriff," he said.

CHAPTER X

When Go Ahead walked off with Stella, the sheriff watched him for a moment, then strode back into his office, called certain of his minions, and ordered them to keep a close watch on Go Ahead. This done he sent for Go Ahead's prisoners.

Smilingly the men came in, convinced by the fact that he had sent for them that all that had happened in front of the office had been a farce played for the benefit of the onlookers, and that now they were to be set free, perhaps even to be complimented on the way they had behaved.

Capitol College of Music to Open Hilltop Branch

In recognition of the growing demand for good musical instruction on the Hilltop, the Capitol College of Oratory and Music has chosen this neighborhood as the home of its first branch school, which will be located on the northwest corner of Broad and Hague. Fall term opens September 5.

The school, which began in 1898, has grown steadily, and now has more than four hundred students in its regular courses, and about one hundred and fifty in its special summer courses. In 1906 it was chartered under the law of Ohio. Under its charter it is empowered to grant appropriate de-

The college year is divided into two semesters of twenty weeks each; each semester into two terms of ten weeks each. Many special courses are available for such as may not care to take the regular prescribed work.

At the head of the school is Grant Connell, B. Mus., who is one of the leading pedagogs in this part of the country. In 1908 Mr. Connell was chosen dean of the college. In 1926 on invitation of the Board of Trustees, he accepted the presidency.

Cecil Fanning, Mus. D., heads the vocal department. Mr. Fanning has helped to make the name of Columbus known around the world. As a lyric-tone soloist, he has won the most intense praise of the best critics in London, Berlin and Paris. His students occupy some of the finest choir positions of America.

Cedric W. Lemont, M. M., is nationally known as a composer. He has written effectively for the piano, violin, organ and orchestra, as well as for the voice. In both the piano and theory departments, Mr. Lemont has developed illustrous pupils.

Upon invitation of the president of the school, Henry A. Shultz, B. Mus., accepted the managership of the Hilltop branch. Mr. Shultz has been a resident of the Hilltop for eight years, and has obtained superb results in teaching on the Hilltop as well as on the faculty of Capitol College.

These as well as many other capable members of the faculty will be at your service in the Hilltop branch.

The Capitol College of Oratory and Music is an ideal place for anyone to begin, advance or complete his musical education.

3767 CHILDREN REGISTERED AT FOUR SCHOOLS

First Day Figures High; Enrollment Continues; 920 at West High School.

Record enrollment marked the opening of school on Tuesday morning. An increase was shown in all the Hilltop schools. Crowded conditions do not prevail in the community as of last year, however, with the exception of West Broad Street school.

Topping the enrollment figures of the Hilltop schools is that of West Broad street having 1140 on Tuesday afternoon. Several more were enrolled Wednesday and will continue to come in during the week and early next week.

John Burroughs had 1130 enrolled Tuesday. West High stood at 920. There were 805 registered at Highland Junior high and 263 in the elementary department making a total of 1128. This is larger than the enrollment of last year.

The opening of the new twelve-room addition to John Burroughs has relieved the crowded conditions there. Another portable has been added to West Broad but two classes continue to be on half-day schedule. West Broad has several more than were enrolled at the close of last year.

With the opening of the new West High school at the mid-year, all the crowded conditions should be relieved. Several of the junior high students will go there and many of the elementary students will be shifted to Highland.

Enrollment on Tuesday at St. Aloysius school was 380. Many were expected to enter later in the week. With the opening of four rooms of the old church building for the school conditions continue to be crowded, Rev. Schwarz reports. Teachers are also scarce.

Class work started Tuesday.

The work was done under the direction of Ben Canini, contractor, and T. A. Day of the Chicago office of the Portland Cement Co. It is 13½ feet in height and four feet in diameter on the inside.

PLAN TWO-DAY CARNIVAL FOR BANK OPENING

Bank and Business Men to Join in Sponsoring Celebration About Sept. 27.

Another celebration that will call out hundreds of people of the Hilltop is planned in connection with the formal opening of the Hilltop Bank when it opens for business in its beautiful new building about September 27. Members of the Hilltop Business Men's association are cooperating with officials of the bank in planning for the grand opening.

The exact date of the opening has not been set because of the fact that workmen at the bank do not know when their work will be completed.

Avery Clinger, vice president of the First Citizen's Trust Co., of which the Hilltop Bank is a branch, stated Tuesday that the officials of the bank wanted the people of the Hilltop to feel that it was their bank and to have a part in the opening ceremonies. He plans that many of the business men of the Hilltop will act on the reception committee.

In making the affair one in which more people may participate the members of the business men's association are planning to set aside two days at the time of the bank opening for a community celebration that may take the form of a madri gras. The first day and evening will be devoted to the opening of the bank. The second day and evening will be for the fall openings of the merchants of the Hilltop who care to take part.

Several prizes will be given away at both openings. The bank will sponsor a treasure chest and every home on the Hilltop will be given a key to be tried in the chest. The merchants are contemplating a number hunt.

It is planned that an orchestra will furnish music for the bank opening and the business men may have a band present for the night carnival on the following night.

Full details are being worked out by the officers of the association and R. O. Harrison, manager of the Hilltop Bank, and Mr. Clinger. They will be given in next week's Hilltop Record.

Missing Girl Found---Married

Another mysterious disappearance was solved Friday and what was once thought to be a mystery has been revealed as only romance, elopement and marriage.

Police are no longer looking for Miss Violet Whitehead, 17, foster daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitehead, 67 S. Ogden Ave. It was learned late last week that she had eloped with Leonard Ruhl, 20, of 26 N. Warren Ave. The couple drove to Covington, Ky., in the car belonging to the girl's uncle on August 3. They were married there. The girl then returned home without telling of the ceremony.

John Whitehead, the girl's uncle, is said to have refused to allow the girl to leave the house with Ruhl. When they decided to run away a week ago, says Ruhl, their intentions were to stay at his home until they could find a place of their own.

Then came the disappearance and police were notified. A note was left by Miss Whitehead telling of her intention to leave but her uncle did not think it necessary to tell police of the note when he reported her as missing.

The young couple found that Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Ruhl, 285 N. Park Ave., the boy's parents, would not allow them to stay at the Ruhl home. They went to a friend's home near Galena, Sunday.

At first Ruhl denied the marriage but when questioned later, cleared the mystery. Ruhl said that he had saved $800 and was able to start a home of his own and everything would have been all right if their people had not objected. His mother approves the marriage but the girl's parents have not heartily agreed upon leaving them to work their own way.

Mr. and Mrs. Richardson left their two sons, Jonathan and Walter Emmett with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Richardson, 473 S. Harris Ave.

Ensembles of Lace and Chiffon Fashion's Midsummer Theme

Not Shakespeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," although so lovely a costume might well be that of which poets dream, but fashion's midsummer's day theme, is the enchanting ensemble of lace and chiffon in the picture.

This fantasy of sheer fabrics and entrancing color is composed of pale pink lace with peach-pink chiffon. It is just such as are crowding the picture where fashionables gather to see and be seen on a sunlit midsummer day. The coat is part chiffon and part lace and it makes an admirable wrap where a wrap is not really needed save for the fine finesse it gives to a sleeveless gown.

If ever the truly feminine note, of which stylists have so much to say at the present moment, is sounded, it is in these lovely ensembles of lace and transparencies, which are an outstanding mode for festive daytime occasions.

Transparency is apparently the keynote for the daintiest and loveliest of fashion's midsummer fantasies. If one would achieve the ideal from the modes point of view, for summer afternoon wear, the frock and the graceful wrap with it will be either of lace or of chiffon or of both, while the hat will be of thinnest crinoline or hair.

For the very lovely ensemble in the picture milady select a cunning cloche of palest pink hair braid. One may be assured that this hat emphasizes the fact of its transparency, likewise the parasol which is of lace and chiffon.

Another thing about the exquisitely sheer costumes which are outstanding on the summer program is that they express each a perfected color study from beginning to end—a glorified color symphony as it were. When the shades are not pink or peach, orchid or pale green, or light blue, or mauve, or violet or a symphony in yellow then they are sure to be meticulously carried out even to the slightest detail in soft grays or beige or the new "off white" shades which are so fashionable.

The exquisiteness which characterizes the dress and the hat extends to footwear, gloves and all the luxurious accessories so necessary to a successful ensemble.

But Barker was in no mood for guiles or smirkings. Outside, he had concealed the rage that was seething within him because he dared not give it vent; later, inside his office, he had held it in leash because he did not wish his subordinates to guess (as if anyone doubted it) that he had been holding it in. But the first sight of the bandits' grinning faces broke through his defenses; and he threw all restraint to the winds.

Like a hurricane his wrath descended on the two helpless prisoners. He cursed them by the lords of heaven and of hell, by their ancestors and their progeny, by their looseness of tongue and by their lack of brain; he heaped upon them epithets which had been conceived by men who wallowed in the primeval ooze and which, rephrased in every generation, have been handed down through the ages; he spared them nothing that brain could devise and tongue could utter. Even an asbestos record would have flared up before it had recorded half that he uttered.

Under the impact of his words the two men quailed as if from the beat of a literal tornado. For in his eyes they thought they read promise of sudden death.

"For two bits, I'd let you hang," he choked at last. "But I'm going to let you get away this time because I need you. But if you ever make such doubled- a fools of yourselves again I'll skin you alive."

The two men drew long breaths. They were, at best, mere riffraff, cowardly, cruel, dull and brutish, who had drifted into crime because they had lacked intelligence to earn their livings by any other way. They were used to being cursed, though not so sharply as by Barker, and they never thought of resenting it. They were only too glad to get away under any conditions. With lightened hearts they waited to learn for what they were needed.

It was a simple task, after all. "Miller'll take you back to your cell," explained Barker, "and give you files. You take them an' get busy on the bars in your window. Soon's it's dark —an' I want 'em filed through by then —Miller'll give you a couple of horses. You get out of town quick's you can and ride like the devil to Robbers' Roost. Don't go near Fair. Hunt up Wade instead an' tell him that the man we saw at the J-B ranch and the girl we were chasin' are both here. Tell him the girl's mashed on the buckaroo an' 's gone clear over to him, an' if he don't want to see her showin' the doughboys the way to the Roost he'd better come quick an' carry them off. Get me?"

The men nodded. But Hen did more. Hen had an incurably clacking tongue. "Maybe the gal ain't gone back on us," he said. "She signed to us to keep still about knowin' her and whispered that she'd fix things for us. An' she did persuade the man to turn us over to you."

"Say that again." Barker's order came sharply.

Hen said it again in almost the same words. "I guess she thought that was the surest way of getting us free," he finished.

"The devil she did." Barker's voice showed profound amazement. For a moment he wondered if Stella could actually still be loyal to the band and had kept and would keep its secrets. But very quickly he dismissed the idea. If she had really had the men turned over to him, she had done so for her own reasons and not from any love for him and Wade; of this he felt very sure. Perhaps she had so far kept the location of the Roost secret for her foster father's sake; but that she would continue to do so was unbelievable.

"Don't matter," he went on, to the men. "You tell Wade what I said. Tell him I ain't sure she's told where the Roost is yet, but I am sure she's told pretty near everything else she knows and she'll tell about the Roost by tomorrow if she's here to tell. Tell him to bring his men to the North Arroyo crossin' just north of town an' leave them there an' come to this office for the latest news. There's a captain and a half platoon of doughboys come in here today, an' the moonlight tonight will make it too risky to race around town promiscuous. You get all that?"

Yes, the men got it; or so they said.

Some two hours later, in the brief interval between the setting of the sun and the rising of the moon, the two bandits climbed through their doctored window and scurried away to the North Arroyo, where they mounted their horses and scurried away.

At the sound of the opening door Barker and Miller, seated at the table and engaged in earnest (and profane) conversation, sprang to their feet, dropping their hands to their pistol butts as they moved. But an instant later Barker, noting that both of Go Ahead's hands were in the loose pockets of his coat and that each pocket showed a suspicious looking protuberance that might well be due to a revolver muzzle, took away his hands, an act that Miller speedily imitated.

"Evenin'," replied Barker, to Go Ahead's greeting. "Come in an' sit down. Didn't hardly expect you tonight. Thought you and Bob would be too chummy."

Barker intended his words to be insulting; like Bridget, he wanted to trap Go Ahead into some word or glance that might betray knowledge of Bob's sex. But as Go Ahead had no knowledge on that point to betray, Barker's words passed clear over his head. "Had to come tonight or not at all," he said lightly, seating himself so as to face both Barker and Miller. "Got to take the 9:34 train over to Muslin tomorrow morning. Be back the next day, but didn't want to keep you waiting so long's all that. What did you want to talk to me about?"

Barker, though easily taken by surprise and though slow in repartee, was by no means a fool. Given time, he could puzzle things out fairly well. Go Ahead had got the best of him twice that day, largely by taking him by surprise. But since then he had had time to reach certain deductions. In fact, that was what he and Miller had been engaged in doing when Go Ahead came in.

In reflection he had been unable to believe that Go Ahead could be merely an irresponsible cow puncher, who had accidentally butted into the game at the J-B ranch. He might have accepted him as such if the proceedings at the ranch had been all; though why an errant cow puncher should interfere on behalf of a scrawling boy whom he did not know would still remain to be explained.

But they were not all. After Stella had escaped, Go Ahead had followed her trail. If he had known that she was a girl such action would not have been very puzzling; but, assuming that he thought her a boy—and Barker really believed that he did so think her—it, too, clamored for explanation. Then Stella's abrupt volteface and attempt to get back to the ranch after she had talked with Green (who was a partisan of Fair's and who had been mysteriously absent from the Roost for a month) seemed to indicate some understanding between Green and Go Ahead and Stella—especially when Go Ahead joined the girl and aided her to escape. Of course Green had explained all this glibly; but now Barker was beginning to doubt the explanation. And, finally, when Go Ahead and Stella had turned up at his very door with such exceeding patness and had later gone to Bridget's (Bridget being a very old friend of Fair's), Barker concluded that Go Ahead had come to Lobo county on some very definite errand. Remembering Fair's opposition to his wish to marry Stella, reckoning that Fair had guessed that he had not given up his design and might readily have learned of his intrigue with Wade, and recalling the fact that Fair had promised Stella's real father that he would send her to her friends, the sheriff had little difficulty in making a shrewd guess at the truth.

So sure was he of the accuracy of his deductions that, now that chance offered, he determined to put them to the test.

"What I wanted to see you about is mighty soon told," he said bluntly. "I want to warn you that I'm going to marry Stella Fair and get her money, an' that no d—d imitation cow puncher's going to come out here from the East and carry her off."

This time it was Go Ahead who was surprised. But Go Ahead reacted more quickly than Barker ever could —and he was not enough surprised to take his hands off the pistols in his pockets.

After a gasp of amazement he laughed. "Bravo, Barker," he said. "Evidently, I've cruelly misjudged you. You've got a lot more imagination than I thought. Now tell me who the imitation cow puncher is, and why you're taking me into your matrimonial confidences and we can talk."

But Barker was not to be balked. "Oh, cut out that bunk," he growled. "You c'n talk all right; an' you got the best of me twice today, I'll admit. But you can't do it again. I guess you think you've got the girl all right an' that you're goin' to get away with her an' her money. Well, you ain't. You ain't even got another guess comin'. You've used up your guesses an' you've played things a little too fine. You're goin' East on the limited one hour from now or you're goin' to stay here for keeps in a nice hole in the ground."

"That so?" Go Ahead's tone showed a confidence that he did not entirely feel.

"Yes, that's so." Barker's voice was grim. "You think you've got me because you've got me covered from your pockets. But you ain't. Why, you fool! It's me that's got you covered. You ain't the first man that's tried to get me in this office. I'm loaded for you and anybody else. . . . Don't believe me, hey? All right, I'll show you. And after I've shown you, you take your hands out of those pockets mighty careful and put 'em up."

With his foot the sheriff pressed a spring; and the three window blinds of the room, suddenly released, shot upward with a whirr. Framed in each window stood a man with revolver trained on Go Ahead.

"Put 'em up," reiterated the sheriff.

But Go Ahead did not put his hands up. He did not even take them out of his pockets. Instead he laughed and rose—very, very leisurely—to his feet. He had no desire to provoke the men at the windows to action.

"Good stuff, Barker," he admitted. "Trouble is, old man, I think about two jumps ahead of you. I asked Captain Carter to surround this place as soon as he saw me enter it tonight; and I haven't the least doubt that he's done it. The regulars are apt to be on time, you know—listen." Go Ahead was romancing. He had sent no word to Captain Carter. He was trapped and his chance of escaping was infinitesimal. He knew very well that Barker had no intention in the world of sending him away by train, that the suggestion of such sending was merely to get him to take his hands from the revolvers that covered Barker. Once he did that his shrift would be short. He said what he did on the bare chance that his words might create a diversion that would give him a chance for his life.

But while he spoke, as heard, they all heard, in the road without the rasp of a sharp order and the quickly following beat of footsteps.

At the sound Go Ahead spun around to the window, jerking his pistols free as he moved. But he had no time for them. The men at the windows had vanished, and he swung back in time to stop Barker and Miller from attempting to fire. "Easy, boys, easy," he counseled.

The next instant the door was burst open and Captain Carter sprang in—with Bob by his side.

"What's the matter here?" he cried.

Carelessly Go Ahead returned his weapons to his pockets. "Nothing to speak of, Captain," he replied. "Somebody tried to hold the sheriff and me up through the windows. I guess you've scared them off. But I'm a whole lot obliged to you for coming, 'aptain."

The captain looked a little bewildered. But he shrugged his shoulders. "I'm satisfied if you are," he answered.

"I am—for the time being. Er—Captain, if you're patroling toward Bridget's I'll be glad to go along with you, if you don't mind?"

The captain smiled. "Curiously enough, I'm going to that very place," he observed.

Go Ahead turned to the sheriff. "Night night, Barker," he said. "Be sure to see me off on the 9:34 tomorrow morning."

Smilingly Go Ahead followed the captain out of the office. But as he stepped through the door he caught Stella's hand and pressed it. "Thank you, boy," he said, feelingly. "That's the second time you've saved my life today. How did you know where I'd gone?"

Stella's breath was coming very quickly. "I made Bridget tell me," she whispered. "Then I went for the captain and the men. We've been waiting outside. When the blinds went up and I saw those men outlined against the light with their guns—Oh, Go Ahead, if you'd been killed I'd have hunted them down and killed them both!"

CHAPTER XI

Wade, as Go Ahead had guessed from his bandaged head, had suffered more or less severely from Diego's ambush. And Diego had suffered also.

Wade had been the first to bolt through the door into the semi-obscurity of the corridor, and Diego had fired instantly without waiting to make sure who was coming. The bullet struck Wade high up in the forehead, passed through the skin, circled over the top of the skull, and went about its business, the shock knocking him over.

Barker, bursting out on Wade's heels, had already drawn his sheath knife, the only weapon that Go Ahead had left him, and this he hurled at Diego, or rather at the flash of Diego's pistol. The knife, however, went true, transfixing Diego's right arm and causing him to drop the pistol without firing a second shot.

All three being then weaponless, stopped fighting, recognized each other, and counted up the damages.

Diego's wound, though painful, was not dangrous and did not disable him. Wade's wound was not disabling, either, and, if he had gone quietly to Robbers' Roost and had taken care of himself there, it probably would have given him little trouble. But the long chase in the blazing sun, the rage over his humiliation at Go Ahead's hands, and the final fury that possessed him when he found that Go Ahead and Stella had slipped through his hands in some inexplicable way, played hob with him.

Fever racked and exhausted, he at last got back to the Roost and tried to sleep, but for hours he could not. And when, about midnight, he did at last close his eyes, it was only to be awakened by the arrival of the two bandit messengers that Barker had sent.

He was in no condition and in no mood to listen quietly to the story they told nor to the message they brought. Quicker of comprehension than Barker, he grasped the essentials of the situation before the men had more than fairly began their tale and maddened by the fever in his veins and the triphammer throbbing in his brain, he sprang to his feet and rushed out of the cabin.

A moment more and the brazen alarm bell of Robbers' Roost sent its wild summons through the sleeping camp.

Up and out, from cave and from cabin, poured bandits, women and children—all who went to make up the population of the Roost. Some came shivering, wild-eyed with fear; others came ready to fight for their lives. Never before in the history of the Roost had the bell rung in the night, and those who heard it knew that it betokened no light danger.

With the others came Fair, half-dressed, buckling on his pistol belt. To Wade, still sounding the bell, he rushed.

"What's up?" he demanded.

Wade threw down the padded mallet and turned, glaring. "The whole show's up!" he raved. "You traitor! You and that girl of yours have sold us out."

Both men snatched at their revolvers, but Wade was a trifle the quicker. Two shots rang out; and Fair crumpled down.

All about sounded the click of revolvers. But Wade did not hear them or did not heed them. "It's true!" he yelled. "Word's just come from Jim Barker. Fair's girl is at Lobo ville with that man we were chasing today. He's a ranger or somethin'. She's mashed on him; and she's sold us out."

"That's a lie!" Hot-faced, furious, Green broke through the crowd. "That man's not a ranger or anything like it. He's Bob's cousin, come from the East to take her home with him and keep her out of Barker's clutches. Wade took her with him the other night to sell her to Barker. He tried to play a dirty trick on her at the J-B ranch, an' Go Ahead dropped in just in time to stop him and make monkeys of him an'—"

"Crack!" Green's voice broke—stopped. Desperately he tried to draw his gun. But Wade's bullet had gone too true. Midway of the effort he crumpled down beside Fair.

From the crowd a yell of rage sounded. But before action could follow, another man sprang forward, hands uplifted. "Hold on," he yelled. "Don't shoot! If we've been sold out we've got somthin' else to do besides killing each other. Don't kill any more till we know. We'll need all the men we've got if the doughboys are after us."

The words came as a douche of cold water to the maddened men, recalling them to a realization of their own danger. "That's right, Amos," cried a single voice. "What's up? Make Wade tell us!" And a roar of agreement went up.

Wade's passion still was high. "Bob's sold us out," he raved. "Barker sends word that she has, an' Green has just owned up to it. Barker says he knows that Bob has told this Go Ahead most everything; but he's not sure she's told him how to find the Roost yet or that he's passed it on to the soldiers. He and she are stayin' at Bridget's tonight, an' if we can get there before daylight we can catch 'em asleep and end things for good and all. Then the doughboys can go plump to; they ain't never found the Roost an' they never will till somebody shows 'em the way. Who'll go with me to get 'em?"

THE STATE FAIR

Another state fair has passed in review and those who attended have given it rightful praise. Others have said as usual, "Just like all other fairs."

This may be true that the fair this year resembles those of other years but at the same time we would not want an entirely new program. In other respects we would say the fair has been a success and should be patronized by the people of Ohio as one of the most worthy institutions of the state.

MOVING DAY

Last Thursday was moving day for the Record and we are now open for business in our new location at 14 South Oakley avenue.

After 11 years of service in the old location at 2354 West Broad street it was found necessary to grow with the Hilltop. The first step toward this growth was taken Thursday when we moved to the present location. The next step will be within a few weeks when a new web press will be installed.

All of which means that we believe in the Hilltop and wish to continue to grow with it and give it a better community paper.

BACK TO SCHOOL

A back to school movement is being enacted in the city this week and indications are that the enrollment will surpass that of last year by several hundred.

Every year the school population grows and new demands are made for money with which to run the public schools. It means more money on the tax list but it also means better advantages for an education for the thousands of children of the city. Therefore it is a good investment.

The addition to John Burroughs elementary school is ready for occupancy and, this relieves the crowded conditions present there last year. The new West High school will be completed by the next semester. In a short time there will no longer be a need for half-day sessions.

We extend our congratulations to the Linden News upon the recent change in the size of their paper. Linden community has a paper they may well be proud of.

Another sign of honesty in this age is the fellow who finds a pocketbook containing money and goes to the trouble of advertising to find the owner.

They say the greatest job of the average American is to find something to do on Sunday, the day of rest. Likewise there were many who labored to keep from resting on Labor Day.

School children have at least something to look forward to. The opening of school brings Christmas a little nearer.

The Sandman Story

Martha Martin

THE BOY AND HIS DOG

"I'm only a little white dog. I'm not very large. In fact I'm really little, really small.

"I'm not particularly beautiful. In fact I don't believe I'd even be called pretty.

"My hair is shaggy and somewhat curly though it is more apt to look snarly than curly.

"Still, my master does the best he can with it. It is difficult hair with which to do anything.

"But it doesn't matter to me that I am not a big creature. It doesn't matter to me that I am not beautiful. It doesn't matter to me that my hair isn't pretty.

"Nor does it matter to my master. That is the best of all.

"My master is a fine boy. He goes to school. He studies lessons out of many books. It is surprising to see how many books he studies and surely he will be very wise when he grows up.

"When I was only a wee dog, no more than a puppy, I believe I tore up a school book once and chewed some of it.

"Probably I swallowed some knowledge then. But it has never been of any use to me and it has never been of any help to me.

"My Hair Is Shaggy and Somewhat Curly."

"I don't know about anything because of that book. What I know I have learned because of the training imparted by my master and my own good common sense which has been handed down to one dog after another for generation after generation.

"Of course, I do not mean that learning has been handed to us in our paws. I mean that as an expression to let you know, if you don't already, that dogs 'inherit' as they say, certain qualities.

"We used to have some wolf ancestors years and years ago, they say, and the way we bury bones and find them again comes from the old wolf strain in us which bids us save some food for a rainy day.

"Now I don't mean actual rainy day.

"That is just an expression which means a day when things aren't at their best and when it is well to have a little something saved for such a time.

"But, oh, the best of all is the way my master loves me and treats me.

"In the summer time he goes to play in a park near by. In that park there is a little drinking place. My master puts his head down over a spray of water which is always coming up and has a drink.

"But he doesn't forget about me. He holds me up in his arms and he takes the water in his hand and I lap it up from his hand.

"Of course, I can't get a great deal at a time this way and so he holds me in his arms under his left arm, to be exact, and I am given all I want.

"My tongue is so refreshed. He dampens it for me. And he doesn't think that just because there isn't a regular place for dogs to drink that I must wait until we get home.

"And every one loves to see my master's devotion to me. I can see that they think it is very sweet.

"No one minds if I have a drink from my master's hand at this little fountain for the water keeps bubbling up fresh all the time.

"But, oh, it is such a wonderful thing to be loved! It is such a wonderful thing to be looked after and cared for and petted and treated so well and so affectionately.

"It is so wonderful never to be forgotten!

"What does it matter if one is only a little white dog, not very large and not beautiful and not even pretty and whose hair is not the nicest in the world so long as one is the pet of a perfect young master?

"It doesn't matter in the least! That's what this little white dog says."

Spanish art has acquired a new center. Until a few years ago, Barcelona, the largest Spanish city on the Mediterranean, had no real museum of art. Its collections, housed in an old church, made a sorry show. Since that time a museum of art has been developed which in Spain ranks second only to the Prado in Madrid. Lately the museum has even undertaken excavation along the Mediterranean coast of Spain.

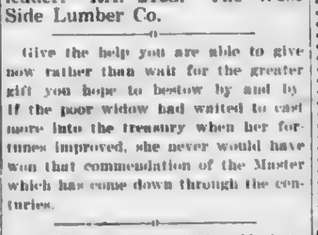
The Hilltop
By MRS. M. H. HOLYCROSS
186 Brinker Street

North, East, South or West
Even the birds say the Hilltop's best.

Mr. and Mrs. Robin,
(Who were newlyweds by the way,)
Decided to go to housekeeping
So they started out one day.
They talked the matter over
As all married people do,
And they studied each vicinity
All over the city they flew.
They didn't just care for the East End,
'Twas rather smoky there,
And they did so want to live
Where they could have fresh air.



So, on they flew, nor stopped to rest
'Till they'd covered the whole North Side,
But for this or that or the other reason,
They were not quite satisfied.
The Southern part of the city
Proved a disappointment, too:
They felt so very discouraged
They hardly knew what to do.
So they flew uptown for luncheon
And landed in a tree
In the State House grounds where the Squirrel Family
Invited them to tea.
They brought the subject up with them
As they munched a sweet confection,
And asked their views on living
In the crowded downtown section.

Said old Mr. Squarrel in his own sage way,
"Young folks, if you know what is best,
Just do what Horace Greely said,
Start right away and 'Go West';
Of course we have our home here,
But we're used to the girls and boys
Who come to watch and feed us,
And we're used to the traffic's noise;
But you two newlyweds no doubt
Will want to start your home
In a quiet restricted district
Where you can be alone."

So, bidding their new found friends goodbye,
They started again on their quest
Of a home in a suitable district
Located somewhere in the west.
They flew out to the Hilltop
And the farther they went they found
That they liked the West Side better
Than any part of the town.
They flew directly out West Broad
'Till they came to Brinker street
Which is in the Westgate addition,
And they thought it hard to beat.
They flew down Brinker 'till they came to a place
That suited them to a T;
And it just so happened the spot they picked
Was my very own elm tree.

They proceeded to take possession
As contented as you please,
And they built their love nest
Where the cooling western breeze
Stirs the branches gently,
And there they bill and coo:
They have a little secret,
But I know the secret too.
In this little home in the tree top,
Mrs. Robin quietly sets,
For she knows that very soon now
There'll be little robinettes;
Then she'll be so very happy
That she'll sing the whole day thru;
And Mr. Robin will be so proud,
He would I, wouldn't you?

Let's Do Our Best!

by O. Lawrence Hawthorne

"I don't see why it had to be Exactly right," he said to me.
"I did about the best I could!
Perhaps it wasn't very good,
But I was anxious to get done."
And then I answered, "Listen, Son!—

"Some days it seems a waste of time
To work so long to make a rhyme,
Or find a word that will convey
Exactly what I wish to say.
Sometimes I sit and wonder, too,
If something 'almost right' will do

"Perhaps no one would ever note
The careless way in which I wrote.
But if we fail to do our best—
No matter what may be the test—
We lose a satisfaction, Son,
That in no other way is won!

"To do 'about the best' you can
Will not make you the sort of man
I'm sure that you would like to be.
So, when you do a task for me,
To have you stick and see it through Means much to me—but more to you!"

OAKLAND DEALERS IN NATIONAL MEETINGS

In preparation for what will probably be the greatest selling year in Oakland history, a nation-wide serie of dealer meetings is being conducted this week by the Oakland Motor Car company.

Under the direction of district managers and field staffs, meetings are being staged at 125 local points in all quarters of the country for the 5000 men who make up the Oakland domestic dealer organization.

Dramatic methods are employed to put across the company message. Stage properties, special lighting of feets, draperies, lantern slides and other theatrical equipment are employed to bring forcibly to the audience the newest plans and latest developments in automotive merchandising.

The Oakland sales year began on August 1 when all field heads were summoned to the factory to meet with W. R. Tracy, vice president in charge of sales, for the outline of company methods to be carried out during the current selling year.

Five or more dealers' meetings are being held in every one of the 24 districts into which the country has been divided. Each district manager, assisted by his district office staff, has charge of the meetings in his territory.

How It Started

By JEAN NEWTON

"BRAND NEW"

The expression "bran new" or more correctly "brand new" to describe something that is quite new and has never been used, is a good example of the wealth of color that lies concealed in language and is disclosed when we trace to their origins some of our most commonly used words and expressions.

The modern use of "brand new" takes its origin in the Old world "brand" meaning a torch, which retains its significance today, its derivation being from the Anglo-Saxon "to burn."

An old expression familiar in Shakespeare was "fire new," the reference being to the obvious newness of metals just from the fire. The following is a quotation from "Richard III," which illustrates the old use of the phrase:

"Your fire-new stamp of honor is scarce current."

From "fire-new" it is easily comprehensible how "brand new" came into being with its obvious significance, buried from view in modern speech.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

TAKING IT EASY

For the last three weeks I have been stopping at a large hotel in a semi-tropical country.

Their idea in coming to this climate is to lengthen their lives—and some of them do it.

• • •

They come here year after year, arriving about the time that it gets cold in the regions where they live in summer, and departing as soon as the rests have gone away at home.

There are remarkable islands, piled up by the sea, just off the shore, and made almost wholly of coral sand, or mud composed of disintegrated shells.

There are palm trees of many varieties and inland are clear rivers, rising from springs which come from no one knows where. In these rivers are many varieties of fish and shell fish, and on their banks are turtles and alligators.

But the people at this hotel know nothing and care nothing about coral formations, or palm growths or the action of the sea.

• • •

They are for the most part people of little reading and little thought, and unless there is something arranged for their entertainment all the time they are miserable.

When cheap picture shows, such as they would never go to see at home come to the nearby village, they throng to see them.

A man with a road machine at work on a highway nearby attracted thirty or forty of them and kept them interested a whole morning.

Those who can play golf, do play much more than they need for exercise, and more than is really good for them.

They are really people to be pitied. They have abundant wealth in money, but not enough intellectual wealth to enable them really to enjoy taking it easy.

They have labored long—some of them—to gain fortunes, and now that the fortunes are in hand, they can buy nothing with them which they really want.

• • •

Here at the hotel also is a college professor, whose health is broken, and who has enough means to stay here for a couple of months.

Out of the country round he gets a world of information and entertainment.

He is out all day looking at wonders of nature not to be found in his own locality, and soaking in health with the sunshine.

He would be happy anywhere, for he has learned how to take it easy—he has that kind of a mind.

No man who does not know how to take it easy and get recreation out of it, ever ought to retire from the business he knows and understands and enjoys.

GROWTH OF HAIR

When the individual is in good physical condition and the scalp is in good condition the hair should grow from three-eighths to three-quarters of an inch a month until it has reached the length of 12 to 14 inches, when its rate of growth is reduced one-half. Hair grows faster in warm weather than in cold and during the daytime rather than at night.

HOW TO PRESERVE THE WATERMELON

The watermelon enthusiast may have his favorite fruit in the middle of winter if he will go to the little extra trouble of preserving the whole watermelon by painting it with waterproof paint, and then keeping it in the basement in a cool place until time for use.

If one cannot secure a waterproof paint that he is sure of, a good waterproof coating may be made at home by mixing resin oil, 50 parts; resin, 30 parts, and white soap, 9 parts. This should be applied warm on the surface of the melon. A rather thick solution should be spread on it, to be sure that all the surface is to be protected. If the melon is whole, and there are no abrasions in the skin, the coating covers the hard shell so that no air or moisture can get to the inner absorptive layers of the melon.

Another recipe is to take 1 part of gluten, mix it with 1½ parts of glycerin and heat it at about 248 degrees F. A shiny mass will be secured which is not only waterproof, but also water-repelling.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. WALKER

WATCHING THE CLOCK

How far back the measurement of times goes is lost in the unrecorded events of prehistoric times. It is altogether probable that early man reckoned the passage of time by the length of shadows cast on the ground and later perhaps an instrument similar to the hour glass served to measure the divisions of the day.

Certain it is that clocks as we know them were not invented until the Ninth century and the credit for the idea is given to a man of Verona named Pacificus.

Like all things mortal the clock had faults as well as virtues. Before the hours were automatically measured for him man worked until he was tired and then "called it a day." With the coming of the clock he began measuring his efforts by time and acquired the habit of "watching the clock."

There is one certain thing: no creature not endowed with more than two eyes can watch his job and the clock at the same time.

When a man is looking at a clock his sole interest is the answer to the question, "What time is it?"

The most efficient office in Washington during the war was one particular division of the navy department. In that big room there was neither a calendar nor a clock.

The head of that bureau said to the writer: "I do not want any one here who cares what day it is or what time it is. The measure of a day here is the finishing of the work in hand, then we can all go home."

No truly in-earnest worker was ever able to quite finish his day's task. There always remains some portion upon which he would like to spend a little longer time.

The reason the not-in-earnest worker watches the clock is because his heart is not in his labors and his pride is not in their results.

Don't be a clock watcher. Work while you work with so much energy, so much interest, so much intensity that time doesn't matter.

Play when you play with so much abandon, so much enjoyment, so much enthusiasm that the day passes without your measurement.

The man who measures time in cycles or circles is wrong.

Time must be computed in a straight line along which there is no backward motion.

You can never have yesterday again. If you wanted it, try and make today do double duty. But you can't do that if you watch the clock.

FIRST TO WEIGH EARTH

Nevil Maskelyne, an Englishman who died in 1811, discovered how to weigh the earth, which he achieved by watching, through a telescope, a plumbline hung down the side of a precipitous Scottish mountain.

And the weight is, to within a pound or two, 6,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 tons.

It was he who first set on foot the Nautical Almanack, one of the greatest aids to mariners since the Chinese emperor Hwang-ti, in 2634 B. C., invented the compass.

The Hilltop Record

Of Interest to the People of the Hilltop and Vicinity

EVEN though it is a little warm there is no reason why our minds can't run in football channels.

Vol. XII. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, September 13, 1928. No. 20

Dedicate New Bank Sept. 27th

Dedication and Opening to Be Sept. 27; Fall Festival on Sept. 28.

Exact date of the opening of the new Hilltop Bank building has been set for Thursday, Sept. 27, and the Fall Festival and openings of the Hilltop merchants will be on the following day and evening, Friday, Sept. 28.

Members of the Hilltop Business Men's association are co-operating with R. O. Harrison, manager of the bank, and officials of the First Citizen's Trust Co. to make the affair one of note for Hilltop people.

The bank will move to its new quarters and will open for business there on Monday, Sept. 24.

A luncheon for Hilltop business men will be held Tuesday, Sept. 25. The place of the luncheon has not been announced. An orchestra will be in the bank during the evening of the formal opening.

Dedication exercises will be at 9 a. m. Thursday, Sept. 27.

The bank will sponsor a treasure chest and offer many valuable prizes. Keys to be tried in the treasure chest will be given to each home.

Many Hilltop merchants will take a part in the Fall Festival to be sponsored by the Hilltop Business Men's association on Friday night. Each store will provide souvenirs and entertainment in addition to the band that will be present in the business district during the evening. The main feature of the affair will be the number hunt. Each merchant will offer prizes and will have numbers in his store during the evening that will correspond to those passed to the houses earlier in the week.

Anyone having a number on the card passed to the home that corresponds to the number in the store may claim the prize.

HILLTOP SCHOOLS GROW TO SET NEW HIGH MARKS

Enrollment of the Hilltop schools continued to climb during the early part of the week and West Broad Street school continued to hold its lead, having increased total number enrolled to 1212 Tuesday afternoon.

Other schools also showed an increase. These figures are the highest in the history of the schools.

Crowded conditions are very noticeable at West Broad according to Miss Harriet Judd, principal. The building was meant to accomodate 800 and is now over 400 above its quota. There are 186 in the sixth grades alone. Two classes are on half time schedule, and two portables are in use.

Highland has 1190 enrolled of which 925 are in the Junior High school and 265 in the elementary. West High has 996 in all its departments.

The first regular meeting of the West Broad P.-T. A. which was announced for this Friday has been postponed until Friday, Sept. 21. It will be held at the school at 2:30. Plans for the year will be outlined.

An exhibition of the garden products of the public school of the city will be held at East High school Friday and Saturday. Prizes to the amount of $1000 have been donated by F. Miller of the Godman Shoe Co.

Subway Work Gets Started

No Promise of Relief on Detour; Business Houses Suffer.

West Broad street in the vicinity of the Big Four R. R. is completely torn up with the excavation for the new subway which is progressing rapidly. Steam shovels on either side of the railroad track are working their way toward the tracks leaving an incline that will form the bed of the automobile roadway when completed.

Motorists continue to be routed around by Westgate park, throwing the traffic more than one mile from its natural course. Business houses in the vicinity are feeling the effects of the lessened traffic.

A switch has been installed east of the subway in the street car line. This has added to the torn up condition of the street. No indications have been made as to when the shorter detour will be placed in service. Short cuts across the fields are dangerous to automobile springs because of many rough spots. Several report broken springs.

Wrong School

This business of starting to school is certainly strenuous for some small tots and for one little girl it meant a delayed lunch and much worry as to where she belonged.

Tuesday noon the child was found on S. Ogden avenue near Broad street and asked for her home. No one knew her. A lady of the neighborhood took her to West Broad school but no record of her could be found. A call to John Burroughs resulted in locating her.

When she viewed the school she exclaimed, "That's my school."

Flood Lights Make Hilltop all "Lit Up"

Another part of the Hilltop is all "lit up" literally speaking, and those who pass across country in ships at night may view the Hilltop as being the brightest spot in the city.

Columbus Airport is the section we have reference to and the illumination comes from the newly installed lights on the field that make it safe for night flying.

And furthermore another noticeable fact that concerns the airport is that the first complete night take-off and landing in the city was made at our local port Monday night, when Paul Winningham, pilot and instructor at the field, made a trial flight to test the efficiency of the lights.

Paul confided to friends that the feeling after he had left the ground was different from that experienced during the day but nevertheless he was able to take-off and land without any difficulty.

The flood light on the field is of the B. B. T. type at present but a set of four projector lights were to be installed about Wednesday to determine the relative value of the two types of field lighting.

Run way, boundary and obstruction lights are now in use at the field. A field beacon will be installed in the near future.

Officials at the field have a new Ryan monoplane of the type of the "Spirit of St. Louis" at the field. It will be used for long commercial flights.

WEST SIDE STREET CARS RETURNED TO HIGH ST.

Remembering promises of city council members made back in 1926, to the effect that the rerouting of West Broad cars off High street was the first step toward a city wide program of that nature to destroy the label "High Street, Ohio," West Siders appealed to council members Monday night and won their case. West Broad and Cemeteries cars were ordered back on High street.

This change of car lines came as the result of a similar act of rerouting passed by council a few weeks ago when they voted to put Main-Neil cars back over their old route after having been run on Front street for a short time.

Columbus again resumes its old label as being a one track city after the action of council Monday night. It is believed that within a short time another appeal will be made to have a general rerouting of all cars in order to shift the traffic to more than one street. Business men in the outlying sections of the city are favoring the establishment of a loop in the downtown district.

Councilman Fred P. Zimpfer stated that the Rail-Light Co. considers a loop uneconomical and a great expense. No action toward the establishment of the loop was taken by council.

Councilman H. W. Miller, who voted to have Main-Neil cars ordered back on High street was also in favor of similar action for the West Broad cars. Three councilmen were against the plan.

Fred L. Sulsberger spoke in favor of the rerouting and was instrumental in bringing the matter before council.

Eight Streets Will Get Gas

Installation of New Lines Will Serve 681 Additional Homesites.

Eight additional streets and 681 additional home sites will be supplied with gas for domestic use with the installation of new gas mains in Westgate park in the near future. Plans have been completed for the installation.

Contract for the gas service was made with the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. The company will begin laying 3900 feet of eight-inch pipeline in the alley south of West Broad street near the corner of Sylvan avenue within a few days. The main feeder line will extend north to the alley between Demorest avenue and Derrer road and south to Girard street. Lines for other Westgate streets will require about 1400 feet of six-inch pipe and 5300 feet of four-inch line.

Gas connections have been made in 332 other homes in Westgate during the last year.

The new work will cost about $11,000 and will require about three weeks with 30 men and a trenching machine on duty.

NEW COFFEE SHOP WILL SOON OPEN

A new innovation for the Hilltop, where you may drop in and get a cup of coffee, which according to reports, will make the wife envious; where will be served real pan cakes, the kind you can eat each day for 365 days; where you can get delicious lunches and toasted sandwiches—All this can be had at Aunt Addie's Coffee Shop, which will be opened to the public early next week at 2393 W. Broad St.

However, the wife will not be envious of her husband because he can get a good cup of coffee away from home, for this same coffee will be for sale in bulk (roasted fresh each day) and she can buy it and have the same delicious cup of coffee for hubby right at home. Or if she wishes she may buy the coffee by the pint, quart or any amount she wishes already percolated and ready to serve.

Real home made pies, baked by Aunt Addie, which just can't be beat, will also be a part of the menu.

ANOTHER STREET CAR EPISODE

West Broad and Cemeteries street cars will again be routed over High street, as the result of action of council Monday night when by a vote of four to three, rerouting was ratified.

This action put the street car reroutes in the city back where they were years ago. When council broke faith with the West Side people and failed to reroute other car lines off High street they put themselves in a position where they could do nothing else but return all cars back on their old routes.

The rerouting question undoubtedly is not dead, and will come up again at some future time and from past experience it would seem that council would do well to take into conference representatives from the several sections of the city when the question does again come up, thus avoiding any dissatisfaction such as has been evidenced in the past.

WHY THE DELAY OF LIGHTS?

It is evident that a traffic light is needed on West Broad street at Park avenue. It is dangerous to pedestrians as well as meaning they must lose much time by waiting for the traffic to thin to the point where they may cross the street.

We understand that a light has been appropriated for this busy spot but as yet no steps have been taken to install it. This delay means a waste of time for people who have business in this section. The installation of the light may also be a means of preventing injury or death to those who would cross the street.

Another of those peculiar animals that hasn't any name is the person that always complains about what an organization isn't doing and yet never is on hand with his services or advice.

If you haven't attended the Franklin county fair yet you have today and tomorrow in which to do it, and Hilliards is just a short distance away.

The Spectator

Machine methods of production give us more consumptive goods.

"With the opening of school everything begins to hum."

ATTENTION NEEDED

A very noticeable thing in a nearby neighborhood has been called to the attention of the members of the club and we discussed it at length when we chanced to meet one evening last week.

It appears that a man in the neighborhood we have reference to has been neglecting the care of his invalid and nearly crazed wife. The reason for her condition is not known but she appears to be on the verge of collapse and often in her crying and nervous actions makes some of the children terrified. A young daughter has charge of the house and attends school. All the wants of her mother must be satisfied by the child.

Says Red Pullin, who brought the case to our attention, "It is evident that the woman needs better care and should receive attention. Her life is being gradually wasted away and the proper authorities should handle the case."

And so the club members have taken it upon themselves to report the case and await action.

SCHOOL TIME

Professor Tittle has returned from his vacation and is about ready to resume his duties at the university with the opening of the fall quarter there. Public schools have started again and everything seems to be a heat of activity.

Says Captain Sentry, "The summer months are more or less drags on us all. Fall and winter are the times we really accomplish things. Vacations are the main attractions of the summer and in truth should be partaken by all who have routine work. But during the summer the churches are slack and all other organizations decline in attendance. With the opening of school in the fall everything begins to hum with activity."

TURNING ROMAN?

All the glory that was Rome was apparent at the recent Ohio State Fair during the last afternoon performance before 12,000 spectators who had gathered in the grandstand to witness the "Congress of Daredevils."

We read of the early days of the founding of Christianity and shudder at the hardships of those who were forced into the arena to fight with gladiators or be torn to pieces by lions.

But the modern conception of how to thrill a crowd in a modern arena is that of the promoter who offered a few dollars in cash to two men to drive their cars head on. It must have been a good picture of what happens in our common auto collisions. However it was but little different from old Roman times.

CURING RUSSIA

Treaty after treaty has been signed by nations of the world but in most cases we notice that war continues when the warring nations have rested sufficiently to become able to stage another fray.

The idea of war sounds out of place to intelligent minded persons who have experienced the havoc of such just a few years back. But careful reading of the daily newspapers will bring to sight the fact that there are nations who are not far enough advanced to realize the steps they are about to take.

While discussing the matter a few nights ago, Captain Sentry predicted that the next major combat of world interest would have its beginning in Russia. Says he, "There is but one cure for war. Experiencing it and education are all that will bring Russia to her knees. The populace of Russia is not educated to the extent that they know the economical and humanitary value of peace. An intense educational campaign just after they have suffered defeat in their next combat will bring the millions of that nation into the ranks of the peace abiding peoples."

NO DIFFERENCE

A column writer of a local paper has sounded a note that many of us are prone to forget about election time. Says he, "All that will really happen no matter who is elected, is that the country will muddle along about the same as usual."

There is more truth than fiction in his statement but it is hard to make the average person believe such. Strong headed Republicans believe the nation will go down to destruction if a Democrat is elected. Democrats who have felt the blow of being defeated in the past years at election time will point to unemployment and labor conditions and blame the Republican administration.

In truth it would be the same regardless of the party in power. It is human for the greatest number to receive the greatest benefits at all times and it is not within the power of any one man to satisfy the wants of a whole nation. Therefore there will continue to be discontent until a man of greater power than any human holds the reins.

"Trade Your Smiles."

Sawdust is so useful industrially that large concerns have been established to gather, classify and sell it. Hickory sawdust is used to cure meat; oak, mahogany, and other hardwood sawdust for filling plaster board and making composition flooring; and spruce and fir sawdust for packing [illegible].

Saturday last day of Seiller's Fall Festival Sale.

Florida is planning to build an Overseas Highway from Miami to Key West, across the Florida Keys. This will give an avenue of travel around the entire state and will develop the areas which are as yet but little known.

There is still considerable unexplored territory in the world. Russian explorers have found a six-hundred-mile mountain range rising from trackless wastes in Siberia; and scientists interested in the ancient Mayan are still searching for ruins of Mayan cities in Mexico and Central America which flourished there fifteen centuries ago.

A BOUQUET

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I picked my mother a bouquet
(Remember "boo," not "bow," to say)
And mother really thought it was
The funniest bouquet, because
It had a hollyhock, a rose,
And dahlias, one or two of those,
A nice nasturtium, and a red,
Red clover from the clover bed.

A black-eyed susan I put in,
A white, white daisy, tall and thin,
Flow'rs from our garden, and our shelves,
And some that, well, just grew themselves.
Yes, every color you can think
About I had—both red and pink,
And blue and yellow and the rest,
The ones that looked the prettiest.

I took my mother that bouquet
(Remember "boo," not "bow," to say)
And mother laughed, and said, "My dear,
It seems that everything is here."
I said, "Of course; for when they knew
That I was bringing this to you,
I couldn't bring you only some,
For every flow'r asked to come."

Two-thirds of the men shouted acclaim; the rest were hesitant. On the outskirts of the crowd the wailing of the women sounded.

Wade guessed that some were holding back. "How many won't go?" he yelled. "How many sneaks and cowards have we got here? Speak up now! Show your colors."

No one spoke. To speak out alone was to face instant death, every one knew it. And to speak out with others would probably be to provoke a battle whose result no man could guess.

Wade's lips curled back from his teeth. "Nobody, eh?" he cried. "All want to go? All right, we'll all go. Get your guns and horses and all the cartridges you can pack. Be back in five minutes. Any man that tries to hide and sneak out of going will be dragged out and hanged. Understand that, all of you. Now go, quick!"

Like a covey of quail flushed by the dogs the men scattered. And in less than five minutes they were back again, mounted and ready. Wade, who was a born leader whatever else he may have been, rasped his orders. "Omaha Kit, Broncho Smith, Two-Gun Neal and Toady Pete will stay here to man the machine gun and hold the entrance. Black Ames will come along as my lieutenant. Where's Ames?"

"Here."

"All right! Start your men. Get 'em outside the valley. I'll follow as quick as I see that nobody's skulkin'."

Probably nobody skulked, though Wade made no attempt to search the camp to see. He believed that his words would be sufficient warning, and in any event he had no time to spare. Close behind the last man he rode out beneath the waterfall.

To the top of the column he raced. "Straight ahead, Ames," he ordered. "You know the way. I'll hang behind an' see that no white-livered pup slips away, get to the North Arroyo before dawn. Stop there while I see Barker. Go!"

It had taken five hours for Barker's messengers to reach the Roost; and it took all of five more for Wade's cavalcade to get to Loboville. Through the long ride Wade hung behind, now on one flank and now on the other, shepherding his men with sudden death lurking in his eyes. If any of the riders had thought to slip away they noted his vigilant figure and thought better of it probably hoping for a safer chance later. The band reached the arroyo as strong as when it left the Roost.

Long before it arrived, Barker, almost as mad as Wade with anxiety, and denied the relief that Wade had obtained from vigorous exercise and imperative watchfulness, had quit his office and hurried to the rendezvous and back, not once but many times.

Barker had, in fact, more to lose than Wade or any other member of the bandit troop. Few of the latter were generally known and few of them had any important possessions to lose. If the worst came to the worst they could scatter to the four winds, leaving little behind. The Mexican border, close at hand, offered easy passage to safety. Some of them, perhaps, had become attached to their home and women and children at the Roost and would regret losing them; but these were few and practically all of them would soon get over their regret.

Barker, on the other hand, had everything to lose. Years of success had made him overconfident; he had thought that he could never be displaced; and he had made no provision for the future by hiding or investing his booty and graft elsewhere. And his doom had come upon him so suddenly that he had had no time to remove it. Only that morning he had been a king, ruler over this domain, with none to dispute his power. And then, in the space of a score of hours, Go Ahead had swept the ground from under his feet and brought him face to face with utter ruin.

Half a day longer, if Go Ahead lived, would complete his destruction—and, even if Go Ahead did not live, the web about him had become so close that the most that he could hope to do was to save something from the wreck. Backward and forward, from office to arroyo, he wandered, straining his eyes and his ears for anything that would betoken the coming of the band.

And when at last it came he was there to meet it.

"Wade!" he called. "That you? . . . . Bully! The sun'll be up in half an hour. You ain't got a minute to lose."

"Everything all right?"

"Yes. All right if you move quick. They're at Bridget's, fast asleep. Move quiet. The soldiers are at the other end of the town, but you don't want to wake them."

Wade shook his bridle reins. "You goin' with us?" he questioned.

Five minutes later Bridget's was surrounded, and Wade, with half a dozen helpers was raging through the rooms, holding up the sleeping men, questing the place for Go Ahead and Stella—and not finding them.

At last he found Bridget. And she laughed at him.

"Faith!" she said. "It's too late entirely you are. I'm thinkin' that it's too late you always are in dealin' with Go Ahead an' Bob. It's half a dozen hours since they went away."

Bridget shrugged her shoulders. She could make allowance for Wade's condition and for his disappointment. "Search for yourself," she invited. "But you won't find them. It's the truth I'm tellin' you."

"Where did they go?"

"Sure, they didn't tell me." The words were literally true. They had not told her; she had told them.

"Wade's pistol went up. "Tell me quick!" he ordered. "Tell or—"

"They didn't tell me! Sure, wouldn't they be the foolish ones to tell me when they knew you were comin' to ask?"

A SUCCESSFUL SIX NOW WINNING EVEN GREATER SUCCESS

SPECTACULAR SUCCESS is proving it Chief of the Sixes

In the tremendous success which Pontiac Six is enjoying is ample reason for designating this great General Motors car "Chief of the Sixes." Never has any new car risen so rapidly in the estimation of motor car buyers for during the first six months of 1928, over 136,000 Pontiacs were sold—the largest volume ever achieved by any car during the first half of its third year in production! This great public acceptance tells more of what Pontiac offers at $745 than even the most complete listing of such features as Fisher bodies, 186 cu. in. engine, the G-M-R cylinder head, cross-flow radiator, foot-controlled headlights, coincidental lock, etc., etc.! Come in for a ride today and learn why its sales sweep ever upward.

2-Door Sedan, $745; Coupe, $745; Sport Roadster, $745; Phaeton, $775; Cabriolet, $795; 4 Door Sedan, $825; Sport Landaulet Sedan, $875. Oakland All-American Six, $1045 to $1265. All prices at factory. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include lowest handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rates.

Leases Truck Farm

Warden P. E. Thomas announces that the state has leased the Herbert Demorest farm south of Camp Chase, to be used by the state as a prison farm for truck gardening. The farm contains 188 acres.

The lease is effective Oct. 1 and has an option of renewal of from one to 10 years. Thirty prisoners will be detailed at once to prepare the ground. W. W. Zimmerman of Camp Chase will manage the farm. Warden Thomas plans to operate it on the basis of the Derrer farm, which he says is a profitable investment.

Americans are supplying several thousand natives of Mexico with shoes each year. Probably you have helped in this undertaking by discarding your auto tires before they are totally worn to threads. The tires are used in this country for from ten to twenty thousand then are used by the natives of parts in Mexico for many more miles after they are made up into sandals. This is an economy that fashions in this country prohibit.

Hilltop Bank to Occupy New Home Next Week

Formal Opening Thursday, Sept. 27, with All-Day Program—Building Designed to Care for Future Growth—Old Personnel Retained.

A new Hilltop Bank at 2884 W. Broad St., which will be formally opened on Thursday, Sept. 27, is the second new branch bank building completed in the branch building program of the First Citizens Trust Company. This new building is valued at $75,000 and has been built sufficiently large to accomodate $5,000,000 in deposits. The First Citizens Trust Company recognizes the wonderful possibilities for future growth on the Hilltop and the new bank is designed to take care of many future years of growth.

The interior design of the building shows a distinct Spanish influence, with its vaulted ceilings and its antique iron fixtures. It is designed after the Seamens Bank for Savings, of New York City, which took first prize in the national Architect's competition of three years ago.

Special attention has been paid to lighting facilities. It will not be necessary to use artificial light except on the darkest days, and all of the cages will be equipped with the newest type of channel lighting, which attempts to approximate daylight.

The bank is so laid out that individual responsibility can be centered on each employe. Each cage is a separate unit and will be entirely controlled by locks so that only the employee occupying the cage will have access to it. Separate steel chests are also provided in the vault in order that each employe may keep his own cash entirely separate from the others.

The safety deposit facilities will be equal to any in Columbus. Space has been provided for one thousand boxes and there are plenty of separate booths in which each customer may go over the contents of his deposit box at his leisure.

One of the unique features of this new bank is a conference room for customers, which is reached by means of a stairway from the lobby. A table and chairs will be provided for the convenience of those customers who have use for this space.

The building will be steam-heated and the boilers will be fired by an automatic stoker which will maintain an even temperature at all times.

Every facility of a down-town bank has been provided for the convenience of the Hilltop and we are proud to accept our share of responsibility in the community development.

Annual Camp Is a Huge Success

Young People of Glenwood M. E. Church Enjoy Outing at Camp Henderson.

The fourth annual Labor Day camp of the young people of Glenwood M. E. church was again a success. This was made possible through the united efforts of about 35 campers who were present at least part of the time. This outing takes place each year in Camp Henderson, a camp situated on the farm of the Methodist Children's home at Worthington.

As in former years the camp opened on the Saturday afternoon preceding Labor Day.

The camp fire service Saturday night was conducted by Miss Margaret Huffman. This service was concluded by a candle-light procession from the camp fire to the cottages.

A snipe hunt was later organized and the bag holders placed in advantageous positions. In the wee small hours these same bag holders straggled back into camp and reported that the snipes didn't seem to appreciate their legs because they hadn't seen a single snipe. The gloomy prospects of a snipeless breakfast were forgotten when a box of delicious cookies appeared. It was reported that these cookies had come from Athens.

A very strenuous day was spent Sunday beginning with setting-up exercises at 7:30. The morning was spent in a short Sunday school service followed by a Treasure hike. Sunday afternoon Dr. George F. Barber conducted an interesting service followed by a "quiet hour." That evening after singing numerous camp songs two "stunts" were put on and the camp razed road. After a short talk by one of the campers everyone was ready to enjoy a peaceful and much needed rest.

COAT HANGERS FROM MAGAZINES

Excellent coat and dress hangers can be made from medium-sized magazines which have been read, by rolling them and tying in the center firmly with string or ribbon. They serve as a good padding to the tailored coat so that it does not lose its shape at the shoulders.

The small-sized magazine covered with a pad or single layer of pretty cretonne is an excellent protector for

A very quick way to warm a cold bed for an invalid is to keep magazines on the radiator during the day, and when retiring time comes a few of these put into the bed will quickly warm it, doing a more extensive piece of work than the old-time hot iron. Paper holds its heat for a considerable period and makes an excellent insulation against cold.

Excellent paper "coal" for the stove may be made by soaking old magazines or paper in water and shaping into balls to dry.

Study Music

Prof. Walter L. King, 54 N. Burgess Ave., who is teaching his eleventh season on the Hilltop in Piano, Theory, Harmony, Composition and Counterpoint has organized the "King School of Piano."

The existence of a great many different methods is positive proof that one and the same method is not applicable to all students. Prof. King, realizing this, has studied the different courses and methods taught by our leading music schools, employs them all, selecting the most suitable one, or parts of it, for every student.

"King School of Piano" is open to pupils of all ages and grades. The course is divided into four divisions and Certificates and Diplomas given when each division is completed.

Prof. King is a graduate with his degree, Bachelor of Music, and has studied extensively with some of the well known artists, Gorno of Cincinnati, Constance Von Sternberg of Philadelphia, Pa., and others.

BANK TO MOVE TO NEW HOME

President Charles R. Shields announced, Wednesday, that the same personnel would be retained, and from time to time, added to as the bank grew. Mr. R. O. Harrison, manager; C. G. Wilcox, assistant manager; Willard Young, teller; Elmer Hegenberger, teller; Emmet Story, bookkeeper; Burd Miller, bookkeeper, and Mary DeGood, stenographer.

Continuing the policy of vacation months, the bank will be open Saturday afternoon instead of Saturday night. This has proven very satisfactory to the customers of the bank and it is the bank's policy to consider customer convenience first.

The bank opening on Thursday, Sept. 27, is in connection with a fall festival of the Hilltop Business Men's association. Members of this association are assisting in the bank opening by serving in different committee capacities. The officers and directors met with officials of the bank in planning the opening and all evidenced their interest by accepting definite tasks in connection with this important Hilltop affair.

The opening will start off with a dedication exercise at 9:00 a. m. in charge of Hilltop ministers. Throughout the day a reception committee will welcome the people who visit the bank, in the afternoon and evening an orchestra will play.

The trio from the Hilltop School of Music will furnish music for the opening.

One of the interesting features of this bank opening will be the Treasure Chest; keys will be distributed to thousands of Hilltop homes, ten of which keys will open the lock on the chest. The following prizes are to be awarded:

1. $10.00 Savings account
2. $ 5.00 Savings account
3. $ 5.00 Savings account
4. $5.00 Savings account
4. $ 5.00 Savings account

SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY DAYS

September is the month of Rally Days for all the Sunday schools and properly is this fall month selected. With people back from vacations and children back in school it is a time when the attendance of the Sunday school and churches should be swelled.

Many Hilltop churches have planned Rally Days for this month. You will profit by giving them your support and being present at the Sunday school services. Also take a friend with you.

WEEDY LOTS

It isn't too late to start a clean-up campaign around the home. Just looking about one can notice unsightly weed covered lots in the residental sections of the Hilltop. Even though the fall months are here and winter will soon be with us again there is no reason why the lots should be allowed to ruin the appearance of the community throughout the winter.

Real estate dealers who have vacant lots for sale would do much to hasten their sale by cleaning them off.

Just look about you and see all the improvement on the Hilltop. For instance we point with pride to the new Hilltop Bank. Likewise a new church has opened during the past year and many business houses have remodeled their homes. A twelve-room addition to John Burroughs school and the new West High school makes this community an outstanding one of which we may be proud.

In denouncing the political parties a man may say he is neither carrying water for the elephant or pitching hay for the donkey but yet we feel that sooner or later he will grow tired of idleness and take up one of the jobs.

They've always said you can't beat the ponies and the dogs, but someone scored a knockout last week and caused the heads of these alleged sports to announce the closing of these tracks for this season.

One of the famous personages of the front page is John Coolidge, with the complete story of his love affairs and plans for the future. Prospective lovers may do well to follow these stories.

Babe Ruth refused to be photographed with Hoover but now he regrets, says the press. Possibly Babe figured they both couldn't be seen in one camera picture and later found out there was a swinging camera on the scene.

• • • •

Harvest time is here and already we have cut enough hay off our back lot to feed the horse population of our city it seems.

• • • •

We wonder what the marathon dancers over the country did on Labor Day?

• • • •

Regardless of politics when we hear the names Hoover and Smith we naturally think of vacuum cleaners and cough drops.

• • • •

Speaking of politics, Smith has one advantage over Hoover. Just glance at the city directories or phone books and compare the number of people of both families that will claim relationship and vote for their namesakes.

• • • •

Mayor Jimmie Walker says he has travelled 10,000 miles and hasn't been in a place where there was any difficulty to see and get liquor. We can't understand why he wants a change of laws unless he has turned to the side of the drys.

• • • •

If you would become rich by use of the pen, follow the style of Sinclair Lewis or H. L. Mencken and always write against what the general populace is favoring.

• • • •

All the travel ads of the periodicals call to mind the fact that we have something to look forward to in a trip around the world.

• • • •

The best example of a habit hard to break is shown by the telephone operator who tells you the line is busy before you give her the number you want.

• • • •

Another issue we never expected to enter into a political campaign is sex appeal, but Eleanor Glyn says the candidate who doesn't have "it" is out of the race.

• • • •

A local dance enthusiast says he doesn't like the "Byrd Hop" because he thinks it is a foul dance.

• • • •

"Hit by Auto" is becoming one of the most common phrases in newspaper language. The definition of news might be changed in this instance to a man hitting a car instead of a man biting a dog.

• • • •

Just above us in an empty stove pipe hole that is saying: "It won't be long now" and we realize that we'll soon be exercising on the old shovel again. In other words, winter is just around the corner.

• • • •

Speaking of winter, we aren't trying to be pessimistic at all, but are only trying to pep up the coal dealers who have been down in the mouth during the past two months.

• • • •

It's probably best that the hen that laid the golden egg was killed because she never could have laid enough eggs to go around and we are so found of eggs.

• • • •

The roughest sea Ruth Elder has tried to cross is the sea of matrimony and she seems to have succumbed in that endurance contest.

• • • •

Queer antics of the dogs and cows in a southern Ohio community revealed that they had partaken of too much whiskey mash. We are expecting the price of milk to take a jump in that community soon, if such continues.

• • • •

The big disadvantage of living in the city is readily realized at the time a garbage wagon parks before your door for an interval.

NEW KIND OF FRUIT

California is now producing for commercial uses the "Quetta nectarine," a new kind of fruit. It is described as having all the qualities of a first-class peach, but it has a smooth skin, bright coloring, and a rich aroma. The firm skin adds to the shipping quality of the fruit. The seeds for this nectarine were sent by an English officer in Quetta, in northwest India, to the United States Department of Agriculture. Only one plant from these produced desirable fruit, and to this a hardy Chinese wild-peach stock was budded. The department recommends this new fruit for culture in the cotton-growing states and in some of the central states.

"They didn't know it."

"Then why did they go away with the soldiers, leavin' two doughboys to satisfy whoever might be watchin' about the house? . . . Oh! You needn't be lookin' for them soldier boys; they went away an hour or two later. . . . It's beaten you are, an' if you'll take an old woman's advice the quicker you get away from here an' out of the country the better it'll be for you. An' that's the God's truth."

A man—one of Barker's men—burst into the room. "Barker's here looking for you, Captain," he cried. "Somebody's just 'phoned from the ranch that the man an' Bob are there."

CHAPTER XII

While Wade and his men were riding to Loboville, Go Ahead and Stella were riding eastward, with Caesar at their heels.

Stella had been mad to get away from the town. The terror that had seized her while she waited with the soldiers outside Barker's office had not left her. Barker had been beaten again—beaten by herself this time; and Go Ahead believed that he was done for. But Stella had heard too many tales of the sheriff's methods to credit this; in the old days she had enjoyed these stories, but now the memory of them terrified her. That Barker would never again attack Go Ahead directly—this she believed; but that he would try to assassinate him she did not doubt.

How he would set about it she could not guess; if she could have guessed she would have been less troubled. That he had already summoned Wade to do the work for him she of course did not know, any more that she knew that the hotel was to be attacked before dawn. She knew only that Go Ahead was in desperate danger so long as he stayed in Loboville, and she was determined to get him out of it. And when she succeeded a load was lifted off her mind.

All the rest of the night they rode unmolested, beneath the glinting desert moon, until, close on to dawn, Luna dropped beneath the horizon, leaving only the low-hung stars to mitigate the darkness. Later came the actual dawn with the grotesque shapes of sun-tortured vegetation silhouetted against the rosy flush of the eastern horizon. And beyond these rose the low buildings of Barker's ranch.

As the light grew, Go Ahead leaned forward, scanning the landscape far and near, seeking for some sign that Stella had arrived before him. Stella herself did not look at the country; instead she looked at Go Ahead frowningly; jealously irritated "that he should be so eager to see this minx whom, so far as he knew, he had never beheld Caesar, meanwhile nodded in his saddle.

Finally Go Ahead gave over his search for the moment. "We're too early, Bob," he said. "I was afraid we would be. There's nothing to do now except go to the ranch house and wait there till she turns up."

"Go to the ranch house!" Amazement amounting to incredulity drove the sleepiness from the girl's eyes. "You—you don't mean it?"

"Why, of course I mean it. Why not?"

"But—but—" Stella broke off. Already she had learned the futility of trying to induce Go Ahead to be prudent. "But Fair didn't say to wait in the ranch house," she ended, desperately.

"Of course he didn't. But where else are we to wait?" Go Ahead laughed at sight of the dismay on Stella's face. "It does seem like venturing into a hornet's nest, doesn't it?" he admitted. "But it really isn't. Barker we left in Loboville; Wade is probably up north; there can't be anyone much here except Diego. We'll just tie him up or set a guard on him, and then we can make ourselves at home. See?"

"But suppose Barker comes after us. Suppose his spies saw us leaving—"

"Couldn't. He'd have jumped us long ago. And even if he did come after us we'd be safer behind 'dobe walls than in the open."

"But—but why not go on?"

Go Ahead opened his eyes. "Why we can't go without Stella," he protested.

It was on the tip of Stella's tongue to say something very derogatory about her other self. But she checked herself just in time. "Fair said that if she didn't meet us at dawn for us to go on, and she'd overtake us," she blended.

"Yes. But it isn't dawn yet. We've got to wait somewhere and we've got to rest while we wait. I'm not 'specially sleepy myself but I wouldn't mind forty winks, and I guess you wouldn't either. And then of course we've got to give the horses a chance to eat and rest a bit, or they may play out on us when we least expect it."

Stella gave up. "You know best, I suppose," she said, "but I wish you wouldn't wait for Stella. I don't believe she's coming at all."

Go Ahead looked at the girl gravely. "I hope she will come," he said. "If she doesn't I'll have to consider going after her. You see, Barker told me last night why he wanted to marry her—"

"What?"

"Yes. I thought from what Green and you said about her that it was curious that he should want her so badly. But now I understand."

"You—you don't mean he told you about her money?"

"Eh. . . . So you know about it, too. Yes, he told me—indirectly. He warned me that he was going to marry her and take her money himself and that I'd better put all such thoughts out of my head."

"He told you—that! He thought that you—"

"Seems so. Oh, he's just got money on the brain. He's—"

"But what did you say?"

"Me!" Go Ahead chuckled. "Oh, I turned it off some way. I ought to have told him— But no matter about that. I couldn't well tell him anything without spilling all the beans. But the long and short of it is that I've got to get Stella way from that robber camp before Barker goes back to it."

Bob's voice quivered with suppressed passion. "I s'pose you want her for yourself!"

Go Ahead did not answer. But he turned and looked at the girl long and gravely. Then, still without speaking, he looked away.

After awhile Stella looked up. Then she uttered a startled exclamation. "Oh, we're right at the house," she gasped. "Oh, oh! Please don't go inside, Go-ey! Go anywhere else—beyond the barn there—anywhere."

"All right." Go Ahead turned his horse slightly. His brief anger had melted, giving place to concern. "You're played out," he said, "and it's no wonder. That's what makes you so temperamental. We'll camp beyond the barn on one condition, and that is that you'll lie down right away and take a nap."

But Stella shook her head mutinously. "I've got to do my share," she said.

"All right. Then we'll go inside the house and you can do it there." Go Ahead relaxed his slight tug on the reins, and his horse instantly tried to turn in toward the ranch house, now just abreast.

This brought Stella to terms. "No, no!" she cried. "I give in. I'll lie down." Under her breath she added: "but I won't sleep."

"Good enough." Go Ahead dragged his reluctant steed back to its course.

A moment later the three had passed, apparently unseen, beyond the barn and were screened by its bulk from the eyes of anyone who might appear in or about the ranch buildings. Very quickly the blanket rolls were unstrapped and tossed down, the horses provided with nose bags, and Stella, resentful but true to her word, had lain down, resolved not to close her eyes.

But the sandman was abroad and when, a moment later, Go Ahead stepped lightly to her side, he found her fast asleep.

Long he stood looking down on her in silence. Then, muttering, "Poor tired, plucky boy," and resolving in his heart of hearts that he'd "take good care of Bob when he got him East," he went back to Caesar.

"Caesar," he asked, "how sleepy are you?"

"Me? Ain't sleepy at all, Mr. George, sah." Caesar never dreamed of using such an appellation as "Go Ahead" instead of the aristocratic "George Ashmead."

"Well, I am! And I guess you did sleep most of the night. Do you suppose you could keep watch for an hour while I take a nap?"

Caesar drew himself up. "Course I can, Mr. George, sah," he replied with considerable dignity.

"Well, I'll trust you. Come over here." Go Ahead led the way some twenty feet northward to the north end of the barn. "There isn't a thing to do except to stand here, at this corner, and keep your eyes open," he said. "You can look east and west along the road we just came by, and north across the road, and now and then take a look over your shoulder past Bob and me and the horses along the side of the barn to the south, to make sure that nobody's trying to slip up on you from behind. The first human being you see, wake me quick. And wake me in an hour anyway—one hour. You understand?"

"Yassuh, I understand!"

"Well, you do it, or I'll skin you alive."

Yassuh!" Caesar grinned. Evidently the threat was a mere verbal pleasantry, without terrors.

With a nod Go Ahead strode half a dozen feet to the rear and flopped down on his blankets as Stella had done. Like Stella, too, he was asleep in an instant.

Caesar watched him take his place; then, bristling and determined, he set himself to keep unremitting vigil.

And he did keep it. He obeyed Go Ahead's instructions to the letter, kept excellent watch up and down and across the road that ran in front of him; and periodically looked behind him. If danger had come from any of these directions he would undoubtedly have detected it and given warning. But, actually, it did not come from any of these directions.

The campers were divided into two groups—the "Yanks" and the "Red Sox." Monday afternoon after a baseball game, relay race, tug-of-war, horse shoe tournament, volley ball game and baby show the judges reported that the "Yanks" had beated the "Red Sox." Dr. Barber presented the winning group with a beautiful picture of the Rheims cathedral.

The campers returned to their homes late Monday afternoon happy though tired. Along with this there was the feeling that no only had a good time been enjoyed but each had gained by a closer association, one with the other, and with the Master.

Many visitors and friends enjoyed many happy hours with the following campers: Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Garrison and family, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wyman, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rucker, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Lewis, Miss Margaret Ann Huffman, Miss Cornelia Holcombe of Athens, Dorothy Harrison, Elva Pratt, Ona and Zoe Butler, Cora Chase, Martha Dunavent, Catherine Gilliland, Unis and Beulah Johnson, Cleo Kramer, Dorothy Prior Davis, Elizabeth Hardesty and Bernice Woodyard. Among the young men present were Earnest Ballenger of Michigan, Walter Edwards, Hollis Barker, Kenneth Kidd, Walter Weatherman, William Hoffman and Earnest MacConnle.

"I am in this race in response to the unanimous request of the Franklin County Republican Central committee. This committee was elected by the voters of my party and in accepting it's draft I was actuated by the belief that the desires of this representative group of men were paramount to any personal considerations, of my own. It was a call to service, to the one that the Republican party might present to the people a candidate, as well as the Democratic party. As long as the law provides for 'party sponsorship' of judicial candidates, the Republican party should not be in default.

"If elected to this position, I shall enter upon it's duties with an eye single to the administration of justice, unhampered by any prejudices, with no friends to unjustly reward and with no enemies to punish."

Tariff, Muscles Shoals, Taxes and Protection were topics discussed by Congressman John J. Speaks before the joint meeting.

EXPANSION VS. SERVICE

Today marks the first issue of the Hilltop Record to be printed on the newly installed Duplex press and it also marks the realization of a program of expansion in this community in order to be of more and better service to the people of the Hilltop.

This is the twelfth year that the Record has been greeting residents of the Hilltop weekly with the news of the Hilltop and the advertisements of the local merchants. During these twelve years it has always been the object of the publishers of the paper to give the people of the community a better paper.

During the past few years noted improvements have been made in the appearance and the quality of its contents. In order to give more people the news of the community, free circulation was started two years ago. Today every home on the Hilltop receives the paper.

Rapid strides have been taken to make the paper bigger and better. Starting as a four page pamphlet the paper has grown to full newspaper size and carrying six and eight pages. It will continue to grow with the Hilltop.

Today the Rceord is in its new home at 14 S. Oakley Ave., and a web press is now printing the paper that was formerly printed sheet at a time on a cylinder press.

Today the Record is the only community paper in Columbus that owns and operates its own plant in its own community. No small investment has been made here to give a better paper. And back of it all is confidence in the Hilltop.

We wish to take this opportunity to welcome you to our offices and to watch the Record as it comes from the press.

Also remember that the Record is your paper and your news items are always welcome.

THE FALL FESTIVAL

Merchants of the Hilltop will give Friday evening over to merrymaking and will welcome visits from everyone. Entertainment and demonstrations will be provided in the stores of the participating merchants and souvenirs will be given away. A band will furnish music during the evening.

Many valuable prizes will be given in the number hunt. Here is an opportunity to be grasped by Hilltop people. Let's make it a good time for all.

CONGRATULATIONS

Congratulations are in order and this time they are directed to R. O. Harrison, manager of the Hilltop Branch, First Citizens Trust Co., and his associates. We take this opportunity to express the good feeling we have toward this institution and its confidence in the Hilltop.

Florida deserves the sympathy of the nation, and every financial aid that can be extended there will be well spent. Repeated storms have twisted the homes of thousands and killed many hundreds. Those who remain back here at home can only feel glad that they are not in Florida and . . . give. The latter will be more beneficial.

The return to the fifty cent taxi rate may look horrible to the man who loves his sheckles but the rate is no more than fair. However, we would not advocate a higher rate. If you do not believe we have the best taxi service of any city just take a ride in those away from home.

"It's lots of fun to watch the other half live."

LISTENING IN.

One of the best times to study character and observe just what the world is made up of is while riding with a crowd or a group in a street car or on train or bus.

Being of the nature that approves of what the others have to say without partaking of the conversation I found that a source of much entertainment while riding across country in a bus recently was the conversations of those present and their actions. And with such in mind I give herein a sample of such.

THE TRIP BEGINS.

The scene is that of a bus station near the heart of our city and with much surprise I hand the taxi driver a fifty cent piece and he returns two bits in change. But then he has good reason for being honest for he has just told me that none of the men of his company ever overcharge.

A colored boy grabs my grips and the light in his eyes calls for a tip. The ticket agent informs me that I have 45 minutes to wait and I pass the time watching the crowd come and go.

The colored boy picks up my grips again and I know the bus is in. Five minutes later finds me seated near the middle of the bus next to a window, as we speed out of town.

THE CONVERSATION.

Surely someone must start the conversation and this time as usual we find that a traveling salesman seated near the driver has called him by name and they are talking "shop." The "shop" happens to be centered about the driver at first and the discussion ranges from a recent bus accident to the rate war being waged by the three companies that travel this same route. And now I take time out to thank the goddess of luck for creating a war of this nature at vacation time.

And then we hear, "I believe Tunney should give the belt over to Dempsey because he deserves it. Tex Rickard's elimination plan is all wet. . . . You've got to hand it to the West Virginians. When they tell you they want a thing they mean it and you don't have to talk quality to them because they know what they want. . . . This weather has been a little dry but then we could complain about as much if we had the proper amount of rain. . . . Al Smith sure is an egotistical sort of person." And so passed many miles.

THE SPEAKERS.

The traveling man I have already introduced, but your picture of him may not fit the frame until I explain a few of his lines. I mean lines because he had plenty and I would say he was fond of beer. This last conclusion I draw both from his talk and his appearance.

The bus driver is a young fellow, rosy cheeked and jovial. He wears yellow spectacles to keep the sunlight from blinding him, but he shows good judgment in his selection for it seems that the sun would forever shine in Ky.

Back of the driver is a Kentuckian who calls himself a "clod hopper" and delights in telling the salesman how he sicks the mountaineers. And his tone of voice also indicates that he wants others to know that he is just a little above the average person in his own community and able to cope with the outside world better than his fellows of the backwoods.

THE OTHER HALF.

The traveling salesman begins his conversation with the mountaineer by telling a joke of how the other half lives and in this case the other half happens to be the commonly known better half, famous in married circles.

Here is an opening for the clod hopper and he tells of all the tribulations of his native country and the hardships of the residents of his home section. Of course he stresses the point that he is able to get away but has pity for the others who will live and die there and never know just how the other half lives.

ET CETERA.

Two passengers get off and three get on so it seems that the life of a bus is an on and off affair. One of the last passengers is a young lady. I take it that she is on the first lap of her journey to school. After many attempts she finds herself seated in a comfortable position in front of me. Three minutes pass. She turns and begins to wish the window was raised. I raise the window. She thanks me and settles back for what I suppose to be comfort for her.

I was mistaken though for in another three minutes she wonders how she can lower the window. She is a little too warm. I am good at taking hints and lower it. Comfortable again. Three minutes pass. A little more air should enter so I lower the window a little.

Another three minutes finds me seated across the aisle two seats away and . . . comfortable.

My conclusion is that it is lots of fun to watch the other half live.

CELEBRATES TWENTY-THIRD YEAR

Here is an artists sketch of the Friends Rescue Home located in Ridge avenue west of Hague avenue. On Tuesday the twenty-third anniversary of the founding of the institution was celebrated. It was established by Evangeline Reams, present field secretary.

HERE AND THERE

By C. C. H.

We are told that one half the world never knows how the other half lives but that doesn't bother us when we come to think that we are probably on the half-way street ourselves.

* * * * *

One of those things that makes life interesting is to receive payment on a bill you had long ago given up as entirely lost.

* * * * *

From the west we have a letter explaining the details of the Los Angeles Air races recently sponsored there and we draw our conclusions that the day of heavy air traffic is at hand. Now comes the problem of teaching the wife to drive the plane.

* * * * *

Recalling experiences of the state fair we are reminded that this has been a good year for the farmer and yet there are many who say the presidential year always brings a decline. In this case politics and farming aren't on the same level.

* * * * *

* * * * *

Colleges and universities are at it again and poor papa realizes that an education pays . . . and he pays also.

* * * * *

He who rides must pay the cab driver is the decision of the Columbus taxi owners and now we look back with favor on the days when we had a taxi war. But all the powers haven't signed the treaty yet so we may be fortunate enough to take a few more two bit rides across to town.

PIANO STUDIO

For instruction in piano see Miss Ruth Thatcher graduate of the Normal Department of the Morrey School of Music, at her studio, 124 Highland Ave. Phone RA. 0373.

Wedding bells will soon ring for Polly and Gene and the champion and Helbilie will spend their honeymoon touring Europe. Many young men are reading the news of the big event and saying, "Gee, it must be fun to be a prize fighter."

* * * * *

We are told that Al Smith is thought to be related to "Hossy" Gibbs the lawyer of Newburyport, Conn., and after listening to his Omaha address a few nights ago it is readily seen how such a thing could be possible.

* * * * *

And again we are told that Al is a fearless man but his way of getting votes in little old New York will not amount to much out in the great open spaces of the country.

* * * * *

Speaking of elections we feel that this will be a fair chance for those who like to bet to place their money on one man instead of dividing it up to be sure they aren't losing.

GREAT MARVELS IN INVENTIONS FORESEEN FOR FUTURE.

Roger Babson foresees greater marvels of invention in the future than any other past age has produced, some of which are described in Popular Mechanics. He predicts a time when the helicopter will be developed to such a degree of perfection that it will rise from a space as small as a suburban back yard and land on the roof of an office building. Passenger-carrying airplanes will some day be linked up in trains and will fly across the Atlantic and between all the large cities of this country. He visions also houses built entirely of rubber, lighted by cold light similar to that given off by fireflies and certain fish. They will be heated in winter and cooled in summer by atomic energy or by some other kind of power derived from sun motors, tide motors, or the interior of the earth, and distributed from municipal plants. Our milk and butter, fifty years hence will be derived from kerosene instead of cows, while most of our other food will be in concentrated form. Wood pulp will take the place of cotton and wool in the making of clothes. Weather changes will be predicted weeks in advance, so that the danger of having one's wooden suit warped will be slight.

HOTEL PLAY ROOMS

A large Chicago hotel provides a fairyland for the children of its guests, made up of two huge play rooms supervised by a trained young woman. Children may stay there all day, for meals are served to them and there are any number of the devices found in playgrounds besides classes in dramatic art. The walls are decorated with scenes from fairy stories and the cloakroom is hidden by a huge shoe.

The fogs of London are so dense that full night lighting is sometimes turned on in the central part of the city at noontime.

ANIMALS COLOR-BLIND

That dogs are color-blind has been proved by the tests of Dr. Laird, of Colgate university. They can see black and white, and the stripes of the American flag look white and gray to them. Their eyes focus very poorly; so that they get no clear vision of objects. But motion is clearly registered, and their exceeding keen sense of smell helps to make up for the weakness of their eyesight. Few animals can distinguish colors. Monkeys and fish appear to have color vision, and most birds see all the colors but violet and blue.

The passing of the travelers along the front of the ranch buildings had not been unnoticed. Diego, he who had gone down before Barker's heavy sixgun when he tried to waylay Go Ahead, had laid awake nearly all the night suffering from the pain of the thrust through his upper arm. More, he was standing at the window of the bunkhouse, staring out into the dawn, when the three rode by. He thought he recognized Go Ahead, and finding that the party did not reappear along the road beyond the barn, he crossed from the bunkhouse to the barn, where, head pressed against the boards at the back, he listened with all his ears. Soon he was rewarded by the sound of voices and then, finding a convenient knothole through which to peep, by the sight of the man whose quickwittedness had got him his wound.

Then he went to the ranch house, to the automatic telephone, and called up Barker's office. The bell was still ringing when Barker got back from seeing Wade and his men off for Bridget's. He heard it, indeed, as he came up the path, and quickened his steps to a run in consequence. 'Phone calls at that hour of the morning were rare and likely to be important.

"Hello!" he yelled into the mouthpiece, and when Diego's excited accents came back to him he swore aloud.

Diego recognized his voice and took no note of his profanity. Volubly, in mingled Spanish and English, he gasped out his tale.

At first Barker refused to believe it. Regularly, all the night through, his spies had reported, each of them with the assurance that Go Ahead and Stella were asleep at Bridget's.

"Nonsense, Diego," he raged. "You're loco. It's anybody else. Those other duds are here at Bridget's."

"No loco, senor. You think I know not the hombre who have trick me yesterday? No senor, no!"

"They make sleep, senor. All but the black man, who stands on the watch."

"The black man? What black man?"

"I know not, senor. Never have I seen him before."

"Well, can you get at them? How many men have you?"

Diego explained that it would be easy. The senor remembered the big hole that the great wolf hound had dug beneath the back of the barn the time that he found himself shut up therein? Bueno. The hole had been filled with loose earth, easy to dig out. It opened between the black man and the sleeper. . . . But yes, the earth was of a great looseness. Of a surety his men could remove it unheard, and slip through unseen. He himself would lead them in spite of his wounded arm—wounded so cruelly by the knife of the senor. The senor understood that there were knotholes through which one could observe and learn when the chance best offered. The senor could imagine—

But the senor had no more time for imagining. "Never mind all that," he broke in. "You get those birds! Get the two men any way you like, but get them. And get the girl, too, but don't hurt her; and then you light out for the Roost with her and the others, whether they're dead or alive. Call me up when you're ready to start and let me know. Now get busy."

Barker slammed the earpiece on the hook and rushed out of the office and up the road toward Bridget's. He was done for so far as Loboville was concerned, but if Diego got that girl he might yet force her to marry him and escape with her to the East. He would stake all on the chance, would cast his lot openly with the bandits. The padre was at the Roost; that was why he had not been at the ranch the morning before. If he had luck, he might yet win.

Diego also hurried. Swiftly he called his men, most of whom were up and about by this time, and led them to the barn, where swiftly but cautiously they re-excavated the hole beneath the barn sill. What noise they made was drowned by the trampling of the horses so close beside and by the sound of their munching on the oats in their nose bags.

Caesar, continually shifting his gaze from right to fore and from fore to left, and back to right again, looked less often over his shoulder; and when he did look his eyes, directing high, passed clear over the ground almost at his feet. Even when at last the surface caved softly in he did not notice the cavity any more than he noticed any other depression in the unfamiliar earth.

And Diego, truth to tell, gave him little time for observation. The moment the hole was clear the Mexican was down club in hand, writhing through. Once only he had to stop, deterred by a touch from the man at the knothole when Caesar looked backward; then when Caesar turned away to search the distances before him, Diego slid through, sprang upward and ran cat-footedly forward over the few intervening feet.

In the air his club rose, held in his left hand—rose and came down; and without even a grunt the unsuspecting negro slumped to the ground. An instant later the other ranch hands, following through the hole in quick succession, flung themselves bodily upon the sleeper.

The struggle was brief for Go Ahead if was very brief. With him Diego had ordered his men to take no chances, and he opened his eyes only to see a club descending. When it struck, life for him temporarily ended. Stella, awakened by the struggle, squirmed aside just in time to dodge the pounce of two Mexicans and to snatch at her pistol, but before she could fire was overwhelmed beneath the weight of others, in whose grip she found herself utterly helpless.

The whole thing was a matter of seconds. Even Diego, who had turned promptly away from Caesar, confident that his blow had gone home, was only just in time to see the finish.

Five minutes later Diego and his men were off. Go Ahead and Caesar had been hung across their saddles, with their hands and feet lashed together beneath their horses' bellies, and Stella, with her hands tied behind her, had been forced to mount a horse that was led by Diego.

Diego, surveying his work, felt well satisfied. He did not know that while he was telephoning to Barker, Go Ahead had revived in answer to Stella's frenzied appeals, nor that Stella, stopped by the coming of the Mexicans, had slipped into Go Ahead's hand the tiny penknife with which she had been trying to cut his bonds.

CHAPTER XIII

For an hour or more Diego and his helpers trotted northward, leading or shepherding their three captives. Diego, exultant over his success and forgetting the pain of his wound in the joy of his triumph over the man who had outwitted him twenty-four hours before, chatted volubly with his men, boasting, not without reason, of the skill with which he had planned and carried through the attack. On the supposedly unconscious men bound to their horses he heaped epithets and derisive comments.

Stella was not one to abandon hope readily, but she was very near to abandoning it now. Not one reasonable glimmer of hope could she see. True, she had given Go Ahead her own penknife and had seen his hand close over it, and she had been able to note that the Mexicans had not discovered it and taken it away from him. But that it could avail him anything seemed impossible; it was too small, too fragile. Whatever spark of hope still lay in her breast was wholly unreasonable and was based merely on what she had seen Go Ahead do before, and not on any way out of the trouble that she could imagine.

The horses had started on the upgrade leading to the crest of the first swell over which Go Ahead had followed her the day before. As they climbed, Stella turned in her saddle and swept the country behind with her eyes, hoping against hope that she might see something, if no more than a trail of dust, showing that friends were on their trail. But she saw nothing.

As she faced back to the front, however, a sudden outcry close behind her made her turn once more. Just in time to see Go Ahead's horse rearing and fighting against the bridle rein with which his Mexican captor Antonio held him. As she watched she saw him tear himself free and race away, buckjumping furiously, across the sandy slope, apparently trying to throw off the helpless form that was lashed so securely across his back.

So sudden, so unexpected was the outbreak that for a moment the three Mexicans stared open-mouthed. Then, at Diego's sharp command, Antonio spurred out after the hardened horse, rope in hand.

Heart in mouth Stella had watched the struggle, longing to go to Go Ahead's aid but restrained from doing so by Diego's powerful grasp upon her bridle. But when, afar off—for the chase had taken Antonio far—she saw Go Ahead hurled from his place and felt Diego's grip momentarily relax, she drove her spurs into her horse's sides and strove to break loose.

She failed, of course. Her hands were too tightly bound, and Diego's grip, relaxed as it was, was still too firm. The brief struggle ended in the only way it could end. So also her plea to be allowed to go to Go Ahead's help failed. Diego, who had hesitated for a moment whether to go to Antonio's help or not, instantly decided against it.

In vain Stella pleaded. A moment later the horses passed the crest and even the field of the struggle was hidden from her gaze.

Half an hour later, cresting the second swell, beyond which lay Skeleton valley, Stella saw Barker and Wade and the bandits at the bottom, gesturing impatiently to her captors.

Barker spurred out to meet them as they raced down the slope. He glanced at Stella and nodded, then he stared at Caesar's black face, and then, missing Go Ahead, he turned scowlingly to Diego.

Diego did not wait to be questioned. He understood what his master wanted. Volubly he explained.

"I do not wait, senor," he ended. "I make haste, as you command. I go back now swiftly to hasten Antonio, if the senor wills."

Barker frowned. "Is the fellow alive or dead?" he asked.

Diego shrugged his shoulders. "Alive I think, senor, when he leave the ranch. But now—quien sabe?"

Barker hesitated. But after all, he concluded, what difference did it make? He had the girl; that was the main thing. There was plenty of time to attend to Go Ahead's case later. And Wade was in a hurry to get to the Roost.

"All right," he said. "You and your other man go back and hurry Tony up. Turn over the nigger to somebody." From Diego's hand he took the bridle rein of Stella's horse and turned away.

Wade was watching. When Barker turned toward him he waved his hand. "All right, boys," he said, wearily, and started ahead. But he swayed in his saddle as he rode; his wound, coupled with the intense physical and mental stress of the last twenty-four hours, had brought him very close to his ultimate limit.

It was an hour later when Barker and Stella, looking back from the crest of the last swell, beyond which lay a wide expanse of loose and continually shifting sand on which the horses' hoofs left no permanent trace, saw a rider in the dirty white clothes affected by the Mexican peons leading a laden horse down the slope that they had just crossed. The interval was too great to permit real scrutiny, but neither Barker nor Stella doubted that it was Antonio with the recaptured horse and prisoner. Later, as the two followers drew steadily nearer, Stella bowed her head hopelessly. And Barker, reading her face, was so well satisfied that when the newcomers caught up with the bandits, at the verge of the waterfall, he did not take the trouble to go back to examine his beaten rival.

Once inside the valley and at the village Wade, climbing painfully down from his saddle, staggered away to his cabin and went in. He asked no help and he received none.

The men regarded both him and Barker with hostile eyes, blaming their present difficult situation upon his leadership and failing to find any consolation in the capture of Stella and two prisoners, of whom they knew practically nothing. Many of them put up their horses and then gathered with frowning brows to talk things over; others rode directly to their quarters, snatched up what they could carry safely, and hurried away out by the waterfall entrance.

Barker, however, did not note any of this. The capture of Stella and Go Ahead had gone to his head. Once more he felt triumphantly victorious. Up to the door of Fair's house he led Stella.

"Go in," he ordered. "Put on those woman's clothes I brought you and wait until I send for you."

Stella apparently did not hear him. She was looking about her for Fair. "Where is my father?" she demanded.

"Fair is not your father. If you mean him, he's dead."

"Dead?"

"Yes. I'm sorry for you and for him. But he got in the boys' way last night, and they shot him."

"Who did? Wade? Stella's voice was deadly.

Barker hesitated. "Maybe. I don't know," he answered. "I wasn't here. There was a lot of shooting. But that's over and done with. And we ain't got time to waste. You do as I tell you. Put on those woman's things, and wait."

Stella stared at him. "I know why you want to marry me," she said. "Wade told me yesterday. He wanted to marry me and kill you for the same reason. . . . Oh-yes, he did! . . . You want my money. Well, you're welcome to it. If you'll let Go Ahead go free. If you kill him or if he dies or is dead already you'll never get it. I'll kill myself first."

Barker laughed unpleasantly. "Don't worry," he said. "I don't know whether your Go Ahead is alive or not, but I hope he is and I haven't the slightest idea of killing him. I want him as a witness to our marriage. I'll need some one to go East with us and testify in court that you married me willingly and all that, and—"

"You're loco."

"Not a bit of it. The padre is here and you've got to tell him that you want to marry me. Then you've got to marry me in Go Ahead's presence willingly and pleasantly. When you're done that I'll let him go. If you don't do it he'll be no use to me as a witness and I'll turn him over to Wade. . . . Wade loves him, you know."

"You beast!"

"All right. Say what you like now but see that you talk right later if you want your man to live. Now go in and put on those things I told you to." He pushed the girl inside the door and shut it upon her. Then he strode away to Wade's cabin, nearby.

Wade himself was not visible, but in front of the cabin stood the two horses with their silent burdens. The man who had just joined the cavalcade was just hitching his own horse at the rack.

Barker paid no attention to him. Instead he strode up to the horses, recognized Caesar by his color and turned to the other. "Is he dead?" he asked of the guard, who came hurrying up, as he bent to peer into the captive's face.

Then abruptly he felt the muzzle of a pistol thrust against his ribs and heard a well-remembered voice in his ears. "Not so dead as you'll be if you make any breaks," it said, in steely tones.

Slowly Barker straightened up. His face, agape with terror, was ghastly in its pallor. "Go Ahead!" he gasped.

"Yes. Now you go ahead into this house. Keep your hands by your sides, but don't try any tricks if you want to live."

Obeying, Barker fell to himself swiftly and completely disarmed.

"Now go to the back room," ordered Go Ahead. "Let's see what's become of Wade." One pace behind, he followed Barker to the door.

YOUR BANK

For the remotest origin of banking we must go back to the days of antiquity. But vast changes in its nature and scope have taken place from the day of the ancient banker who was a mere custodian of money and a buyer and seller of foreign exchange to the modern banker who is a loan and stock dealer in credit.

The oldest survival of a banking transaction was unearthed recently by explorers in Assyria. This is a bill of exchange issued a thousand years before Christ. Then several hundred years before Christ we have the "argentarii" or "dealers in money" of Greece and Rome. It was under Justinian in Rome that the banking business flourished and developed to a scope that was not reached again for centuries to come. A comparatively large use of credit was involved and a whole series of laws relating to it were created.

During the Middle ages, however, the insecurity of property reduced banking again to mere money changing until the establishment in Venice, in 1587, of the Banco di Rialto, which received deposits subject upon order, in which we have the real beginning of modern banking.

Gradually, through this and other banks, which were springing up throughout Europe, came the various features which constitute modern banking as we know it today. On July 27, 1694, came the incorporation of the Bank of England around which ever since have centered the finances of Great Britain and which furnished an example for the First Bank of the United States, which was chartered by one of the earliest acts under the federal Constitution on February 25, 1791.

The Sandman Story

By Martha Martin

THE WATER-FRONT CATS

"Meow, meow, meow, we're the lucky cats!"

And one night, when the cats all met on an old back fence near a deserted ferry house, they sang this song:

Meow, meow, meow,
We're going to tell you how
We're given the best of things to eat.
The most delicious kind of meat.
We don't need the garbage tins.
We don't have to be nervous as pins
For fear the people will run us out
Of the garbage tins that are round about!
We don't notice the garbage tins much.
We're above the food in such!
But you don't know of the morning tour
Made by a lady around these parts,
She knows how to make happy cat hearts!
We may look dirty, but we're well fed.
This we have already said.

When the Cats Met on an Old Back Yard Fence.

But oh, it's wonderful if you're a poor forlorn cat
To think there is some one who thinks about that.
And who thinks of the things that cats like to eat.
And who gives them each day a regular treat.
Just because we have no money,
And just because we look rather funny
Is no reason why she snubs us and passes us by.
No, she likes those who do not in luxury lie!
Meow, meow, meow, we're the lucky cats!
Now the cats sang this song every night, or at least almost every night, and happy they were.

They lived in a city, a city which is situated by the sea, and right near the harbor, which leads out to the sea, was the water front, where these cats made their home.

It was poor in these parts—very poor, indeed.

The cats looked forlorn, for their fur was dirty and not well-cared for, and they were untidy and rather unattractive looking.

They would dart this way and that and keep out of the way of rough creatures who might be wandering about, not caring for cats.

But for the most part they were pretty well left alone, except sometimes when they had children play with them, who petted them and who made friends with them.

But though these cats looked so shabby and lived in such a shabby part of the town, they were very happy. True, they had adventures and narrow escapes, and they looked at garbage once in a while to be sure they didn't miss anything.

But, as they said in their song, they didn't need garbage tins.

For every morning, very, very early, an old woman walked along the water front of this city, carrying a big paper bag.

For in the big bag were always goodies for these old water-front cats. They had liver for breakfast and, oh, so much else that was good! Especially did these poor old cats enjoy the delicious liver.

Often in the daytime people would say how sorry they felt if they happened to be in that neighborhood and saw all the queer-looking cats about, dirty cats, cats without much ambition. It would seem. But every morning they got their wonderful meals, and they were happy and lovely alive to the joys of this world—especially the joy it was when liver and their tummies met!"

And the old woman, the cats' beloved lady? She still, each day, feeds these cats generously, plentifully. She wears an old shawl a lot that is old, and sometimes shows a faded, shabby skirt. And after she has fed the cats she goes to clean out office buildings, which is her job.

But to the cats she is wonderfully magnificent.

And that is a true story.

WHERE I BELONG

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I went down South,
I went up North,
And East and West
I wandered forth.
But now I'm through,
And here I come
Right back to where
I started from.

It seems a sort
Of funny thing,
But spring don't seem
The same as spring
In other lands—
The trees bud out,
But not the trees
You dream about.

And so I'm back,
And here I'll stay,
And not a thousand
Miles away.
With all their flags
And all their songs,
A man belongs
Where he belongs.

The Hilltop Record

Of Interest to the People of the Hilltop and Vicinity

WE extend a big hand to the new Hilltop Branch library and contend that what is worth having is worth waiting for.

Vol. XII. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, October 4, 1928 No. 28.

B. M. DISCUSS WATER SALE TO SUBURBS

Councilman Lewis Says Property Values of City Suffer Under New Ordinance.

"A man will choose to live in the country if he may have all the advantages of the city," said Councilman John M. Lewis in an address to members of the Hilltop Business Men's association relative to the sale of water by the city to the county. The meeting was held Tuesday evening at the Hilltop Bank.

Lewis pointed out that the 10 per cent charge above the meter reading was not equal to what the city is losing in property values.

Lewis also took a stand against the proposed mixed gas measure for Columbus, saying the increased burden on city gas buyers would be $3,000,000 per year or $10 per person, while the returns would amount to only $600,000.

R. J. Bartlet, Democratic candidate for prosecuting attorney of Franklin county also addressed the group. "The city is creating 'For Rent' signs in its limits," he said relative to the sale of water to the county.

No action on the matter was taken by the business men. Further discussion will be held at the next meeting in November.

Parents Invited to Visit Art Dept.

The Art Department of Highland Junior High school opened with a very large enrollment and already beautiful design work is on display in the art room. Many pupils are engaged in the dyeing and block printing, making beautiful articles for home decoration. Many homes on the Hilltop have hand painted articles that the pupils have made in school.

Parents and those interested in Art are cordially invited to visit the art department during class hours, and watch the progress of the pupils. The Art Department is under the direction of Mr. Birmingham.

LIGHTS UP

Beacon Light Tower Erected at Columbus Airport.

Tower for the beacon light for Columbus Airport is being erected this week and will be completed within a few days. This will complete the lighting for the field at the Hilltop port.

Commercial flyers from the west continue to stop here. D. H. Courtney of St. Louis stopped at the field on the second lap of a trip from St. Louis to Uniontown. He landed at 10:15 and took off shortly after noon.

A new Curtis Robin closed cabin monoplane was delivered to the field Sunday morning for passenger service.

Enough Thumbing

Fifteen days from home and on the road to Denver and back proved to be enough for Charles Drosos, 15, son of John Drosos, 401 Whitethorne Ave., who arrived home late Wednesday evening, Sept. 26, after running away from home and thumbing rides.

His pockets were empty when he left home and he returned the same way.

Charles relates that he was offered a ride to Denver and took advantage of it. But now he tells that he will never run away again.

What Next?

Green-eyed with jealousy, is the expression used by the girls of Highland Junior High school when they describe the reaction of the boys of the school toward the latest fad of the girls.

Suspenders of bright and flashy colors have made their appearance and promise to be very popular with the girls. Trig skirts kept in place by these dependable supports lend aid to the versatility of the girls.

At the Young People's Vesper service, Miss Doris Mayer, Director of Religious Education for the Federated Churches of Franklin county, will be the speaker.

WEST LOSES FIRST GAME

Cowboys Fail to Score Against Sandusky; Will Meet South Saturday.

When they met a team of veterans at Sandusky Saturday the West High gridders failed to score and allowed their opponents to pile up 32 points.

Victory for Sandusky was accounted for in the fact that they had a team of old players and ones who have had more practice this season than the West team.

The West defense weakened in the first quarter and Kruger of Sandusky ran forty yards through the line for a touchdown. McCracken, Larkin, Culp and Adair were the mainstays of the cowboy team.

On Saturday West will oppose South in the first game of the season that will be counted toward the city championship. The game will be played on the South field.

This will be the test of the real strength of Coach Lamme's new team and comparison may then be drawn as to how they stand alongside other city teams. It is thought that West may be strong in the city classes.

Central will play at Bexley Saturday.

Camera Stolen

Hilltop Man Dies Suddenly

Mayo A. Pfaltzgraf, Resident of Hilltop 22 Years, Victim of Apoplexy.

Apoplexy caused the death of Mayo A. Pfaltzgraf, 46, at his home, 82 S. Terrace St., early Sunday morning. Mr. Pfaltzgraf had been in failing health for the past several months.

He was a native of Columbus, being born in the South end, and had been a resident of the city all his life, moving to the Hilltop 22 years ago.

Mr. Pfaltzgraf operated a cement contracting business and an oil station and was prominent in business circles on the Hilltop. He was a member of the Hilltop Evangelical Lutheran church, from where funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Anna Pfaltzgraf; his mother, Mrs. J. W. Greenoble; a sister, Mrs. Hal Adamson, and three sons, Herbert, Earl and Charles. Burial was made in Union cemetery in charge of C. J. Kohn.

CAR HITS GIRL AND DRIVES ON

Agnes Chenoweth, 6, 14 N. Warren Ave., was a victim of a hit-skip driver Friday night at Hague and Broad street. She suffered a cut on the head and was totally blinded until 3 a. m. Saturday. She was also cut on the knee and lip.

The girl and her brother were crossing the street when a large sedan rounded the corner, cutting the light, struck the child and drove on. Her brother was not injured.

She was removed to her home from the hospital Sunday.

Anyone who witnessed the accident is requested to call RA. 3433 at once.

Bank Building Is Dedicated

Hundreds Visit Institution During Opening; Ministers Officiate.

Dedication of the new home of the Hilltop Bank, branch of the First Citizens Trust Co., took place Thursday morning at 9 o'clock. It was in charge of ministers of the Hilltop. Thousands visited the bank during the day. Six keys opened the treasure chest. Warren S. Park, manager of branches of the First Citizens Trust Co., officially turned the new building over to R. O. Harrison, manager of the Hilltop Bank.

Rev. H. C. Hutchison, pastor of Hope Memorial Presbyterian church was chairman of the ministerial committee from Hilltop churches. "We feel that this institution is a by-product of God," stated Rev. Hutchison in the opening address. He pointed out that such a financial institution should be founded on the belief in God. He illustrated with a story from Roger Babson, saying the prosperity of North America was due to the fact that our forefathers came here hunting God while those of South America came hunting gold.

Rev. George F. Barber, pastor of Glenwood Methodist church addressed the group and pointed out that the institution was more of a place than just to get money. It was intended to serve humanity, he said. It was fitting, he said, that the new era should be started with a word to God.

Rev. C. E. Miller, pastor of Burgess Avenue U. B. church gave the dedication prayer.

500 More Homes Receive Record

More people on the Hilltop will begin reading the Hilltop Record with this issue.

Beginning today more than 500 papers will be added to the circulation bringing the total to 7000 papers per week. This means that 7000 homes on the Hilltop will receive the Record every Thursday morning.

This additional circulation will be in the district east of Columbian avenue to Central avenue, and south of Sullivant avenue. Streets included are: Woodbury, Townsend, Larcomb, Helen, Catherine, Ryan, Pavey, Guilford, Central, Sullivant, Union, Walsh, Thomas, Safford and Terrace Court. As the section continues to grow the paper will be passed to every home.

Air Mail Boxes

Mail boxes with red, white and blue colors are being placed about the city as boxes for air mail. Other mail boxes may also be used for air mail but the special boxes will assure better service.

TWO WIN IN MUSIC EVENTS

Clyde Kelley Selected in Atwater-Kent Audition; Mrs. Kirkpatrick in Duet.

Hilltop stepped up again into the position of winner in another contest that is of interest to all. This time players are Clyde Kelley, 196 N. Powell Ave., and Mrs. Helen Kirkpatrick, 584 S. Warren Ave.

Kelley, baritone, was selected as one of the winners in the Atwater Kent local elimination radio audition at Heaton's hall, Saturday afternoon. He will have a chance to appear at the state contest in October and may also be heard in the district contest. There will be five such contests in the United States. The final contest will be broadcast from New York in December.

Kelley is a pupil of Cecil Fanning and has broadcast over WAIU many times.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Hayden B. Evans, 1826 Coventry Rd., and teacher of voice at the Capitol College of Oratory, Hilltop branch, won the adults soprano and baritone duet at the seventh annual meeting of the southern Ohio Eisteddfod at Jackson last week.

GOLD GONE

Thieves Pry Open Door to Get Metal in Dentist Office.

Thieves who entered the office of Dr. T. S. Fox, 2405½ W. Broad St., Wednesday, Sept. 26, while Dr. Fox was out to lunch, made away with gold used in dental work, valued at $35.

The door of his office was pried open with either a screw driver or chisel and fastened when they went out. A similar attempt to pry open another door on Thursday evening failed.

Dr. Fox states that a part of the loot was two pieces of work which he was finishing. These were valuable from the standpoint of the time used in making them up. Some of his gold was overlooked. There was evidence of a hasty departure from the office.

Dr. L. B. Turner, with offices next to those of Dr. Fox, reports that a razor and blades were stolen about the same time.

Youth, 5, Falls Into 25-Foot Sewer Manhole

When he failed to judge his distance correctly, Richard Basil, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Basil, 706 S. Park Ave., suffered a broken left arm when he fell in a 25-foot manhole Friday evening. At first it was feared that his skull had been fractured.

Richard and some playmates were playing on the mounds of dirt that are around the sewers being installed in his vicinity. They decided to jump from one hill of dirt to another across a manhole. One young fellow made the jump but Richard failed and crashed through the tar paper that covered the manhole.

Wanda Thompson, 6, of 703 S. Park Ave., notified his parents of the accident.

The manhole leads to an underground power station being constructed near West Mound street. Richard struck a water 20 feet down and then fell into two feet of water below. He was rescued by his father who slid down pipes and ladders.

Thousands Mingle in Number Hunt

And it came to pass that the men of the Hilltop who had wares to sell and made a practice of serving the public with their needs held a Fall Festival and number hunt.

And on the evening of the big event there was much activity in the ranks of every household for it happened that there was but one number to each family and there were many who desired to win the prizes.

After the evening meal had been partaken, merchants opened up their shops and extended the glad hand to all and welcomed them to look. For it was written, the purpose was not to be for selling. Sayeth the merchants, "We will be hosts to our fellow citizens of the community.

Verily, there were thousands who flocked the streets and gained entrance to the stores on this occasion. The band, with their silver toned horns gave forth pretty melodies so that all who passed might be joyful. And it so happened that circus days were recalled as tiny tots paraded before the music makers like strutting bantam roosters.

And it happened that many went away delighted with prizes they had won in said number hunt and souvenirs for old and young added to the delight of all.

Food shows, style shows, radio demonstrations and many other such affairs were of much interest to all who passed from store to store.

Sayeth the people, "I never knew we had such wonderful stores on the Hilltop." "I didn't know this store was here," "I never knew I could purchase this at a Hilltop store," "Why I have been wasting time running downtown when I can do so well on the Hilltop," and many others passed such comment as they wandered in and out looking for lucky numbers.

Sayeth the merchants, "We shall have more good times together."

And as the moon smiled down from overhead the crowd dispersed and all agreed that it was time to retire after a good time was had by all.

Dreams

The dreams I dreamed
Were little tinsel dreams;
I did not know how tinsel
Turns to blackened dust.
Perhaps the gods had changed
Their scheme of things.
And helped me to forget because
They knew I must.

For yesterday where little hopes
Danced in my heart,
Where all the golden plans of Love had been.
There's just a little heap of Broken dreams
That some day may be
Music on the wind.

O. K. Girls!

It is just as dignified and courteous for a girl to propose as it is for her to do many other things, was the conclusion of Rev. J. H. Hughes, pastor of Hillcrest Baptist church, in his evening sermon on Sunday. His topic was "Should Girls Propose."

How It Started
By JEAN NEWTON

OUR "HOT CHOCOLATE"

"A hot chocolate, please!" The most popular beverage the soda fountain has to offer, cocoa has come to be regarded as an American institution; that is, we never give a thought to whence it came, or where. And the lover of the "hot chocolate" should visit Cuba or the West Indies and order a cup of his favorite drink. There he will find the original and real "hot chocolate," prepared so thick that one cannot actually drink it, but must eat it with a spoon. For that is how cocoa is drunk by the natives of tropical America, where it had its origin.

It is to Christopher Columbus, returning to Spain after his first trip to the West Indies, that we owe the knowledge and the use of cocoa or chocolate, which was introduced by him into Europe and hence to civilized America. Landing on the shores of the West Indies he had found the natives drinking the chocolate beverage, and among the souvenirs with which he returned from the new world were some cocoa or, properly, "cacao" beans, from which is produced cocoa and eating chocolate.

It is interesting to note that the most important species of the cacao tree is called the "Theobroma," which is Greek for "food of the gods."

Dam Valuable!

The real value of the O'Shaughnessy dam was realized by the city this week. Without it Columbus would have been indeed a dry town. Since August 1 there have been 1,540,000,000 gallons of water used in the city. Griggs reservoir holds 1,487,000,000 gallons and would have been inadequate during the dry period.

UNIVERSITY TRIPPERS

Our attention is called to the opening of Ohio State university and the fact that many Hilltop students ride thee street cars to early morning classes.

Last year the rail-light company accomodated the students by running two trippers on the West Broad line directly to the university. It is understood that they are not being run this year.

These extra cars are great helps to the students and we feel that such should be repeated this season.

WILL YOU VOTE IN NOVEMBER?

If you are to vote in November for either Hoover or Smith in the presidential election you should be registered. Four days will be made special registration days and four opportunities in October will be given the voter to take advantage of his opportunity to help select the next president, by registration during one of these days.

October 4, 11, 19 and 20 are days for registering. Every citizen should take advantage of this opportunity and be prepared to vote in November.

We are expecting a great crop of dissatisfied people after the election but they will be those who did not vote. People should remember this fact before and take a part in electing the president.

The Spectator

"Business Men and Churches Must Co-operate."

THIS NEW ERA

Last week the attention of Hilltop people was called to a new phaze of this new era in which we live. I refer to the dedication of the new home of the Hilltop Bank, which was in charge of ministers of the Hilltop.

Says Sir Little: "If a group of bankers had mentioned such a thing as taking part in the dedication of a bank building to the ministers of days of our grandfathers they would have been blankly refused but today the general mass of people have grown broad minded enough to realize that business and the work of the pastorate is on an equal basis. Business men and churches must co-operate for the good of both."

THE BOB AGAIN

To bob or not to bob seems to be the most vital question in the world for some young people today says Joseph De Silvis in a recent barber magazine article.

He points with regret to the days when it was a crime to be attractive; the days of tight corsets, sweeping trains, false hair, switches, cats, half dozen petticoats, cotton hose and high shoes. The girl who would like to look like dear grandmother is all out of date. Today mother is as attractive as daughter.

The bob is here to stay is the opinion of De Silvis and he challenges those who say the women of today are not graceful and dignified.

It is true that there are many styles of bobs and many more will be created. This gives the women a big variety of styles to select from and creates individuality, of which they are so proud.

Some credit for the beauty of American women is surely due the barber.

BOOK AGENTS

A member of the club stated last week that a lady of this community was frightened for fear her boy in school might be kidnapped. Basis for such belief was that some women had stopped the boy while on his way from school and had questioned him concerning where he lived and who his parents were.

Further investigation brought out that the women had visited the local school building and had asked for the correct addresses of some families. They posed as book agents.

Nothing is known of what the business of these people may be but it is the opinion of most of the club members that no information of such nature should be given out by the schools and all book agents should take their turn ringing door bells for their prospects.

ADVICE TO LOVELORN

He who has never read the columns of personal advice given by the writers on the staffs of newspapers has never aspired to become a motion picture scenario writer it would seem. This assumption is based upon the wealth of material presented in these columns of so-called advice to the lovelorn.

A recent column for example gives a boy's story that appeals. And what could be more like a photo play than just this: The lad loved the girl and had been going with her for three years steady but then the time came when she went away to school. The only time they met thereafter was when she returned for vacations. On one such occasion she promised to marry the boy. This afforded inspiration for him to take up studies at night in order to accept a better position that had been promised him. Then came the shock. The girl announced her intentions to go to a convent and asked that the boy turn his attentions from her as much as possible so she might easily forget.

Says Professor Tittle, "I doubt the ability of anyone to give fitting advice in such a case but it is truly interesting reading matter for a newspaper."

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

Observation of the local high schools will bring to view the fact that they have little organization in their activities.

Jack Wordley, the college student of our club, who is but two years out of high school, states that he has noticed that students have but little part in this important side of high school life.

"Clubs and activities are things in high school that pave the way for success in college and business. If a student in high school has taken an active part in organizations he will know how to preside and organize when he goes into something else. If he has been fortunate enough to head a group of students he will have training in how to handle business men.

"One of the greatest faults I find with many college students is that they have not had experience in working with their fellows outside the classroom. High school is the place for this and it is my opinion that the high school that does not encourage activities to some extent is not fulfilling its purpose in every respect. Some faculty instruction is necessary for school clubs but the real part of the work should be wholly by students."

We understand that Henry Ford is producing three tri motored planes each week and plans to bring it to one per day soon. With this in mind we feel that he will have production to the point where he can take care of our needs when we are ready for one.

To advertise aviation was said to be the purpose of the visit of the Ford plane to Columbus and other cities. While here some few thousand people took to the air and paid their five spot for such. This is further truth of the statement, "It pays to advertise."

Josephine and Joe Are Back

Ohio State University "First Week"

Dear Folks:

The die is cast, as friend Caesar would have said, but no one is dead yet.

Josephine and I arrived back on the old stomping grounds last week without any injuries to our bodies and as yet no brain diseases. And now after a hard summer trying to find something to do we will rest for the next nine months.

You should see all the freshmen, and say, if I ever looked at the buildings with such curious eyes as they do I want no one to remind me of it. But then after all I wouldn't mind so much being a freshman again because you should see the nifty little red jockey caps they are wearing.

This has been "rush week" for the fraternities and sororities and the thing has been rightly named. All I have done is rush. But we have had several fine parties entertaining the frosh. I've smoked so much at the smokers that I'm beginning to think of joining the smoke prevention league. Poor freshmen! We start them off along dizzy lines.

Well after having a few classes this week and familiarizing ourselves with the faces of the profs we will go into cheering action Saturday when State meets Wittenburg. Of course it may be a small school team but they have plenty of action. I haven't decided who will win the conference championship yet. Will tell you more about it after the joke of beating Michigan has passed by.

Try Hauntz Grocery & Meat Markets.

A commission of architects in Germany has been studying how to improve the aerial views of German cities and countrysides. Germany leads the world in commercial air travel.

We should have our crop of fraternity pledges gathered soon with rushing season at an end. Then we will start the rush on sorority houses. All indications are that brunettes will continue to be the downfall of many this season. And cosmokin coats are stylish too. They go well with new Fords.

Yours for easy profs.

Joe.

Wade was in the room, but as Go Ahead had conjectured, he was clearly out of the game. Stretched on the bed, he was sunk in a stupor that looked final. Go Ahead merely glanced at him; then he waved Barker back to the first room, followed him, and closed the door.

"Call two of your men," he ordered. "Tell them to untie my man Caesar and bring him in and lay him on the lounge yonder. Tell them to handle him gently, that you want him to give you some information. Then tell one of the men to bring Bob here. Put it in your own words, but get the idea over. And remember, I'll be right behind you and that one false move means death."

Like one in a dream Barker obeyed. To the door he went, closely followed by Go Ahead, called two men who were passing and gave them Go Ahead's orders. Then he came back, sat down behind the table and waited until Caesar, weak, tottery, but still alive, staggered in between the men and collapsed on the lounge. Then he gave the order to tell Bob to come to him.

When the men had gone Go Ahead turned to Caesar. "How do you feel, old man?" he asked, affectionately.

Caesar's eyes rested on him, at first hesitantly, then with dawning recognition. "Mr. George, Mr. George!" he cried. "Glory, glory! I thought you was killed, Mr. George."

"Not yet, Caesar. Lie still, old man. Everything's all right—and the rest is going to be so in a minute." He crossed back to his place behind Barker as the door opened and Stella came in.

But it was Stella in very truth—not the Bob that he had traveled with and fought with and lived with for ages in the thirty hours that had elapsed since he had first met her in the living room at the J-B ranch. Gone was the rough clothing, the broad-brimmed sombrero, the high boots, the belt and revolver; gone in fact was everything that had distinguished the Bob whom he had known, everything except the smooth sun-burned cheeks, the appealing eyes, the curly hair. By some magic the slim short boy had become a slim, tall girl.

But Go Ahead knew her. Not for an instant did he bother over strange resemblances and all such stock-in-trade foolishness. He knew her—beneath a hundred disguises he would have known her. "Bob!" he cried flinging off his hat. And again "Bob!"

And with the going of his hat, Stella knew him. "Go Ahead!" she gasped. Then abruptly her color faded and she crumpled down.

Go Ahead dropped his gun and caught her as she fell. He forgot all about Barker. But Barker did not forget him. He sprang to his feet, and put his hands on the table to jump over it.

But he did not jump; Caesar had jumped, too, and had snatched up Go Ahead's pistol as it fell.

"Hol' on there, white man!" he gasped. "Hol' on there. You jes' stay where you is till Mr. George gits ready to receive congratulations. You hear me?"

And Barker stayed. Stella opened her eyes, and Go Ahead looked up. "Pretty near, Barker," he commented. "Pretty nuear. But not quite. Just about two jumps behind, as usual."

Then Go Ahead looked at Caesar. "Thank you, old man," he said. "You doggoned old skeesicks, you!"

"You's welcome, Mr. George, suh. You's welcome. I jes' natu'ly had to butt in, suh. Couldn't no ornery white trash pusson disturb yo' love makin', suh."

"Good enough!" Go Ahead reached out and took the revolver from Caesar's uncertain fingers. "Now you sit down, Caesar, and get all the rest you can," he ordered. "You'll need it We're going to get out of here. . . Bob, dear, will you see how many horses are outside?"

Go Ahead knew perfectly well how many horses were there, but he wanted to give Stella something to do. She was still shaking from head to foot.

But his request brought her to her feet instantly. To the door she stepped. "Five, Go-ey," she said. "One of them has a man tied to it. Oh, I thought it was you!"

"It was—once," Go Ahead grinned. "But that little knife of yours did the trick. It made a bully spur to bring on a fit of buck-jumping, and it cut the ropes enough for the bronc to throw me off; and it finished the job on the ropes before unsuspicious Tony came back to put them up—and then took my place—after we had traded clothes."

Stella did not speak, but her eyes were adoring.

Go Ahead blushed beneath them. "Oh, yes, the horses!" he muttered. "Well, we won't need but four. Think you can hang on to one of them, Caesar?"

"Yessuh! Sure can."

Go Ahead shifted his gaze to Barker. "Now, Barker," he said, "you're going to escort us out of this valley, past the machine guns and all. And you're going to do it without—"

"Wait!" Stella broke in. "Make him do it pleasantly, Go-ey," she begged. "He threatened to kill you if I didn't marry him in your presence, pleasantly." Stella's intonation was somewhat vixenish.

"—You're going to do it pleasantly, Barker," amended Go Ahead. "In return I'll set you free as soon as it's entirely safe to do it; and I won't report on your—er—activities, until—well, say until I find somebody to report them to. Now! Let's go. And heaven help you if you make any trouble on the way out."

Barker made no trouble. The promise of freedom, however qualified, plucked him out of the pit of despair. He was not pleasant as he rode by Go Ahead's side out of the valley; he could not be pleasant. But the group of bandits who scowled at the party as it passed nor the machine gun sentinels by the waterfall passage questioned his friendliness, and none of them were quite ready to try to stop him from going.

After he and the other three had passed out of sight some of the men began to mutter that he was walking off with the girl to obtain whom he had brought them into all this trouble, and was leaving them to hold the bag. But they were not sure of their ground, no immediate peril seemed to threaten them, and they had no leaders; as a result, the suggestion that they go after him and bring him and his companions back fell to the ground.

A mile south of the waterfall Go Ahead halted. He had noticed sundry dust trails rising along the horizon.

"Barker," he said, "I'll keep my promise. It's entirely safe to set you free now, so I'll do it. Beat it!"

And Barker beat it, promptly, without an instant's hesitation.

The three stood looking after him with curious expressions, no two alike, on their faces. And at last Stella spoke.

"Are—are you quite sure you are right in letting him go, Go-ey?" she asked, hesitantly.

"Quiet. . . . N:t that I think he'll go very far. See those dust trails there—and there—and there?" He pointed. "That's Uncle Sam's cavalry. The flying men spotted Robbers' Roost from an airplane day before yesterday, and the troops are closing in all around. Barker may get out of the ring, but I don't think he will. He'll probably be forced back to the Roost; and from what I heard the men say after I traded places with Antonio it's dollars to doughnuts that they'll hang him the minute they know they're trapped."

"And if he gets out?"

"He won't get very far even then. He's too well known. No, it's goodbye to Sheriff Barker."

Stella's eyes clouded. "It—it—was good-night for poor dad, too," she breathed. "He's dead. Did you know it?"

"Yes. Wade shot him last night. I heard the men saying so. They wanted him back when it was too late. But, believe me, Bob, dear, it has all turned out as he would have chosen. He would have taken death rather than the alternatives."

Several hours later, as the tired horses plodded into Mustin, Go Ahead turned to Stella. "Bob, dear," he asked, "what time does the train for the East go through?"

"Why, in—in about an hour. I thought I told you."

"You did. And I was just thinking that an hour was just about long enough to get married. You know I love you, Bob?"

"And I love you, too, Go Ahead. But—but I'm a—a—criminal. I've rob—"

"Forget it, Bob, dear."

"Oh, don't I want to forget it! Don't I want to forget it! And I want to marry you, but—but I won't unless—unless you take all that money that I inherited and that Barker wanted to marry me to get. You will take it, won't you, Go-ey?"

Go Ahead smiled. "I'll do whatever you want me to do, Bob," he said. "But—well, there's the county clerk's office in the courthouse where we can get a license; and there's the church and parsonage alongside it; and if we want to catch that train we've got no time to spare. "So—"

But as they got on the train three-quarters of an hour later, Go Ahead was wondering uneasily, how he was ever going to tell Bob that it was another girl altogether who had inherited that fortune and that she herself had nothing. "She shall never know it if I can prevent it," he decided at last.

WEST STUDENTS BOOST AIRPORT

"Art Advertising," classes at West High have just completed a large poster eight feet square for the use of the Air Port commission to aid in interesting people to vote for the air port bond issue.

Every school in the city has been making posters; but the West High group under W. D. Campbell, instructor in Art, has made this exceptionally large one.

The poster is a large, mechanically correct drawing of the American Insurance Union citadel, six feet high, on the top of which is a sign, "Put Columbus in the Air." Reasons for this are attached with red ribbons to the top of the citadel and are placed in the foreground of the poster. They are "Pays for Itself," "Pay Rolls," "Costs Less Than One Cent Per Hundred Dollars Taxable Property," "Airways Make Paydays," and "Revenue for the City." Around the citadel, high in the air float eight miniature silver Ford model airplanes. The back ground is of a deep blue studded with silver stars.

This poster will be displayed in a window in one of the downtown stores

Rally Day Sunday For Two Churches

Westgate Evangelical and St. Paul's E. C. Have Special Programs.

Two Hilltop Sunday schools will observe Rally Day on Sunday morning.

Rally Day will be observed in the Westgate Evangelical church, 2836 W. Broad St., next Sunday, Oct. 14

A special program is being arranged and all members of the church and Sunday school are urged to be present for this service.

Miss Mildred Hummel, soprano soloist, of the Miller Ave. Evangelical church will sing several selections. Mr. William Bennel, from the same church, will give a number of readings.

Mr. R. M. Fountain, a prominent layman from the Dalbanola M. E. church, will give the address of the morning.

Rally Day will be held at St. Paul's Evangelical Congregational Sunday school, South Warren avenue, next Sunday, Oct. 14.

An original sketch composed by a few members of the Sunday school on "The Value of Attending Sunday School" will be presented. H Meyers of the Columbus Evangelical association will give an address. Every member is urged to be present and friends are cordially invited.

Little Red School House Grows Up But Has Steeple

The little red school house of yesterday has grown up but even today it has its [illegible] reminiscent of the one that stood in the [illegible] many years ago. But today the grown up school house with its steeple is the new West High [illegible] now being completed a square south of Broad street on Powell avenue.

Students who begin work at the new building at the first of next semester if it is completed by then, will be greeted with a structure more than [illegible] they have been accustomed to, yet many will feel entirely out of place in the fine new building.

It is necessary to presume that many will be unable to find their way about in the many halls, rooms and corridors of their new school. Especially will this be hard for the entering freshmen. For those who persist in being kiddies forever it will offer an ideal opportunity to play hide and seek between [illegible] Those who are timid and afraid of the dark will refrain from entering the halls after sundown.

Another very noticeable yet beautiful feature of the new building is the courtyard formed near the center of the structure. This may well be put to use in reproducing the scenes of the courts of old England with their gallant knights and fair ladies.

Workmen at the building are now installing hundreds of steel lockers and many built in features, such as shelves and bookcases. Plastering work in the auditorium is being completed and the floor of the double gymnasium is being laid

It has not been definitely decided when the building will be ready for occupancy but it is thought that the greater portion of it will be ready by February.

NEWS

We wish to call attention to the readers of the Record that we have moved from our location on Broad street and are now located at 14 S. Oakley Ave.

All news and advertising copy should be taken there.

Social items and other news notes of interest are always welcomed.

Many Injured In Auto Traffic

Several From Hilltop Figure in Accidents; Pedestrians Hit By Car.

Several people from the Hilltop figured in accidents of late last week and the week end.

Harold Holcomb, 521 S. Park Ave., was slightly injured when his car struck another driven by George Lauzendorfer, 94 Chittenden Ave., at Summit street and Fifth avenue. The latter's car was overturned.

Hugh H. Carr, 75, 2522 W. Broad St., received cuts about the forehead, right eye and chin when the car he was driving collided with another driven by an Akron man, on the Logan road near Sugar Grove. Carr's auto ran into a field and upset. He was taken to Lancaster for treatment.

Slight injuries were received by Byron and Evelyn Davis, 171 Belvidere Ave., Thursday, when they were struck by an auto as they attempted to board a street car at Sullivant and Belvidere avenues.

Charles Casper, 40, 35 N. Huron Ave., suffered cuts about the face Thursday, when he was struck by an auto driven by Joe M. Doyle, 308 Jefferson Ave., at Mt. Vernon avenue and Eighteenth street. He received treatment at Grant hospital.

SUBWAY

Railroad Track Being Moved to Complete Excavation.

Trains of the Big Four railroad will soon cross West Broad street at Camp Chase over a new set of tracks now being laid east of the present tracks.

This is being done to allow the present tracks to be torn out so that the ground may be excavated to complete the roadbed for the new subway now under construction. The track will be temporary, until the subway is completed.

About 80 men are employed on the subway job at present. Sewer lines are being laid and excavating work will be completed soon. Concrete work will follow, after which the steel construction will be laid.

Typhoid Pneumonia Claims Local Man

James W. Gray, 53, 346 S. Hague Ave., died Sunday at his home following a two weeks illness caused by typhoid pneumonia. He had been a resident of Columbus for the past 23 years and was employed as an electrician for Sears Roebuck Co.

He was a member of the Excelsor Lodge of Odd Fellows of this city and a member of the Methodist church and Order of Red Men at Bloomington, Ind.

Surviving him are his widow, Nellie A., four daughters, two sisters, one brother, his mother and two grandchildren.

We need training in hospitality so that we may properly entertain a good idea when it comes knocking at our door.

New Library Is Busy Spot of Hilltop

One of the busiest places on the Hilltop at present is the new branch library located at 21 N. Hague Ave., which was opened last Thursday afternoon.

Approximately 500 children and adults have been visiting the library each day since its opening last week and the interest shown promises to continue Late Monday evening there had been 500 new registration cards placed on file at the branch and about 100 who had cards at the main library had visited the Hilltop branch. Applications of about 300 others are out, to be returned soon.

It is figured that the new registration at the Hilltop branch is larger than that of either of the other three branches which were opened at the same time.

ADULTS WELCOMED

Faith M. Wolfe, senior assistant, in charge of the Hilltop branch states that there are many volumes of late fiction and classics on the shelves that are of interest to adults and she urges the people of the community to visit the library and take advantage of these. Adults will be welcomed at all times but due to the number of school children that are present during the latter part of the afternoon the adults will be waited on sooner if they come from 1-3.

All adults who register at the branch must have an application blank signed by a property owner and children must have their cards signed by parents. Children will be allowed books two times each week. One book of fiction and one reference book may be taken on a card.

Several other books have been ordered but have not arrived as yet. Included in this number will be the Teachers Reading Circle list and the Childrens Reading Circle list. New books will be received at the branch from time to time.

At present the hours of the library have been set at 12:30 to 5:30. This arrangement may be altered in the near future, so as to allow the library to be open during the evening.

Mrs. Nannie Currier, 45 Eldon Ave., former librarian at Holmes Hilltop Library is on the general staff of the public library at the main office now.

MANY MAGAZINES

Following is a list of popular magazines that are found at the local branch: Baseball, Womans' Home Companion, Delineator, House Beautiful, Good Housekeeping, Saturday Evening Post, American Boy, American Girl, Country Life, Garden and Home Builder, Literary Digest, Mid-Week Pictorial, Bird Lore, Century, American Home, Scientific American, Review of Reviews, Atlantic Monthly, The Bookman, National Geographic, John Martin's Book, Radio Broadcast, Worlds Work, Child Life, St. Nicholas.

Harvest Festival at Glenwood M. E.

First Fall Festival ever attempted by Glenwood church will be held Friday and Saturday nights, Oct. 12 and 13, on the lot just east of the new Hilltop Bank. No admission to the grounds will be charged.

There will be ten side shows. Some of these are as follows: "Melodrammer," "The Successful Operation," "The Midget Ladies," "Topsy," "Wild Animal Circus," "Knife Throwing and Sharp Shooting." In addition to these there will be a main show on the back of the lot.

Practice Basketball

Basketball practice at Highland Junior High school was started this week. Mr. Layman, coach of last year, will direct the boys again

They will play ten games this season, five of which will be at Glenwood shelter house. The first game will be November 8.

Editors Announced

News of Highland Avenue Junior High school published in the Record is supplied by Winifred Rings and Norma Cresap, both students there. They are also editors of the school news published in the daily papers.

Indian Summer Sunday

One of the services anticipated at Glenwood church is that at which the members of the church and congregation who are seventy years old or more are guests of honor. Sunday, Oct. 14 is Indian Summer Sunday. The pastor's subject is "No More Sea."

299,000 Here

Population figures for Columbus have been set at 299,000 by the U. S. Census Bureau at Washington

This is compared with 238,762 in the 1920 census. It ranks fourth in Ohio cities.

Florida Calls

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Dunsmore and Miss Ann Parret, 89 S. Burgess Ave., left Friday for Winter Haven, Fla., where they will make their home. They will return to Columbus next spring.

Business Good

Business of the Columbus post office continues to grow, states James R. Geren, postmaster. September receipts at the local office were $229,107.21 as compared with $246,760.46 of 1927. The decrease is due to the 7 per cent reduction in postal rates.

Big Night School

Approximately 1500 are registered in the two Columbus evening schools according to latest figures. About 1300 of this number have classes at Central High school. The others meet at Champion Avenue school.

On Committee

Miss Lucille Grom, 199 N. Wheatland Ave., served as one of the committee from the Y. M. C. A. Evening College of Commerce, Arts and Engineering, in charge of preparations for the annual fall frolic of the Columbus Y. M. C. A. school Monday evening, Oct. 8.

Rare specimens of insects may be preserved by use of a discovery made by a German chemist, Dr. R. D. Lenisky. The process involves covering them with copper oxide and heating them in small platinum crucibles in an atmosphere of carbon dioxide. The delicate markings and colors are not destroyed by this method

Looking too far ahead is likely to cause doubt—doubt of our ability and fear of the road. To do our best with what is just before us is the surest way of success for that which is further on.

RECORD NUMBER AT P.-T. A. MEET

Judge E. V. Mahaffey Outlines New Court of Domestic Relations.

A new record for attendance was set at the meeting of the Highland Avenue P. T. A. on Monday evening in the auditorium of the Glenwood M. E. church. This came as the result of a three-day intensive drive within the school for new members.

Mrs. Paul Benton, president for the last two years, was presented with a past president's pin by Mr. Reighley, at the beginning of the meeting.

After a brief musical program, the president, Mrs. C. B. Smith, introduced Judge E. V. Mahaffey, who spoke on the "New Court of Domestic Relations"

In his address he pointed out changing conditions that made necessary a new type of judicial procedure to deal not with the criminal but the delinquent. The rise in number of divorce and desertion cases have brought to the court a new type of person. One, in which the old conception of judicial procedure failed to function to the best advantage of society. It was with an idea of humanizing this procedure and helping rehabilitate the home that this court was founded

Mr. H. H. Reighley, principal of Highland, welcomed the new members of the P.-T. A. In a short address he particularly stressed the importance of parents and teachers working together to see that boys and girls get an education and not a collection of fractual material. He stated that he felt that a great majority of this work still fell on the home.

A short social period followed.

BOYS PARTICULAR? NO, SAYS TEACHER

Sugar and spice and everything nice says the nursery rhymes, about what little girls are made of, and boys we find aren't of the same makeup. The same applies here.

"Girls are more particular about what they eat for lunch than boys," states Miss Emma Uncapher, head of the domestic science department of West High school

Boys eat meat, vegetables, sandwiches and milk while girls eat mashed potatoes, desserts, salads and potato chips. Both are pretty regular in eating ice cream and candy the survey shows

Cowboys Lose to Bulldogs

South Takes 16-0 Score From West in First City League Game.

In the opening game of the season in the city high school football league South High eleven defeated the West High Cowboys by a score of 16-0, Friday afternoon on South field.

But it was not without a fight that the Cowboys allowed the Bulldogs to carry home the game by two touchdowns and a place kick. The material of a better team for West was seen in action Friday afternoon. They held their opponents scoreless until the second quarter. There was no scoring in the third quarter either.

Improvement in the West team was noticed, but little improvement was seen in the South lineup. The offensive of West was weak and the line failed to hold when the Bulldogs hit. The defensive of the Cowboys was considered to be fairly good. However, there is room for improvement.

Willis, end for West, was the smallest player, and deserves some recognition for his fight in his first game of the season. Two weeks ago when the team played Sandusky he was manager and last week asked for a place on the team. He will probably continue in the lineup.

West's lineup in Friday's fray was as follows: England, left end; Jeffries, left tackle; Harper, left guard; McClain, center; McCracken, right guard; Larkin, right tackle; Willis, right end; Deshler, quarterback; Culp, left half; Adair, right half; H. Kent, fullback.

The Cowboys will meet Central at Central Saturday afternoon.

SHOW INTEREST IN MUNICIPAL AIRPORT ISSUE

Committee of 50 Appointed to Explain Issue to Hilltop People.

Hilltop citizens celebrated their first "West Side Aviation Day" Wednesday, when scores of aviation enthusiasts from this section of the city visited Norton Field to see, and ride in, the huge three-motored Ford airplane which carried Mrs. Lindbergh on her famous trip to Mexico City last Christmas.

The affair was arranged by the Hilltop Business Men's association, and details were handled by a committee headed by O. C. Voss, which included P. E. Todd, B. Owen Harrison and Harry Miles. This committee was appointed by Ray Hauntz, president of the association, following a special meeting Monday evening. A committee of 50 members also headed by Mr. Voss, was named by President Hauntz to explain the municipal airport bond issue to Hilltop people and urge their support for it.

Major Howard Wehrle, who was the speaker at the association meeting, explained the purposes of the proposed airport, and the reasons why Columbus needs such a port now.

Columbus will be on the principal air lines of the United States if an airport is built now, Major Wehrle said, and also will obtain several aircraft factories that are ready to locate here if an airport is constructed. These factories will grow up around the airport, making it a manufacturing center where hundreds, and probably eventually thousands of Columbus men and women will have employment, he said.

The cost of the airport will be only nine cents per thousand dollars of taxable property and probably will cost the average property owner of Columbus from 35 to 45 cents, he pointed out. It will support itself after it is in operation, and eventually will return a profit to the city.

Columbus without an airport is just like a city located on the ocean without a harbor, he said. Shipping lines will not stop here unless a place for them to stop is provided, just as cities and even state governments provide harbors for sea-going ships.

Every citizen of Columbus will benefit from the construction of an airport, through the greater prosperity it will bring to the city.

D. Q. Gaffney Dies Of Heart Trouble

N. Oakley Ave. Man Succumbs at Home Tuesday; Formerly of Lancaster.

Daniel Q. Gaffney, 76, died at his home, 182 N. Oakley Ave., Tuesday, of hardening of the arteries and heart trouble. He was formerly a resident of Lancaster and had been a resident of Columbus about a year.

While at Lancaster, Gaffney was a foreman of the Lancaster Tire Co. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Lancaster.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Martha Gaffney; a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Jones, at home; two grandchildren, one great-grandchild, two brothers and three sisters.

Funeral service will be held today at 1 p. m. at the residence conducted by Rev. George F. Barber. Burial in Forest Rose cemetery, Lancaster.

Three in Ryan Monoplane Are Mistaken For Lindbergh

Three Hilltop men almost reached the height of fame recently when they came down out of the skies at Cleveland airport in a Ryan monoplane, the exact reproduction of "The Spirit of St. Louis."

As the wheels touched the ground and the plane coasted toward the crowd the people swarmed out onto the field in great numbers and mounted police came out to greet them and to keep the crowd back. For a brief moment all was excitement but this was soon ended when Edward Rice, 2257 Sullivant Ave., pilot of the plane stepped out, followed by Myron Riley, 118 N. Burgess Ave., and Paul Wingham, 72 Eldon Ave.

The cause of the excitement lies in the fact that people of Cleveland were expecting Col. Charles Lindbergh that morning.

All three men are connected with the Columbus Airport on Sullivant avenue. Rice is the first student flyer to take a solo flight at the local field.

Several night flights have been taken since the installation of the beacons and flood lights at the local field. This is the first field in the state to have complete lighting for night flying.

Mr. Sherron, vice president of the Continental Airways, carriers of Air Mail, visited the field recently and stated that it was one of the best lighted fields in the country.

Paul Ninas, direct from Germany, has been making many flights at the field. He was a flyer in the German flying service during the war and is said to have twelve American planes to his credit. He may be stationed here for passenger service soon.

Autumn

Poets write of beautiful spring
And the good old summer time:
They can have them if they want them
But I'll take the autumn for mine.
When the trees come out in blossom
After winter's snow and sleet,
They are very, very pretty
But the autumn's got it beat.

The summer's claim to beauty
Is its flowers and June brides:
They are lovely I'll admit
But when regal autumn glides
Majestically upon the scene
All other seasons fade;
Their beauty is as nothing
To the autumn, heaven-made.

She waves her magic wand and there
Appears just over night,
A riot of bright colors,
A glorious, beautiful sight.
The trees have donned new dresses
Of yellow, brown and red;
The goldenrod is smiling
But the summer's bowed her head.

For she knows with all her beauty
That she never could compete
With the fairer, lovelier autumn,
Which has all seasons beat.
So let the poets rave about
The summer and the spring;
I am loyal to the autumn,
And her praises I'll still sing.

The days of monarchy were revived last Saturday evening at the home of Miss Louise Ruegg, 110 S. Roys Ave., when Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Harris, who were married last Thursday afternoon, were crowned king and queen.

The coronation services were in charge of Miss Ruegg. The King and Queen, gorgeously decorated in court apparel, descended the stairs to the throne where they were crowned with large jello moulds. After the coronation speeches, many friends from kingdoms far and near did obedience and presented the King and Queen with miscellaneous gifts. One thoughtful subject presented the Queen with a rolling pin with which to crown the King a second time, or probably to suppress a rebellion.

After the coronation service the newly made monarchs with friends and subjects entered the banqueting hall where bountiful refreshments were served.

OUR SISTER TO THE NORTH

A writer for the Kiwanis Magazine speaks of Canada as "our sister to the north," and tells of her progress during the last sixty years: she has trebled the population, increased the yield of the wheat better than twenty-fold, multiplied the production of minerals by sixty, increased the railway mileage eighteenfold, manufacturing thirteenfold, fisheries sevenfold, trade and commerce twenty-fold, and banking assets nearly a hundredfold. Canadian resources are still tremendous. Only one fifth of three million acres of arable land is cultivated. The mines grow richer yearly, the forests show few invasions of man, and of her vast water power less than eight per cent has been used.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

GERANIUMS

There is a rather common belief in the rural districts of the United States that Snakes will not go where geraniums are growing and geraniums growing in a window box will prevent flies from entering the window. This superstition attaches to the plants cultivated in gardens and as house plants, which are not geraniums at all, but belong to the genus pelargonium of South Africa. The magical qualities of this plant were transferred to it along with the name from the true geranium, the word geranium being a Greek word meaning crane's-bill, a name given to the true geranium because of the long, projecting beak of the seed capsule. In fact, crane's-bill is the common name for the true geranium.

Now the crane was for long ages a bird of mystery. At a certain season the crane disappeared and at a certain season he reappeared, always flying in V shape. This mystery as to the crane's place and manner of breeding, and the weird dances they indulge in at the time of their love-making caused a wealth of mythology and folklore to grow up around them. It was not until 1853 that it was discovered that the crane sought the shores of the Arctic sea to lay its eggs and rear its young.

Among the ancients there was a belief that forms of plant life were in some cases transformed into forms of animal life. In the mystery which hung over the propogation of the crane the peculiar form of the seed capsule of the geranium caused it to be looked upon with suspicion, and to the plant were assigned some of the mystic attributes which pertained to the crane which was known to be antagonistic to snakes and flies. When the pelargonium came to be called in popular parlance "geranium"—crane's bill—the superstition went with the name. This is a curious example of a superstition surviving by means of a name though the name is now given to an entirely different object from that by means of which the superstition had birth.

GLENWOOD CAMPING GROUNDS

The lack of a suitable municipal camp for automobilists touring through Columbus has been called to the attention of filling station attendants numerous times this summer since the closing of Glenwood park municipal camp early the past season.

From expressions made by tourists most every city of any importance has facilities for caring for autoists who wish to enjoy their vacations touring during the day and camping out at night.

The old camp at Glenwood park was a menace to the health of campers, especially during rainy weather, and the public services department undoubtedly used good judgment in closing it.

However, as has been pointed out, this particular spot could easily be made into a healthy camp and Columbus would greatly benefit by it. The suggestion has been made, since the ground in its present state is too low to be of any practical purpose in all kinds of weather, that the city proceed to fill this ground up level with the street. This filling could be accomplished by allowing clean dirt from excavations to be dumped there, and the cost to the city would be slight, while the advantages in the improved condition would be many.

We don't like to be classed as a pessimist, but we would like to see two or three more traffic lights in the Hilltop business section.

Summertime gives its place in the spotlight to fall, and fairs give theirs to fall festivals. Thanksgiving is in sight and Christmas is just around the corner. Better begin planning who you are to send presents to.

Speaking of the passing summer reminds us that we won't be bothered much longer by the pesky fly that wakes you up on Sunday mornings when you have planned to sleep.

But then we should worry about baseball when we have our old friend football with us again. The biggest upset of the season promises to be when Ohio State beats Michigan.

About the saddest plight a collegiate young feller can get himself into is to take his girl, from another city, to see his college team beaten. But then it is better to have loved and lost than never to have tried to show off.

Dear Folks: This is week number two and I feel like it might be near the finish. At least I am about finished. But to the victor belongs the spoils and we have to our credit about the best looking bunch of freshman girls pledged to the sorority, that you ever cast your blinkers on.

Before I forget—You may recall that I am badly in need of a slicker (the kind you wear when it rains) so a few extra dollars would be appreciated. We have been having several wet parties between classes this week.

Joe wrote last week that the freshmen were sorta dumb looking but take it from me he was either dumb enough or unconscious when he fell for one early this week. That makes one in every class so I guess he must be satisfied.

Well, the football game on Saturday wasn't half bad. But we are looking forward to Michigan as the time when a real Waterloo is to be met up with. Say, if you want to see State beat a game just come on over for the tilt with Muskingum the last of the season.

Classes are O. K. with one exception. I have a prof that hasn't learned how to talk plain English yet and the disappointing part is that he is teaching an English course. If I fail this subject I will feel like decreasing the faculty by one. He sounds like he is recalling the incident of a mouthful of hot mush.

Lest ye forget ..... H

Co-educationally yours,
Josephine.

A GREAT ACHIEVEMENT

Diagram showing water currents through radiator. Inset—Thermostat controlling water temperature.

IMPROVED COLD WEATHER PERFORMANCE Resulting from the

CROSS-FLOW RADIATOR

The cross-flow radiators in the cooling systems of the Pontiac Six and the Oakland All-American Six reduce to a minimum the evaporation of water and alcohol. An automatic thermostat prevents water circulation until the engine reaches correct operating temperature. As a consequence the engine warms up quickly and less choking is needed, reducing dilution of crankcase oil. Because of the protection the cross-flow radiator provides against losses of water and alcohol, the Pontiac Six and the All-American Six require less attention in winter than other cars. Also, through their thermostatic control, they reveal far better performance than other cars in their fields when the temperature is low . . . The cross-flow radiator is available only on the Pontiac Six and the All-American Six. Come in and see it. And learn while you're here of the many other advancements which only these two great General Motors Sixes provide.

CHECK SLEEPING SICKNESS

Missionaries in the outstation of Djapostem, near Meiet, West Africa, point out two lines of improvement in the months they have been working there. One is the progress in checking sleeping sickness, at which the missionary doctor works under the direction of the French Government specialist, and the other is the increasingly receptive attitude of the Africans toward the gospel.

FIRST AUTO IN 1882
It is almost as difficult to date the first automobile as it is to date the first steamboat, for during the last century there were many experiments with self-propelling vehicles. Dr. John Sellers Kilmer, a dentist in Port Royal, Pennsylvania, built in 1882 a steam buggy which really ran. A small steam engine of one and a half horse power was placed in the front of an open buggy. The steering was done by means of a lever, and the wheels were ordinary buggy wheels with a cog attached to the rear. A double seat to carry one passenger with the driver, and a shrill whistle to warn traffic of the approach of a vehicle traveling at the rate of ten miles an hour completed the equipment. By this means he made frequent trips through the Tuscarora and the Juniata valleys. Parts of the old machine may still be seen in the barn of the inventor's brother at the old Kilmer homestead at Kilmer, Juniata County, Pennsylvania. It is claimed for another inventor that he made an automobile which really ran in 1880.

MOTHER, CHILD TRAIN VICTIMS AT CROSSING

Two Die, One Injured, Two Escape in Local Tragedy Thursday.

A mother and baby were instantly killed and another woman injured Thursday afternoon at 1:30, when a single track railroad crossing of the B. & O. railroad at West Mound street and Central avenue became a scene of tragedy so common to grade crossings.

The victims of the accident were Mrs. Isabell Eisele, 30, wife of Henry A. Eisele, 612 Hilltonia Ave., motor car dealer at West Jefferson; and daughter Patricia, age 4 years. Mrs. John J. Puskar, 38, 121 S. Burgess Ave., suffered a broken ankle and shock. She was taken to St. Carmel hospital.

Mrs. Charles Moss and six months old daughter, Patricia Ann, 146 N. Ogden Ave., were in the car but escaped uninjured.

HALTS ON TRACK

The car in which the five people were riding stalled on the tracks in the path of a local freight train bound for Columbus. The car was driven by Mrs. Puskar.

All of the occupants of the car except Mrs. Eisele with her daughter in her arms were able to get out of the car and off the track. She fell in the path of the train and her body was carried 200 feet north of the crossing. The body of the child was carried about 75 feet but she died before aid could be given.

Both bodies were mangled beyond recognition.

Funeral services for the mother and daughter were held at 9 a. m. Saturday in St. Joseph's Cathedral with burial in Green Lawn cemetery by Glenn L. Myers.

Girl Succumbs, Victim of Burns

Was Rescued by Hilltop Boys September 22, Pneumonia Causes Death.

Valiant efforts of two Hilltop Boy Scouts toward saving the life of a small child were recalled Sunday night when the girl died in St. Carmel hospital after being burned on September 22.

The girl was Mary Jane Haldy, 2½ year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Haldy, 331 S. Guilford Ave. Her death came as the result of pneumonia caused by the burns she received nearly a month ago when her clothing caught fire from a bonfire near her home.

At the time she was rescued by Richard Beard, 13, 1490 Sullivant Ave., and Marvin Southworth, 1510 Sullivant Ave., who rolled her on the grass and extinguished the flames after they noticed her clothes on fire.

She is survived by her parents, two brothers, Erwin R. and William O., and her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Haldy and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Wright.

Funeral services were held Tuesday from the residence of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Haldy, 48 Eldon Ave. Burial was made in Memorial Park cemetery in charge of C. J. Kohn.

Balloon Flight 60 Years Ago Recalled Here

While all the air is filled with talk of airplanes, airports and zeppelins, another local angle is given as a 73 year-old resident of the Hilltop recalls an incident of his early boyhood.

We take you back to Germany 60 years ago and the boy of the story is 13 years of age. It is a little school house we visit just at the time the master has dismissed the boys for the day and they begin scampering on their way home.

It also happens that it is what we might term fair week at the village but was known to the native villagers as "cattle market."

Three boys suddenly espie a balloon coming down from the sky and it lands near where they are. The balloon happens to be one that was brought to the "cattle market" for exhibition purposes.

The commander of the ship invited the boys for a ride and as "kids" their curiosity is beyond any thought of asking for consent of parents. They throw aside their books and coats and fly high into the air.

But upon arriving home the one boy we speak of received a spanking from his father for taking such a risk.

Today, Robert M. Lesser, 73, of 76 N. Terrace St., recalls the particulars of this event and he also tells us that the commander of the balloon was none other than Count Von Zeppelin, the builder of the world's first dirigible.

New Method of Study in Schools Cited As Reason for Interest of Children.

Out of 800 juvenile books in the Hilltop Branch library there were but 75 remaining on the shelves Tuesday afternoon. "This is indeed very satisfactory," said Faith M. Wolfe, senior assistant at the library.

Harriet A. Judd, principal of West Broad school in commenting on the interest the children has shown in the library since it opened a few weeks ago, stated that much improvement had been shown in the reading of the children in the past two years due to a new system of teaching. The new plan calls for group study, reports and the use of study readers furnished by the board of education.

On Tuesday 625 new registrations had been received at the Hilltop Branch library.

Reading circle books, of interest to adults, are expected to arrive by the last of this week.

FAMOUS PLANE CARRIES B. M. ON AIR TOUR

Fourteen Local Men Take Trip Over City in Ford Tri-Motored Ship.

Up, up, up in the air—that's most everyone these days as all the air is filled with talk of flying, airports, zeppelins, etc.

And so a local angle is given as several Hilltop business men, members of the Hilltop Business Men's association, give their opinions of a recent ride in the air over the city.

A party composed of R. G. Haunts, P. E. Todd, R. O. Harrison, O. C. Voss, Jack Shank, Fred Sulzberger, K. A. Phipps, C. J. Kohn, T. R. Fletcher, J. H. Young, T. S. Fox, Homer Shank, G. R. Moore and C. Carlton Hartley flew over the city last Wednesday in the Niagara, Ford tri-motored plane at Norton Field. This is the same ship that took Mrs. Lindbergh to Mexico and took aid to the Bremen crew.

In commenting on the trip Voss states, "I was very well pleased. The only thing wrong was that there wasn't enough of it."

"It was most impressive and one cannot realize the beauty of this country until they have taken a ride," said Haunts.

"The scenery was beautiful," stated Homer Shank.

"Can't tell you are moving nearly 90 miles per hour," says Sulzberger.

"I'd be in for aviation if I were younger," said Dr. Fox.

Signs of pleasure were not so much in evidence from Kohn.

Others expressed complete satisfaction in a great future in the air.

Economy Asked By School Heads

Shortage of Funds Makes Saving Necessary Between Now and Christmas.

With the one idea of saving in mind, the officials of the public school board have decreed that the schools must get along on $150,775 less than it had planned.

Due to the shortage of funds the schools are being forced to do away with many extra activities between now and Christmas.

Plans for reducing school expenses will do away with school parties so as to reduce heat and light bills and janitor service.

Pupils have been asked to dress warmly and guard their health in order to reduce the number of school nurses. Painting of unpainted rooms will be stopped. P.-T. A. societies will be asked to meet in the daytime. No books for the school libraries will be purchased until after January 1. Principals may fill vacancies in case of the illness of a teacher.

Do You Remember Way Back? Probably Not So Far as This

Backward, turn backward, ye residents of the Hilltop who recall many of the scenes of former years and familiarize yourselves again with the City of Columbus as it stood in 1821.

A short description given comes from a clipping found in the trunk of William Link, deceased, many years a resident of the Hilltop. It was found by his son, John Link, 158 N. Harris Ave.

"The city contains about 200 houses and 1,000 inhabitants. There are also about four or five English schools besides a school for young ladies and a classical seminary. Here are likewise five common merchantile stores, also one book, one drug and medicine store, a bank, two printing offices, a bookbindery and a commodious brick market house.

"The State House is a handsome edifice of 75 by 50 feet upon the ground and two lofty stories high fronting the west.

"The State and Court houses stand on the west side of the public square, which is an area of ten acres, reserved for public use in the center of the town. The penitentiary is erected in the southwest corner of the town and is enclosed by a high stone wall.

"Broad street is 120 feet wide and High street is 100. All the rest are 82½ feet. The alleys are each 33 feet broad. All the merchantile business is now done on High street between Broad and Town streets."

BIG BUSINESS AND WOMAN

It has been called to the attention of us all that woman has a place in the affairs of the world and noticeably so in big business. We give herein an excerpt from a trade magazine.

"As she sat at the spinning wheel she was a picture of both mastery and subjection. She dominated the wheel but the wheel also dominated her. . . . The inspiration came to mechanics that both maid and machine would be better apart. . . . It was the beginning of the machine age. . . . The washboard, the scuttle, the water pail, the soap kettle, the needle were wrested from the hand of woman . . . into her hand was thrust a new toy—the dollar.

"And now there were many seekers for the hand of woman . . . . Could she master the situation? God made her a woman and thus she was fickle, and being fickle, she did not synchronize with the measured cadence of the giant business machine. . . . She sprang from wool to cotton . . . from cotton to silk and thence to rayon. . . . She began to undress as Big Business covered its horrified face, and petticoat makers collapsed and the corset industry shriveled. . . . She chose a pink bath tub and a blue stew pan. . . . She kicked off the calfskin shoe and demanded snakeskin. . . . Her fads and fancies flabbergasted Big Business."

DESTRUCTION BY FIRE

As to the value of fire prevention campaigns and clean-up drives there is no question but that they are valuable but at the same time a little consideration of the property that is afire should be taken by the firemen.

A recent fire on the Hilltop called firemen out. They extinguished the blaze with ease but proceeded to destroy the wood of the building and did more damage than was done by the fire.

We extend congratulations to the Hilltonia United Brethren church upon its first anniversary.

Fifteen Hilltop Business men are now willing to tell the world that flying has been made safe and is here to stay.

Remembering

By BARBARA G. LITTMAN

Today I lingered in a room scarce used,
And rummaged in a little cretonne trunk;
'Twas' there upon the floor I kneeled and mused
Upon the long forgotten things within the trunk.

The dress of lace I wore on that first night with you,
With silver girdle, and the shoes of blue,
An invitation to a dance you sent to me,
A little much-read note beginning ma cherie.

And too, I found a little long lost hope,
Haunting the gateway to forgetfulness,
The tears are falling silently, I bow my head,
Remembering your kiss—the words you said.

BOOK MAKERS

There are more kinds of bookmakers than one according to Jack Wordley, the college student of the Club, who has just completed the first week of this fall session of school.

One of the big reasons why a college education is so costly, he states, is because of the high price of books and supplies. Book prices range from 50c to $15 and I certainly have a heart full of sympathy for the fellow who buys many of the latter.

Book makers must clean up with prices such as these in effect. Changes in the books from year to year also throw surplus used books on the student's hands that may not be used or sold.

Of course there is another light on the matter that has not been reflected. This is a constantly changing world and to keep in step with the times our students must have the latest in text books and materials.

WHAT TEACHER SAYS

I have noticed that in many cases the school teacher has much more influence over a child than the parents have. One case of interest was presented to me by Professor Tittle who tells of a little girl who would not eat vegetables, clean her teeth or go to bed early.

The teacher gave several health talks before the children and the girl went home and ordered up a meal of vegetables. She also asked for a tooth brush and paste and insisted that she would get a black mark on the health chart if she was not in bed after nine o'clock.

More power to the teacher, I would say, and may she continue to teach health to youngsters who cannot be influenced by parents.

RIGHT OR WRONG

"I have found a man that is absolutely right in everything," said Red Pullin one day last week. "He insists on being right in everything and so you must either be rude to him or admit he is right."

I take it that the man of the case must love to argue just for the sake of argument but this is hardly a commendable spirit.

Yet there are many who will hold up for their side of an argument on the theory of "right or wrong.' I do not agree with such. There is a time for broadmindedness to come on the scene. Because we are attached to a thing is no reason why we should uphold it when it goes wrong. However, some influence should be used to make the thing right.

PREACHERS IN POLITICS

Day after day we may pick up a paper and notice attractive headlines telling of some minister's attack or support of a political candidate. Many are prone to say that the preacher should not express his views and should give all of his words to the theological side of his ministry

However, it is readily seen that if the man is a man of good judgment he may be able to influence his congregation and so do more good for the greater number than he could have done otherwise.

Spectacular subjects for the preacher is another phase of what the changing world is bringing us and rightfully so I would say. The days of theory are giving away to practice.

GOING SOUTH

Fall reminds us of the approach of winter and furthermore we are reminded of it by a family that is leaving for their annual migration to the south. Their winters will be dotted with sunshine while our will be dotted with snowflakes.

We will be optimistic and say the cold weather will be good for our health since a change of temperature is good for the blood.

IN ALL THE WORLD
No Other Low-Priced Six Like This

The Cabriolet • Body by Fisher
Bumpers and Wire Wheel Equipment Extra

Study as thoroughly as you please the entire range of automobiles produced today, you must finally conclude that in all the world there is no other low-priced six like Pontiac . . . For of all the sixes available at as little as $745 only Pontiac offers bodies by Fisher—a 186-cubic inch engine—the cross-flow radiator—a fuel pump—the famous G-M-R cylinder head. Only Pontiac offers such stamina and long life. And only Pontiac offers special factory equipment including six wire wheels and tires with the two spares cradled in fender wells at slight additional cost . . . With all these exclusive features Pontiac Six has established itself as foremost among all low-priced sixes. And with good reason, for where else can you find such advantages for as little as $745?

2-Door Sedan, $745; Coupe, $745; Sport Roadster, $745; Phaeton, $775; Cabriolet, $795; 4-Door Sedan, $825; Sport Landau Sedan, $875. All prices at factory. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include factory handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

PONTIAC SIX
PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS

Pontiac Registrations Lead All Other Sixes

Continuing the record-shattering pace it has maintained since its introduction, the Pontiac Six for the three-month period ended July 31st, led all six cylinder cars in new car registrations in the United States, according to an announcement made here today by W. R. Tracy, vice president, in charge of sales of the Oakland Motor Car company.

This relative standing, based on the most recent compilations received by Mr. Tracy from R. L. Polk and Company, credits the Pontiac Six with a total of 61,500 registrations during the three month period—more than 1,000 cars in excess of its closest competitor, and nearly 2000 units ahead for the single month of July.

This record is regarded as particularly outstanding because the Pontiac Six was first offered to the public less than thirty months before it attained first position in registration of all makes of six cylinder cars.

Almost as remarkable as its gain over competitive cars is the increase in Pontiac sales this year over previous years. In May, registrations were 21,995 units as against 13,238 in May of 1927 and 5,808 in 1926. A similar increase was registered during June and July.

Registrations for the three month period ended in July, in comparison with previous quarters, also reveal in graphic fashion how the Pontiac Six forged to leadership in its field. While registrations for May, June and July of this year totaled 61,000 units, in the same quarter last year, the total was 38,000 cars and in 1926, 17,000 Pontiac Sixes.

The pace established by this lowest priced General Motors Six is expected to be continued, Mr. Tracy stated, in view of the numerous refinements that recently have been added to the car, making it more than ever a popular favorite.

Production is going forward at a rapid pace in the new Pontiac factory, said to be the most modern automobile plant in the world, to meet the anticipated demand during the coming months, according to Mr. Tracy.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS
By H. IRVING KING

DIAMOND DUST DEADLY

There is a widespread belief today, not only among the ignorant, but among those "who ought to know better," that diamond dust, taken internally, is a deadly poison. The poisoners of the Middle ages and after used diamond dust as an ingredient of their lethal draughts and every now and then today you will hear some one say: "Diamonds are poison if you swallow them." Sir Thomas Overbury was poisoned in the Tower in the reign of James I by being fed arsenic and diamond dust, and his death was sacrificed quite as much to the harmless dust of diamond as to the deadly arsenic. Not many years ago an attempt was made to poison the Gaikwar of Baroda by means of a like mixture.

We find this belief in the poisonous qualities of the diamond taken internally extending far back in history. But also we find that the diamond was, paradoxical as it may seem, supposed to possess curative qualities of great value. Applied externally it was highly recommended as a cure for fevers.

The diamond gets its reputation as a cure and as a poison from the same fact—that of its resemblance gave it the character among the ancients of a refrigerative stone of great potency. Applied externally it reduced the temperature and cured a fever; taken internally it froze the intestines and produced death. The first of these superstitions we have apparently lost; the second is still with us. The idea which endued the diamond with its refrigerative qualities is akin to that which produces the "doctrine of signatures" by which plants were supposed to indicate by their markings or structure their particular place in medicine.

ANTIQUE EXHIBITION

The British Antique Dealers' association will hold an exhibition in May, 1929, where it will show, among other things, the oldest letter in the world. The letter is dated 500 B. C. and refers to the purchase of a field in Babylon. It is written in cuneiform characters on fire clay, and when found at Ur was inclosed in a clay envelope.

STABALIZE EASTER DATE

The English Parliament has taken steps to stabilize Easter, fixing it for the Sunday following the second Saturday in April. Proponents of the bill point out the desirability of an Easter which can vary only within a limit of seven days instead of thirty-five. The change would give greater uniformity in the schedules of schools, railroads and so forth, as well as of business houses. At present a financial year beginning April 1 may contain either two Easters or none at all

Signed Lindy For Lessons

Page is the man who signed Lindbergh for lessons in flying in 1922.

Ray Page, Friend of Lindy, Lands at Columbus Airport

While the downtown newspapers carried stories of the landing of two famous flyers at Norton field on Sunday evening, it so happened that one of the famous air men landed at Columbus Airport, the Hilltop flying field on Sullivant avenue, instead of the east side field.

At about the same time Col. Charles Lindbergh landed at Norton Field from the east, Ray Page, the man who first signed Lindy for flying instructions in 1922 at Lincoln Airport, came down from the sky at Columbus Airport in a Lincoln-Page plane, one of his own make.

When Page learned of Lindbergh's presence in town he called him and planned to meet him Monday morning.

The honor of "taxiing" Page and his pilot, W. A. Brooke, downtown to a hotel, went to Gifford Markeson, 18, air enthusiast at Columbus Airport and employed at the Record Printing Co.

Conversation on the trip to town was centered about the Lincoln-Page plane and the Columbus Airport.

Page thinks the Hilltop field is a very good airport and states that he likes it better than Norton Field, according to Markeson, because of the accessibility and nearness to town.

He was recalling instances of his meeting with Lindbergh. "Lindy has always been a quiet and unassuming chap and he was especially so the day he came to the field for information concerning flying lessons. He hung around the hangers about an hour before he finally introduced himself and told us he wanted to learn to fly."

WEST DRAFTING CLUB WILL OFFER AWARDS

Students in Mechanical Drawing Will Compete for Prize.

Alpha Omicron Delta, the drafting club at West High, a new organization of last year, has organized this year with a renewed interest. C. S. Kennedy is their advisor.

This year, as last, they are offering an award to the pupils in the mechanical drawing classes receiving the best grade and completing the most and the best plates in the shortest time. This is not a contest but a real test of the ability of the students, extending over the whole school year. To aid in their study of mechanical drawing, the classes will, in the course of the year, take many trips to factories and see the practical use of their drawings.

The club's first social activity of the year will be a late fall picnic held November 2 along the Scioto river near the storage dam.

Coins and Bills of Many Kinds in Store Window

Money always is attractive to most people and a collection on display in a local Hilltop store window should attract especial attention. Coins and bills of many countries and many ages are shown in the window of the Broad-Hague Hardware Co., 2768 W. Broad St. They are the property of Brady Hill, New Lexington, O., employed at the store, who states that he has been collecting them since he was a child.

Among the curious pieces we mention the 20c piece and the 5c, 10c, 25c and 50c bills, once known as shin plasterers. There is also a 3c silver piece.

Probably the rarest pieces are the two Roman coins bearing dates of 100 B. C. They are heavy and irregular hammered coins.

In the gold coins there are pieces formerly valued at $3, $1, $2.50, 50c and 25c. These are both round and octagon shaped, made of California gold.

A Lincoln penny bearing the initials of the designer and the date 1909 is also very rare. These pennies have been called in and few of them are held by individuals.

A non-milled 50c piece has the date 1853. Two shillings, six pence, bill bearing the date 1772 has this inscription on it: "To Conquer Is Death."

STUDY CLUB IS P.-T. A. TOPIC

West Broad Association Hears President of Franklin County Group.

"Study Clubs," was the topic of Mrs. H. G. Watson, president of the Columbus and Franklin county Parent-Teacher association in her address before the meeting of the West Broad P. T. A. Friday afternoon.

Each school should have as many study clubs as possible, states Mrs. Watson. She pointed out however that the clubs should not be too large. Better work can be accomplished by organizing more clubs and have fewer members in them.

The purpose of the clubs is to give the parents a chance to study child training and development. There are two such organizations in the West Broad association at present. One of these has been functioning for two years and there are about eight clubs in the city.

Mrs. D. L. McCready, 273 S. Powell Ave., and Mrs. Fred Sulsberger, 2948 Crescent Dr., presidents of the two clubs were named by the association as delegates to the Institute of Parental Education being held at Ohio State university this week.

Mrs. Myron Siebert gave a short address on the duties of the Domestic Relations Court.

RANDALL URGES JUDICIAL VOTE

Candidates Must Be Studied to Assure Voter of Intelligent Vote, He Says.

Speaking at three meetings in different sections of the city Tuesday night, Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., candidate for Judge of the Common Pleas Court, stressed the fact that a large number of voters neglect to vote on the judicial ballot. He stated that there is no party designation or symbol on the ballot and that voters must make a study of the candidates for judge so they may vote intelligently.

In commenting on the duties of the Judges he stated that there should be an equality of administration for the rich and poor, low and high, Protestant and Catholic, black and white, weak and strong. He further stated that the court should be no respecter of persons and by maintaining this attitude the people would have increasing respect for the courts.

He makes his appeal for election to the rank and file of the citizenship and makes no entangling alliances which will hinder him in the administration of even handed justice, he told his audience.

He is scheduled for three or four addresses each night in the coming week.

During his campaign he has been well received and friends on the Hilltop are confident of his election.

Solomon Sayeth Much Mischief To Come to Pass

And it came to pass . . . what? Why, Hallowe'en of course, and everyone knew it for many days before the appointed time. For it happened that the youngsters of the town sought practice in their revelry of mischief and found clean windows and porch furniture good subjects for experiment.

Sayeth Solomon: "It is written that if there be any mischief born in a boy it shall surely be out on this night of all nights, commonly known to the wise sages as Hallowe'en. And true it is that there will be many of the opposite sex who wish to mock the younger males and ply their trade of pranks along with them."

And down through the ages has come this time for pranks and time to form many new ones have been accomplished. For history doth reveal to us that in King Arthur's boyhood days it was great sport to pitch juicy fermented tomatoes over the castle walls and wait to hear them squash on some bald baron's head.

Then in early colonial days we see no reason why 'twould not have been of interest to hear the language of some pure puritan father as he pulled the cockle burrs from his white powdered wig the morning after the night before.

And 'tis said by grandmothers of present day that an exchange of wagon wheels and the exchange of cows for pigs would serve as an annoyance to those who had forgotten they were once young.

"And today," sayeth Solomon, "feel yourself lucky indeed if all your soap is removed with one washing and be not so foolish as to start a cleanup until the week following the appointed time, which is next Wednesday."

Mother's Cook Book

And I will trust that he who feeds
The life that hides in mead and wold,
Who hangs you alder's crimson beads
And stains these mosses green and gold,
Will still, as He hath done, incline
His gracious ear to me and mine:
Grant that we ask aright, from wrong delay,
And, as the earth grows dark, make brighter every star.

CHEESE AND OTHER DISHES

Cheese is such a concentrated and wholesome food that for a warm weather dish it is ideal. Though fairly high in price there is no waste as there is in meat, for which it is a good substitute.

Dinner Cheese

Put through the meat chopper one-half cupful of stuffed olives, add to one cream cheese and when well blended add two cupfuls of grated American cheese. Season well with salt, roll in a long roll and decorate with slices of stuffed olives. Pass with a cheese knife and let each guest serve himself.

When preparing a salad or cocktail of fruit, using grapefruit, save the juice and thicken with a bit of gelatin and serve the next day cut into cubes with cream cheese as a salad.

Cream Cheese Sandwiches

Mash a cream cheese and moisten with French dressing. Spread thin slices of graham bread with the mixture and sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper (red), cover with bread, spread with butter, trim off crusts, cut into finger strips and toast lightly on both sides. Serve hot with salad.

Onions With Cheese

Cook until tender half a dozen onions. Drain and place in a layer in a baking dish, cover with a well-seasoned white sauce and sprinkle generously with rich, strong cheese. Cover with another layer of onions and sauce and finish with a layer of buttered crumbs on top.

One of the best of cough sirups is onion. Prepare by slicing an onion or two into a saucepan, add a tablespoonful of water and a cupful of sugar, cover and stew slowly until the onion is soft, add a little butter and eat the whole mixture, or strain if necessary.

Chopped onion placed as a poultice on the chest is beneficial in all colds or flu. Mix with a bit of rye flour and moisten with vinegar, place on a thin cloth and change the poultice as soon as it is dry.

Onions fried with apples make a most tasty dish to serve with pork roast or chops. Cook the onions for a few minutes before adding the apples. Add seasoning of salt, pepper and a little sugar.

Cheese and Chicken Dish

Rub the yolk of a hard-cooked egg to a paste with a tablespoonful of olive oil or soft butter. Add one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of made mustard, one-half teaspoonful of sugar, and a few dashes of cayenne pepper. Mix with two cupfuls of grated cheese and one cupful of chopped chicken. Press into scallop shells or ramekins and bake just long enough to melt the cheese. If too hot the cheese will be tough and stringy.

Cadillac Chicken

Wipe a chicken dressed for broiling, sprinkle with salt and pepper, place on a broiler over a hot flame or coals for eight minutes. Remove and rub over with the following mixture: Cream four tablespoonfuls of butter and add one teaspoonful of made mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of vinegar and one-half teaspoonful of paprika. Sprinkle with three-fourths cupful of buttered crumbs and bake in a hot oven until the crumbs are brown.

Orange Puffs, Orange Sauce

Prepare a cottage pudding mixture and bake in buttered gem pans. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff and add one cupful of powdered sugar gradually, beating constantly, then add the grated rind and juice of two oranges and the juice of one lemon.

Fill cream puff shells with ice cream and serve with a chocolate sauce. This is not only a quick dessert but one which is very well liked. The sauce may be maple or caramel if preferred.

The Poet's Prayer

By Barbara G. Lillman

Give me a wayfarer's wanderlust
Give me a Romany night,
Give to me songs unending
In the lyrical pale moonlight.

Give to me dreams of a lover:
That I may fashion them in Passions of Lyrics and Laughter.
Music that others may sing.

Give to me joys and sorrows,
That I may learn how to weep.
Give to me beautiful prayers,
Give me best dreams to keep.

Schoolday Clothes Must Include A Chic Coat For Miss Junior

Back to readin', 'ritin' and 'rith metic! Reluctantly does youth respond to the autumn call. But there are some compensations to the school-girl—the planning of a new wardrobe, for instance. One of the first considerations is a "comfy" coat and if it is for Miss Junior it must most assuredly qualify in chic down to the minutest detail.

The modish miss will more than realize her ideals in the new fall coat styles, which have been designed especially for her. In the first place, the school girl who tours the shops in search of a coat of her dreams, will find to her delight many belted models—and belts are so intriguing to the mind of slender youth.

Then, too, Miss Junior on her round of inspection will learn to her satisfaction that bright navy bends the list of popular colors for the simple cloth coat. She will also see gay plaids a-plenty in the autumn displays. Many of the new lookings are plain on one side, plaided on the other. It is a material of this sort, tan in this instance, reversed with plaid, which the stylish selected for the development of the attractive coat in this picture. Black silk braid is used for binding the entire coat, which gives it a very smart detailing. The shawl collar and cuffs are cut according to the latest dictum. The swagger belt is fastened with a fancy buckle.

Now if our fastidious young college or high school student is interested more particularly in fur-trimmed models, there is a new sort which ought to attract any seeker of what's what in junior styles. We refer to the fur scarf-collared coats. They're different! The throw scarf instead of being made of the cloth of the coat is of fur. These scarfs are fashioned either of flat furs, sauved skunk, seal, squirrel and the like, or of longer hair pelts. They are thrown over the shoulder like the usual scarf, one end being purposely very long, the other served up about the collar line.

Feminine Figures Fill Men's Chous

Just before the dawn
Still Plugging
O. S. U.

Dear folks:

Sure and its how the word is yet to come but then you know that the hour before dawn is the darkest, so after exams are over we may be able to settle down to business again.

The truth of the matter is that after a hard week end of showing Michigan that we have something left besides a football team, we are now faced by mid terms from every prof. on the campus. Hard heartedness is no name for it all, is what I say.

And now for another shock. It is relative to another tradition at State that has been torn to pieces. Scarlet mask, the dramatic society of the campus that has been so successful in past years in staging productions with all male casts, have opened their ranks to the feminine sex and no longer are we to see the graceful forms of football players, etc., swinging to pretty tunes in a girls' chorus.

Josephine has been swinging a wicked dance step during the last week end and she sends her regards.

Fraternity initiations begin this week end and I will give you a beautiful picture of what it is all about next week.

Yours for better games with Michigan,
Joe.

INSECT EXHIBIT

A vivarium has been opened in Paris, according to the Literary Digest, which contains an unusual exhibition of insects. The insects are shown in their natural environments, in glass cages lifted up to seem homelike to them. Heat, humidity, and light have formed great problems to be solved. In some instances it has been necessary to feed the insects for the benefit of the public. The scorpions, for example, insisted on burying themselves, leaving an apparently empty cage. However, they seem satisfied to hide beneath plates of transparent glass placed in their cages, through which they can readily be seen.

THE GROCER KNOWS WHO IS BOSS

Are men easier to sell to than women, or vice versa? The corner grocer will tell you that men are easier, but not for the reason you suppose.

Every well-trained husband does his shopping from a list carefully compiled by his wife. He usually hands the list to the clerk, who thus is able to see that the customer wants cheese and butter and gets them both while he is over at the ice-box. He also saves time and further steps by collecting all the canned goods in one trip to the shelves. The delay of waiting for the customer to make up his mind between canned peas and canned corn is eliminated.

And yet there is a disadvantage in having men customers, the grocer will tell you. The man will buy nothing that is not on the list. He may be interested in a new item, but the invariable excuse is, "I'll speak to the Misses about that, and if she wants some she'll be in tomorrow."

In fact, women hesitate to buy something new until they have heard it talked over at the bridge table or questioned some neighbor who has tried the item and liked it. Not until a new product has been repeatedly advertised in her favorite paper does she feel safe in experimenting with it. Men probably change their buying trends more frequently, for there is fun in trying something new; but women hesitate to overthrow the established order of things with untried ventures.

And so, while your grocer welcomes occasional men customers, he knows that his business is built on the good-will of his women buyers. The grocer knows who is the boss.

MILLIKIN FOR REPRESENTATIVE

In the coming election a man from the Hilltop will endeavor to become a state representative on the Democratic ticket.

Wyatt L. Millikin, hardware merchant on the Hilltop for the past 23 years, has always been active in the affairs of the community and has shown that he has the interests of the city at heart.

With service to his credit as a city councilman, Millikin, knows and understands the legislation. His fair dealings and success in other lines is further proof that he should receive the vote of residents of the Hilltop in the coming election.

The idea of supporting a man for election just because he comes from one's home community is probably commendable but in the coming election we may even be safe in supporting our home community men because of their ability and fitness for the office.

There are many who will want to be classed with us when we say a weatherman who predicts rain before the big football game should be exterminated.

The Spectator

"The boys of today
Are responsible."

ANOTHER STEP.

Just another step toward better transportation methods was accomplished with the arrival of the Graf Zeppelin from Germany last week.

Those who are far sighted and broad minded can see a great future in the air industry and in this particular phase of it. The day is not long distant when passenger service in such ships, across the Atlantic, will be more or less common.

Risky, say those who would insist that we are not to move forward in this line.

Not so, is the answer of the engineer and maker of aircraft. Safer than train, travel or sailing ships, they claim.

In this case we would favor the word of the engineer and look for great things to come to pass.

DR. ECKNER SPEAKS.

Modern science made it possible for thousands of people over the world to know the latest events of the flight of the Graf Zeppelin. These were in the reports that came over the radio.

In the reception that came from New York we heard Dr. Eckner, pilot of the giant ship, speak in his broken English.

Said he, "Knowing that thousands are listening to me now, I feel that I have a greater task than that of flying the Zeppelin across the Atlantic.

WHAT DOES TOMORROW HOLD?

While in session last week listening to the reports of the Zeppelin flight, the members of the club discussed many things at random.

"Life would be dull if we knew what it was all about," said Sir Little. "Here is an instance of one of the great things we never knew we would realize several years ago. People of yesterday would have thought us foolish to have described the coming of such an air liner. Today there are thousands who likewise believe the greatest things have come to pass. But then I am glad I live now and can look forward to the many new wonders of the world that are yet to come. The things we aren't sure about are those that take the dullness from life."

SMITH OR HOOVER?

"It is not my habit to predict the returns of election," states Red Pullin, "but in the situation that faces us at present in the coming election I would be willing to take a chance on the outcome.

"A straw vote in the university shows that Hoover is favored 2 to 1. Similar straw votes in the daily papers from the state at large shows that around 60 per cent of the voters will mark their ballots for Hoover.

"Just taking the results of the vote in Ohio may not be enough to show the definite outcome of the election but I am confident that my judgment will not fail me when it comes to the nation at large."

THE BOYS.

Often the old people gather around the open fire place and while looking into a bed of glowing coals remark that their life was one of hardship while young. They cite the instances where they milked the cows, chopped the wood and walked three miles to school.

"No boy would think of such today." This last remark comes from someone who has forgotten that today is nothing like yesterday.

"But the truth of the matter," says Professor Tittle, "is that boys of today would take charge of things and be as responsible as we were if they were called upon to do so. The only difference is that the boys don't have to do such things today."

Tough on Business

Recently a party of local business men took a trip in a Ford plane over the city. In the group was C. J. Kohn, undertaker. He, it happened, was the only member that expressed himself as not being in favor with the ride.

There were some in the group who claimed that he saw the plane was too safe to be of any value to his business.

The best remedy for the sweet young member of the family who makes a habit of going out at night and returning after all others are tucked in bed, and persists in turning on the hall light and making much noise, is to turn on the radio full force after she has retired early for once in many weeks and is much in need of sleep.

PHOTOGRAPHS WILD ANIMALS

The Literary Digest tells how Martin Johnston takes pictures of elephants and other animals in Africa. He sets out large sweet-potato plantations, which are very attractive to the elephants, and places through them cameras, equipped with flashlight appliances. The elephants believe that at night they will be safe in the potato patch; so they browse through it, sometimes to the advantage of Mr. Johnston, for in this way he has got many good flashlight pictures.

The memory of noble actions is more enduring than monuments of marble.

Speaking of pleasantness, it isn't such a hard job to be that way most of the time. Everyone likes a fighting spirit but there usually must be a reason for displaying fight spirit.

West Side Candidate

Probably the best qualified and experienced candidate for office in the coming election is Henry J. Kline, candidate for county treasurer on the Democratic ticket. His 12 years' experience in government work assures his qualifications. Being employed for the last five and a half years in the office of county auditor, he has come in direct contact with the tax duplicate of Franklin county and the office of county treasurer.

It is because of his training in government work that he will be able to install at once those conveniences, modern systems and economic measures which will be profitable to the people.

He is a native of Franklin county and a life long resident of the West Side.—Adv.

TO EXCAVATE OLD CITY

Sybaris, ancient Greek town of south Italy, which has provided all European languages with a word expressive of licentious luxury, is to be brought to light after 25 centuries, during which its very location was forgotten. The extensive marshland along that part of the gulf of Taranto is to be reclaimed by the Italian government at a cost of $40,000,000. Experts have been detailed to watch for the buried city and a portion of the allotted money will be granted for the excavation. Sybaris was destroyed in the sixth century, B. C., by its neighbor and rival, Croton, which altered the course of a river in order to bury it forever. Some archaeologists believe the excavations will supply valuable (and perhaps scandalous) information concerning daily life six centuries anterior to Pompeii.

AIRPORT BOND ISSUE COST WILL BE SMALL

Will Constitute an Investment Which Will Repay First Cost According to Former Mayor Karb.

Columbus voters will pass on the least expensive bond issue ever offered them on Nov. 6, when they decide whether the city is to have a modern airport, according to former Mayor George Karb.

Not only will the first cost be low, but it will constitute an investment that will eventually repay the first cost and no doubt return a profit to the city for years to come, he pointed out. Never before has a bond issue been presented in Columbus which would actually pay itself off.

The cost of the airport bond issue to the taxpayer will be very small, Mr. Karb explains. It will amount to nine cents for each $1000 of taxable property. The family which owns property valued at $8000 probably will find that this property is carried on the tax duplicates at about $5000. This would cost that family 45 cents a year for the airport bonds.

The average family, according to estimates made recently, will pay considerably less than that amount, probably not more than 35 cents. As the airport is placed in operation and begins to return a profit taxes again can be reduced, and after a few years the saving probably will be more than the present increase, county officials have predicted.

Building of the airport is also the building of jobs for hundreds of Columbus men and women, bigger payrolls, a greater population and a more prosperous city.

The most vital need of Columbus today is new factories, and more industries, to enable the city to continue to grow in population and prosperity, Mr. Karb said. Aviation offers the best opportunity for obtaining these industries. The city itself must do what it can to attract them here. Now that the definite promise of several aircraft industries is assured, it remains only for the city to provide the facilities they need to bring them.

Columbus must take the same steps toward providing an air harbor that New York, for example, took in providing a water harbor. Except for the far sighted activities of the people of New York when rail and water transport was beginning to develop, some other city might easily have been the great eastern metropolis, and New York might have been a small seaboard city, to this very day.

Columbus may become the great airport metropolis of the middle west and will certainly enjoy a healthy growth and greater prosperity if the airport bond issue is passed on Nov. 6.—Adv.

Chamberamaid.—"I found seventy-five cents in your bed this morning, sir."

Professional.—"Ah, my sleeping quarters, no doubt."

"Noise! Shure, each wan cries so loud yez can't hear the other."

It was lunch hour at the roundhouse and Pat's two buddies, deciding to play a little joke on him during his absence, drew the features of a donkey on the back of his coat, which he had left behind. In due time Pat returned, and presently bore in sight bearing the line-decorated coat.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

LOYALTY OR PREJUDICE?

One of the witnesses at a recent important trial in New York came from a city in the Middle West. He was immensely proud of his city and wanted everybody to know it.

"It's the best city in the world to live in," he volunteered for the edification of the crowded courtroom. "And it's growing faster every hour."

The city to which he referred is in no way unusual. It is an ordinary middle western city—attractive in some respects and less attractive in others. Yet this native son—like many others—described it as the best residential city in the world.

He did not specify in what way this ordinary city surpassed all the other communities of the globe as a piece of residence. He would probably have been at a loss to answer if he had been asked to do so.

But that city was his home. That was enough for him.

Merely because he lived there he considered that city superior to San Francisco, New York, Paris, Vienna or Constantinople.

And the fact that it was growing so fast was another point in its favor.

* * * * * *

Was the city growing better or more beautiful? Well, it was growing bigger.

Were its people becoming wiser or nobler? Well, they were increasing in number.

All the narrow provincialism of history seemed reflected in this man's unreasoning pride in his city. Because he was associated with that city and with the people in it the place was necessarily superior to any other place on earth.

Could any amount of argument make him admit that his city was not the finest in the world? Probably not.

You might make him concede that Nice has a better climate, that Rome has better buildings, that New York, London or Paris have as charming residents. But he would still doggedly insist that his little metropolis was superior to all others.

* * * * * *

For ages men have insisted that their family, their tribe, their village or their country surpassed all others—merely because they were a part of the whole.

This attitude has led to countless wars in the past. It will doubtless lead to more in the future.

One tribe or one nation feels that it is superior to all others, and thereupon sets about converting its rivals to its own way of thinking. Nearly always, the imagined superiority is nonexistent.

It may seem a long step from the blind enthusiasm of a native son to the overweening arrogance of a monarch. But there is a certain unreasoning prejudice that is common to both.

ONLY WAY TO HOLD A HUSBAND

If there ever were two people mismated by environment, it was Blanch and Peter. Blanch is my niece and hers had been a chocolate eclair upbringing. Peter came from pioneer stock—hardy folks who recalled living, during the grasshopper invasion, on corn bread and "nigger heel." He had been raised on pan dowdy, noodles, boiled dinners and pie. So when Blanch gave him heavenly hash, and pond-lily salads, poor Peter almost starved, and Blanch scraped most of her expensive viands into the garbage pail. She threw out enough every meal to keep Henry and me for a week.

Still, I didn't feel to horn in till one morning when Blanch came over looking like a gravestone.

"I'm leaving Peter," she said.

"Who's the Janie?" I asked calmly.

"Oh, it isn't that, Aunt Jen. Last night was Peter's birthday and I had a lovely dinner. He didn't come home even. Phoned he had to stay down on business. And my dinner gone to wa-a-a-ste—"

"What did you have?" I demanded.

"Oh, caviare and a tulip salad—"

"Any gravy?"

"Gravy Why, no. Eclairs and gingerbread.

"Angel food," she said stiffly, "and strawberries."

"At a dollar a box," I snorted.

"That isn't all,' she went on tragically. "This morning I happened to pass a restaurant—a common, greasy place. And there sat Peter with his legs wrapped around a stool, eating pie!"

"Many a man," I said tartly, "has eaten pie and lived to tell the tale."

"Common pie," ignored Blanch—"doesn't like my cooking—" —, — .

"What did you have for breakfast?"

"Oh, what's the difference? I guess we had corn flakes with fruit. And—oh, yes, I forgot to order coffee."

"I see. Expect a man to work all morning on a dish of fodder. Why don't you go home and cook him a real meal one. Apple dumplings, pork chops, turnips—"

"I'm not in the habit of living on prison fare," she wailed.

"No man can live on whipped cream and sawdust," I said firmly. "Peter is one man in a thousand. He has to eat down town to keep body and soul together. It's a wonder you keep up on Peter's saintly—"

"We can't," she interrupted. "We had a scene this morning. Peter says we're living beyond our means. That we're not saving a cent. But I can't keep the bills down. Aunt Jen, I believe they cheat me. I order over the phone. My grocery bill is about twenty a week."

"Henry would sue me for divorce," I ejaculated.

"Peter says I've got to run the house on a hundred. He told me I could have what I saved out of it for a nestegg. But I can't save a cent. And if Peter's going to crab about money I'm going home, so there!"

She burst into fresh weeping. Blanch adored the ground he walked on.

"Blanch," said I, taking the bull by the horns, firmly, "Helen of Troy couldn't have held a husband with chocolate eclairs. It's as true as the fact that all men are at heart Mormons; that the way to their heart is through their stomachs. Now I'll wager that Peter isn't staying downtown tonight on business. He's just getting a square beal somewhere, maybe with some vamp.

Blanch looked at me coldly.

"Peter isn't the kind to take his stenographer out to meals," she said drawing herself up. "He hasn't gone that far—"

"If he hasn't he will," I told her grimly. "Men are all alike. Suppose we play detective and find out. Not that Peter wants to be unfaithful but—well—you've got to feed a man. That's a biological fact. And when you don't, why, they just naturally gravitate towards the forbidden cooky jar."

"I wonder if you're right," murmured Blanch waveringly. Suddenly she ran to the closet and flung on a hat. "Come on," she said to me tensely. "He's always talking about Hattie King's restaurant. If you're sure about your theory we'll just go down and see if he's there."

"Put on an old raincoat," I directed "and an old hat. We don't want him to recognize us. We'll just drift in and ask for a sandwich and coffee and then we'll see what we can see."

So we set out. I will admit that Hattie King's restaurant looked inviting on that cold, drizzling afternoon. It was homey and cheerful looking, and the windows had watermelon pink check gingham curtains. There was a delicious smell of hot gingerbread in the air that reminded one of mother's kitchen when I was a little girl. We sat down at a black table close to a curtain that shut off the rear.

And would you believe it, when this Hattie King parted the curtain to take our order, who should be sitting before a little round table set for two, but Peter! Blanch saw Lily and half started up but I stepped on her foot under the table. Hattie King brought us our coffee and gingerbread, and then she went back, and we heard them talking. Peter's voice was low, but Hattie King's was loud enough for us to hear if we listened. It was a comfortable voice, deep and rich and motherly.

"Take another hunk of gingerbread—do," she urged. "There's plenty more where that came from. And now what's this about you and your wife quarreling and she leaving you?" She gave a low bubbling laugh. "Huh, didn't I sense that you wasn't hittin' it off the minute you come into my place? Can't fool Hattie King."

"Why, the great big vamp," ejaculated Blanch. "She's leading him on!"

But I strained my ears while Peter uttered something away down in his throat.

"Well, you come to the right place, Boy, you sure did." Again that throaty chuckle. "She means all right but she's young and she don't know men. Of course, you're crazy about her, but you don't gibe. And she can't cook—"

"I'm starving to death," groaned Peter. He rose from the table and took out an old pipe. "Mind if I smoke? Of course, you don't, I ought to go back but, by doggies, this is homelike. I'm a cad to tell you but I couldn't help it. You're so-so sort of understanding."

Blanch stood up. I could see at a glance that she had seen Peter reach and take Hattie King's big pudgy hand in his. But I whispered "wait," and she sat down.

"Now listen, boy," came in the big comfortable voice, "you're just a hungry kid, that's all that ails you. Have you told your wife what you told me? Well, you go straight home and read her the riot act. Tell her the truth; how you're been coming to my place not because you're a trifler, but because you're just plain hungry. Tell her if she wants that I should, I'll teach her how to cook real, satisfyin' dishes. And tell her from Hattie King that that's the only way to hold a husband."

I couldn't stop Blanch now. She was shooting right for the front door. I left the money on the check and followed her, looking back to see Hattie King removing our dishes. I couldn't keep up with Blanch at all. And she didn't say one word. But I saw when we passed the street lights that she was crying.

That was a year ago. I was over just last evening. Peter was purring like a tomcat, stretched out on the mohair davenport, with his feet on the cushions. I smelled cabbage. There was the remains of a pot roast on the table, and I caught a glimpse of a pan in the oven partly filled with gingerbread.

"Hello, Aunt Jen," said Peter, swelling up like a poisoned toad. "Help yourself to a piece of my wife's gingerbread. If you don't find it the lamb's lettuce—"

"Peter," demurred Blanch, with a little blush. And talk about affinities! You should have seen the look that passed between them. It all goes to show my contention that any wife has it all over a vamp if she's sensible enough to show her hand.

VARIEGATED POP CORN

An Iowa farmer has produced pop corn in yellow, lavendar, red, and other colors by crossbreeding and careful selection. By mixing stub-rice pop corn and bantam sweet corn and ear was produced which mensured three inches in length, averaged about 1,000 kernels to the ear, and popped from twenty to twenty-four sacks to the pound. The usual yield is only twelve or fifteen sacks. Some of the new varieties have been sold for $200 a bushel, and as high as $3 a pound for seed purposes.

LARGE MAP OF HEAVENS

After they had photographed more than 15,000,000 stars and prepared 30,000 charts, the Oxford and Greenwich observatories have completed a large map of the heavens. Nineteen observatories in different parts of the world have co-operated for a period of forty years in assembling the material.

SOVIET LAW

The Soviet Government of Russia enforces very strictly a law under which everything that a farmer raises, except what he and his family can consume personally, belongs to the Government. If he wishes to peddle his farm products he must pay for a license and give up a certain per cent of the profits; otherwise the secret police may pounce down and take the "food bootlegger" off to prison.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE NEW CURTAINS

The old curtains had really done very well. They had been in the room for over ten years, and every spring taken down and washed.

Now it doesn't wear a person out to take baths. In fact it keeps a person strong and well.

But it is a little hard on curtains.

Twice a year the curtains felt fresh and pretty after their bath, but they felt a little older, and they knew their age would show when they lost their clean, fresh look and it was time for another bath.

They had been trimmed with pale green at one time, but the pale green had faded so that the curtains were entirely white now.

They were weary, and they felt badly because they were in a room which was always called the green room and they weren't green at all.

Often people would be shown the house—for it was a very old and very beautiful house—and they would be told that this room was the green room.

In the other rooms the curtains looked red, or blue, or whatever the room was called.

So when people were in the green room they would quite often say:

"Oh yes, there's a green rug." The rug felt a little badly they didn't notice him at once, for he was really green, though he, too, had faded a bit.

But there was a cover on the bed which had lots of green in it, and when they saw that they knew it was the green room.

The curtains felt so badly, though, because they had at one time lent some green touches to the green room.

They were tired of being hung up now. They felt so old, so crackling, so shabby.

They longed to go into the patchwork trunk where the other old rugs went.

They would have a good time there, talking over old times with others just as shabby and just as old, if not a great, great deal older than they.

They didn't want to be up in the bright room any more.

Oh, they were nervous, when again they were taken down for the autumn cleaning.

And then, how happy they were—they were put in the old patch trunk.

And up at the windows, at the four windows of the green room went new and beautiful curtains—curtains with touches of green trimming and decoration—curtains that just went with the room, so every one said.

They were complimented by every one. People said they "were in such good taste," that they "looked like a handsome room," and that a beautiful room like this needed beautiful curtains."

The new curtains were very happy. They were nice curtains. They had felt all along that they were.

But they had been appreciated, and what a beautiful home this was for them—they couldn't have picked out a nicer one if they had been allowed to go around from house to house and choose for their curtain-selves.

Altogether it was a success. The curtains were happy, the green room was happy and every one who saw the curtains admired them, while those who lived in the house kept finding excuses to go to the green room all the time.

WANTED TO FIGHT

Byron, aged four, was relating in a reluctant manner to his mother the details of a fistic encounter with one of his playmates.

"But Byron," interrogated his mother, "don't you know you should not fight Edward at his house?"

Byron pondering for a moment, his face brightening up, asked appealingly, "Mother, can I fight him when he comes to my house?"

WHAT LORAINE SAW

Loraine, aged four, always enjoyed looking at pictures in the magazines. One day she discovered several brides all on one page and she shouted to her brother, George: "Oh, George, come here and look at all the marrys."

TIRED OF SITTING

"Thank you very much," she said, "but I've been skating all day and I'm tired of sitting down."

When the king of England travels he always pays the same amount as would be charged to any ordinary individual requiring similar accomodation. The only difference is that the king and other members of his party are not required to buy tickets before starting on a trip. Instead, the account is rendered to the paymaster-general of the household, who issues his warrant in payment.

GIRL WALKS IN SLEEP IN HUNT FOR PARENTS

Wandering from her bed after midnight Sunday, Helen Kuberec, eight-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kuberec, 513 Highland Ave., found herself, alone and wondering where her parents could be.

And here is how it all came to pass. Helen had visited a local show earlier in the evening and after retiring at night called to her parents who did not answer her. Then she slipped into her clothes and went out into the darkness.

Her parents and friends made a search of the community when they found her missing. This led them to the show she had visited earlier in the evening, where they found the girl. She thought her parents might yet be in the theatre, she said.

Will Hold Revival Beginning Nov. 12

Rev. M. L. Buckley, will be in charge of the revival services that start at Hilltop Church of Christ, Nov. 12.

CLYDE KELLY WINS AUDITION

Hilltop Boy, Radio Announcer at WCAH to Compete in Atwater-Kent Eliminations.

Clyde Kelley, 196 N. Powell Ave., radio announcer at station WCAH has been declared one of the winners of the southern Ohio Atwater Kent radio audition which was held over station WAIU Friday, Oct. 19.

Kelley is a baritone. He is well known to Columbus and central Ohio radio fans and has taken an active part in church singing in the city.

Winning this event entitles him to compete in the mid-west contest at station WMAQ, Chicago, in November. The final eliminations will be held in December and awards and musical scholarships totaling $17,500 will be given. First prize for the man and woman will be $5000 in cash and two years of musical instruction.

The national contest will be held at New York, December 16, and will be broadcast in the Sunday evening program during the Atwater Kent hour.

Miss Martha Dwyer of Dayton won the southern Ohio elimination contest as a soprano.

"EQUALITY, JUSTICE" IS PLEA OF RANDALL

Candidate States He Is Not Backed by Special Groups or Interests.

"I stand for equality and justice to all and am free from the influence of any corporation, private groups or special interests. The administration of justice is a sacred responsibility." These were statements made by Cecil J. Randall, 1989 W. Broad St., Republican candidate for Judge of Common Pleas Court, at a meeting at 537 W. Broad St., Tuesday night.

In a recent pamphlet published by his committee Randall was endorsed in the following manner:

"Ability demonstrated"—Charles A. Leach, city attorney.

"Temperament judicial"—Judge Thomas M. Bigger, former Common Pleas Judge of Franklin county.

"Character unassailable"—Rev. George F. Barber, pastor of Glenwood M. E. church.

"Fairness conceded"—John C. Randall, former president of the Columbus Federation of Labor.

Child's Story of Tragedies Gives No Clues

Funeral Services Held Saturday for Victims of Double Shooting.

Following the death of his father and mother late last Thursday, little Johnny Postle, age 4, tried to give a story of what happened before his father, John Postle, 32, shot the boy's mother, Mrs. Helen Oliver Postle, 29, and then shot himself. But with the vague story given by the small boy and several other stories that have been submitted the tragedy yet remains more or less a mystery.

"My daddy said he was going to take me for a train ride but Mamma didn't want him to. Mother pushed daddy and daddy pushed mamma over a cedar chest. She got a bawling out." This from the four year old boy.

Another theory of the shooting was advanced in the fact that Postle was arrested on Saturday before the shooting on a charge of operating a punch board in the Western Restaurant which he managed at 2762 W. Broad St. This caused domestic trouble, it is believed.

Tragedy at Home

The double tragedy took place at the home of the couple, 58 N. Chase Ave., Thursday afternoon. They were found after Mrs. Ruth Renner, sister of Mrs. Postle, did not get an answer to her telephone call.

In addition to being survived by Johnny, 4, the couple have another son, Jerry, 1. The latter was in the house at the time of the shooting but Johnny was in the yard playing.

MRS. BACHMAN FAVORED

Editor Hilltop Record:

It was my privilege to serve on the board of education with Mrs. Dora Sandos Bachman, who is now a candidate for judge of the court of common pleas, division of domestic relations.

Mrs. Bachman was elected to the school board in 1909, taking office Jan. 1, 1910, and served for eight years. She was not only the first woman member of the board but she also was the first person elected as an independent candidate. Mrs. Bachman made good as a board member and helped in the introduction of medical inspection, supervised recreation, fresh air schools, school lunches and many other activities which are now accepted as a necessary part of our school program. Her faithful, intelligent service and her judicial approach to the subjects coming before the board for consideration were always recognized by her colleagues and much credit is due her for progress made by our schools during her term of office.

The office for which she is now a candidate is nonpartisan in character and it has to do with the welfare of more than 3000 children every year. It seems to those of us who know her experience and training that she is eminently qualified for the position which has been created by law and that she deserves the support of all persons interested in the integrity of the court and its possible service to the community.

Smart Knitted Modes Feature Cardigan and Sweater Ensembles

There's always something new and fascinating being exploited in the realm of knitted apparel. This time it is the two-piece ensemble of sweater and cardigan. For these to match is a sure sign of chic.

The skirt may be of fabric, preferably silk crepe and usually plaited, or it may be knitted. If the latter, it is usually a solid tint, topped with the matching sweater and blouse. The picture conveys the idea.

Striped effects are outstanding in knitted sports clothes this fall. Not only candy stripes as shown here but startling broad two-color stripes. Ombre effects both in stripes and modern patterns are repeatedly shown. In fact, the whole trend in things knitted is to employ striking modernistic treatment both as to color and design. Larger patterns than have heretofore appeared in knitted ensembles are promised for this fall.

A new note is sounded in the ensemble here pictured in that it is trimmed with crepe de chine in solid tint. The idea of combining fabric with knitted is being developed in unusual ways. Note how cleverly the crepe is appliqued on the front of the cardigan in the illustration, suggesting a diagonal fastening with a tie effect. Not only are fabric trimmings employed, but quite a few knitted costumes are embellished with fancy braid bandings. Which goes to show the wide diversity expressed in the knitted realm.

Among charming knitted themes for fall is that of knitted velours. Many a handsome two-piece frock will grace the autumn scene, their skirts of plain knitted velours, topped with knitted velours jumpers, showing an elaborate patterning.

Color effects that will be highlighted include blues, such as middy blue, also light powder and intermediate shades. English violet, gray tones like pigeon and silver-wing, also rose-glow, a beige shade, are also registered among coming important colors.

NEXT TUESDAY WE VOTE

Another election day will soon be with us. Tuesday, Nov. 6, is the day.

Now the thing of importance is to get every person who has registered out to the polls for voting. A vital situation presents itself.

Party politics have played such a part in the government of national and local affairs that it is important that every person take advantage of that right given in this country to select their own officials. This part that is being played by politics is not altogether commendable. For this reason the system should have the support of every citizen to assure greater safety.

Back in 1776 the American colonies fought for representation in that body that made laws governing the colonies. They received their independence and established a representative government of their own.

Today many people have the right to vote for their representatives but do not take it. Were we to be told that such right was to be taken away we, too, would likely prepare to fight.

Your vote in the election of Tuesday will assure a better selection because there is strength in numbers and the majority are more likely to select the right men for office.

WHAT ABOUT ONE WAY PARKING?

One-way streets are for the most part to be avoided, but one-way parking on some should be enforced. A look at South Park avenue during the afternoon will convince you that some action should be taken at once. In case of fire in the rear of any of the business houses in that block or the residences on that street it would be practically impossible for the fire trucks to make their way through the street.

In addition to the danger of fire, many cars receive scratches there because of the narrow driving space. Some action should be taken at once.

Someone is sure to be disappointed after next Tuesday, but what is a mere candidate to the choice of those who go to the polls to vote?

Belonging to an organization is like putting money in the bank. You can get as much out of it as you put in, plus the interest.

CARBON MONOXIDE

The carbon monoxide given off from automobile exhausts is not detrimental to health, as it does not pollute the air to any considerable degree, reports the United States Daily. An investigation made of the air at fourteen large cities revealed there was a contamination of 0.8 parts of carbon monoxide to 10,000 parts of air. In garages the average carbon monoxide content was found to be 2.1 parts in 10,000.

Your-Vote-Will-Help

The Spectator

Man and wife should stay young together.

ENTHUSIASM.

"There are so many kinds of enthusiasm," says Captain Sentry, "that it is often hard to distinguish the good from the bad. For instance we have before our own eyes here in the city a spectacular assemblage of people for a football game. Thousands come from over the country to see the teams of two large schools clash in a large bowl.

"Enthusiasm is high and the crowd seemingly goes wild as a player goes across the goal with the ball. But in the midst of this mob of people there are some who feel that the occasion should be celebrated by becoming intoxicated. And so we have with us several who fill themselves to the extent that they cannot recognize the players from the sidelines.

"It is my belief that such enthusiasm is not to be encouraged. And instead of laughing and joking with the so-called 'souk' we should deliver him from the stadium or public place or report him."

COLLEGIATE SOAKS.

Jack Wordley, the college student of the group, in talking of the drinking about the large campuses and fraternities said, "It is like everything else. You can get whiskey if you want it. But the part I can't see is why any student in college should get so full that he can't enjoy a game or the function he is attending. In addition to spoiling his own good time he is making a fool of himself that may be remembered later by someone who witnessed the affair.

"I am not knocking the student who occasionally takes a drink but I do say that the one who goes to such extremes is a good example of the life in the gutter."

TURNING BACK THE YEARS.

"A subject of interest to most women is 'just how can we take off a few years in looks.' No woman likes to look old and rightfully so. The accomplishments and the good times of life are centered about youth and the woman has the right idea in desiring to stay young.

"But appearing young and really being such are different things. In addition to scheming how to remain young in appearance, the woman as well as the man should remember their physical ability and endeavor to keep it up to par at all times.

"Not only should the woman want to be young always, but the man likewise should take particular care to stay young with his wife. One of the first understandings I will have with my wife if such should ever come to pass, is that we will stay young together." This from Sir Littleton.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE.

The weather is probably the most talked of thing we know of but it is deserving of much parley because it is so important a factor in the feelings of everyone.

In my travels about the city I have noticed that a person who gets out of sorts with the weather gets the same attitude toward people. If the day is warm and sultry and no sign of relief is in sight everyone is likely to carry a chip on their shoulder and stroll about looking for someone to knock it off.

In the spring we are glad to greet the warmth days, and everything is active in the pleasant air. The cool days after a summer rain are also refreshing. And then in the fall we enjoy the smell of the air tinged with the frost bitten leaves. When the bitty days of winter come along we are glad to greet them as a change from what we have been having.

So after all the elements of the weather go a long way toward the actions we take during the day.

CHRISTMAS IS COMING.

It won't be long until another year has passed. If you don't believe it just take a look at the calendar. Last Thursday was the day that reminded me of it. Just two months from that day we celebrate again. But then, it is a most enjoyable occasion and we are all looking forward to it.

And in the afternoon of the appointed day thousands gathered at the bowl to see legs, arms, heads and other notable parts of anatomy mixed in the scramble to cross a goal. And it happened that there was one in the midst of those who were whooping it up who gave exalted cries for the opposing team. And soon he did find himself far below the crowd and covered with scratches and torn clothes. For lo, it is written, if ye would enjoy a football game, seat thy self in thy own bleachers."

NEW OAKLAND CAR WILL SOON BE ON DISPLAY

An entire new line of Oakland All-American Sixes, embodying exclusive style and performance features consistent with the pioneering achievements of the Oakland Motor Car company, will go on display in the very near future, Edgar G. Planck, president of the West Side Motors, Inc., announced today.

While no details will be disclosed until the public showing, the new Oakland is distinctively original and different from any car now on the market, Mr. Planck stated.

"Popular features of the first All-American Six will be combined, in this latest offering, with a host of refinements in performance and body design that will make the car an outstanding attraction on the highways and boulevards of America during the coming months," he stated.

"The new car represents the cumulative experience of more than twenty years of successful automobile building on the part of the Oakland Motor Car company, plus the vast facilities of General Motors.

"Into its development have gone the pooled resources, creative ingenuity and experimental facilities of Oakland and General Motors engineers, General Motors Research Laboratories, General Motors Proving Grounds and craftsmen of the Fisher Body organization.

"Particular interest attaches to the new All-American because of the record of the Oakland company for having introduced into the automotive field more new features than any other manufacturer. Among the Oakland-pioneered advances are four-wheel brakes, Duco finish, the harmonic balancer, the G-M-R cylinder head, foot-controlled head lights, oil filter, air cleaner and fuel pump.

"Production of the new car is now under way at the Oakland plants at Pontiac, Mich., as fast as precision manufacturing methods will permit, according to information received here from the home office. Re-tooling and re-arrangement of the assembly lines were completed several weeks ago, and finished cars are going out to dealers with utmost dispatch so that they may have ample models on hand to assure prompt delivery when the car is publicly announced.

"Hundreds of thousands of test miles, the equivalent of years of owner service, have already been piled up by the new car on the General Motors Proving Ground in order to assure that every detail of construction and operation are up to the rigid requirements of the engineers' blue prints.

THE WHY of SUPERSTITIONS

By H. IRVING KING

CRUSHING BEETLES

Some people think it a sign of bad luck to crush a beetle by stepping on it. This superstition, while not very common, is occasionally met with and those who believe in the omen have a very good historic precedent for their belief. It is a superstition which has come down to us unchanged from the days of the pharoahs with whom the beetle was a sacred insect.

Alexander Glovatski, the Egyptologist who shares with George Ebers the credit of popularizing Egyptology by means of fiction, relates in his story of "The Pharoah and the Priest" how the army of Prince Rameses—afterwards Rameses XIII—while engaged in military maneuvers was turned from his course and the whole plan of campaign disorganized because the scouts reported that they had discovered in the road ahead two beetles which would be crushed if the army passed that way. Nobody dared to disturb the sacred insects by removing them to one side and to have crushed them would have been an omen of disaster not to be confronted. No Egyptian, however impious, would willfully crush a beetle and any one who did so accidentally expected the vengeance of the gods to fall upon him.

Men's heavy Union Suits, 95c. Seiller's

"Keen appreciation for the performance of the car has been voiced by Proving Grounds attendants who have been putting it through its paces during the past several months while the new car was carrying an old body so that it might not be recognized by visitors.

"While the new car retains the name All-American Six, it does not necessarily bear more than a slight resemblance to its famous predecessor—the first All-American Oakland Six introduced a little more than a year ago.

"This is the first new Oakland model, it was pointed out, to be built in the new recently opened Oakland factory—the most modern and best equipped in the industry.

"A complete description of the new line will be available in the near future when the model will go on display in our showrooms."

Here's How Municipal Airport Will Appear

Columbus voters will decide Tuesday on the construction of this municipal airport, and the beginning of a great air industry here.

Transcontinental airway lines will be entering and leaving this port May 1, and aircraft factories, bringing badly needed employment to thousands of citizens of Columbus will be growing up beside it, if the bond issue is passed.

No less than five great trunk lines plan to make Columbus an important division point if the voters approve the airport, and aircraft factories are being planned by companies making several types of planes.

One Columbus made plane already is flying, and the company behind it plans to begin heavy production as soon as the airport is completed. It will be located on a site the company expects to purchase beside the airport.

The bond issue is the first ever offered the city which promises to return its entire cost and pay a direct profit to the taxpayers. Every private concern which makes use of the airport will pay a rental to the city, and this rental, if results obtained in other cities follow here, will be sufficient to pay off the entire bond issue and to continue to bring Columbus a direct profit indefinitely. Its cost, if no profit ever was made would be less than 37 cents to the average property owner of Columbus.

MAP ENABLES BLIND TO TRAVEL IN SAFETY

It is reported from the British capital that the most remarkable map of London yet conceived is now contemplated for the use of the blind. It is a map that will convey to the blind, through the sensitive tips of their fingers, a true mental impression of the position of the main thoroughfares, the principal places of interest along those thoroughfares, and the means of access to them. This map will be "drawn" in relief and will consist of a combination of dots and dashes, a medium that has already provided for the sightless what had before been denied to them.

Already the blind of London are in possession of the complete series of plans of London's underground railways that are available for public use. They are able, by the aid of 11 embossed charts, to study in detail the routes of each tube system, the Metropolitan and the district railways, and can follow without any possibility of error the complete inner circle or the whole network of underground services. There are even diagrams demonstrating the construction of the tubes and the fact that always realized by normally sighted passengers, that a tube station is itself a tube, only of much greater diameter than that provided for the passage of the cars between the stations.

You'll do better at Seiler's after all.

HER BIG IMPORTANT JOB

Stella Marlowe was walking in a garden. At ten in this garden she had made hollyhock dolls. At sixteen by this trellis she had dropped kisses on the sweet peas. At twenty among the ancestors of these snapdragons, she had made a good-by to her friend, Mary Knowlton, to Mary Knowlton's cousin, Philip Mase, to the garden, to the village, and had gone forth on her quest for fame. Now at forty she walked again in Mary Knowlton's garden. The sweet peas were the same dainty, demure, bonnet-ed ladies, the snapdragons the stately princesses she remembered in pastel robes, the hollyhocks gorgeous bourgeoise mesdames. Mary Knowlton was the same. She had the same soft pink face, the same "knack" with flowers, the same cheerful enthusiasm for small everyday things. Only Stella Marlowe was different. The restless, adventure-seeking, cyclonic girl had become the cool, slow-moving woman, accepting admiration as her due, ironically acknowledging that a "career," while well enough, might not be all, but that life was an interesting spectacle. Happiness? Happiness, here she yawned gracefully—happiness was not for the many. She confessed that Mary's garden, her white green-shuttered house, exquisitely kept, were dear. But let herself desire a garden like Mary's? No? She had learned, Stella Marlow, not to desire too much. Desire was the cause of pain. Pain was uncomfortable.

For two weeks she intended being quite comfortable visiting Mary Knowlton. She would rest, would humorously enjoy the village, her vacation, go coolly back to her "job," that was becoming each year increasingly important.

Stella dipped her face among the dew-fresh sweet peas and was borne back by their scent down the years. Phil? Phil Mase? What an intense, slow, serious boy. How she, Stella, had laughed at him. He had come once to see her in the city—no twice. He had come home after that second visit and married, the village school teacher. Now at forty-four, he was a widower; successful, Mary said, obviously proud of her cousin. Hadn't he, the boy, the sweet peas whispered, had nice eyes? What might he be like now?

She heard the kitchen door slam, heard Mary going swiftly about. Oh, perhaps she ought to be helping Mary. But, no. No. She must rest, walk in the morning air, feel free, get ready for the bigger job. But why, suddenly, was the idea of job, of city, unalluring, distasteful? The garden color and fragrance and bird-song, the wide, sleepy village street, the wide, sleepy village street, the arching elms, soft gray walls and roofs with spire visible now and again among the playing leaves.

What a good-looking car. She sauntered lightly among the tall snapdragons toward the gate. The car stopped. A man got out, walked up the path. Of course, Philip Mase. What a man! If she had dreamed that from the gawky, solemn boy would evolve this assured, keen-eyed, competent-seeming man—. She was glad her short hair curled naturally, that she knew how to dress for a morning in a country garden, how to dress for any occasion.

"Stella!" The man's voice was low, vibrant, of a certain compulsion. His hand clasped hers. The strong, firm, quick pressure was not unrevelatory. He stood away when she had withdrawn her hand, his eyes appreciative of her, of her dress, her hair, the picture she was among the flowers.

"Philip Mase! You? Why—" She laughed. But the laugh was not the kind of laugh that had bubbled up from her throat twenty years ago. It was not, as that other had been, a laugh at Phil Mase. It was the laugh of an absurdly embarrassed, uncertain woman, trying to hide herself behind something, anything.

"You and Mary are through early," he said and admiration glowed in his fine eyes.

"Oh, I didn't help. I came to rest—" she began and knew she had said the wrong thing.

A look again at her from the dark eyes. But they had lost their glow. Philip Mase could be as cool, as impersonal as any woman of the world. He could be quite uninterested.

She flushed with an anger that was rooted in a childish shame and she stood, like a child, twisting her hands.

"I must see Mary a moment," he said, and bowing, went toward the house under its Dorothy Perkinese.

Stella walked again among sun-kissed blossoms—and they might have been driest brambles for all she saw in them of beauty.

"His silly, old-fashioned country ideas!" she raged and glared at a mockingbird trilling in the pear tree at the end of the path. "As if I ought to spend all my vacation working for Mary Knowlton just because I am visiting her! Haven't I invited her often to my hotel in town? Sha'n't I insist on her coming this fall?"

She waited under the pear tree nedaring the mockingbird until she saw Philip Mase emerge from the house, enter his car and drive away. And then she did not know what to do. This summer morning had lost its savor. She—she!—to be disapproved of by Philip Mase, once her adoring slave! Her vacation was to be ruined, was it, by that patronizing husband of a country school teacher? Bah! She would get away from here—tomorrow.

A frantic calling from the house. She looked toward the porch. The washlady was wildly waving her apron. The hired man was gesturing with his hoe. Disgustedly, vaguely alarmed, she hastened to the house.

Mary Knowlton had fainted. She had fainted in her kitchen on wash day with dinner half ready and a crate of cherries on the back porch demanding rescue from threatening hurtility. Stella and the laundress and the hired man carried her to her immaculately ordered bedroom, laid her on her small austere bed. The doctor came and ordered her to stay just there for three days. She said she couldn't, the cherries—Stella hastily assured her with a cheerfulness entirely simulated that she would attend to the cherries, would be glad to. Mary, looking at the same moment doubtful and grateful, turned her white face away and closed her eyes.

"No, I sure can't stay," the indignant washlady reiterated. "I'll try to finish the wash, though I got a whole of a big wash waitin' for me to Mis Jedge Perkins'. No, I dunno's you could git anybody to do them cherries up. Busy time—folks has got their work all planned out. Now, the cherries won't keep. Course not. Not in this heat."

Stella removed her garden-in-the-morning gown, dropped over her head a faded "bungalow" apron she found on a nail and "pitched in." Oh, she knew how. No girl could have lived until she was twenty in the village and not have learned to "do up" fruit.

At seven o'clock that evening she was washing bowls and funnels and spoons and the huge preserving kettle. She heard a car purr by to the gate and stop. Involuntarily she glanced at the mirror above the sink. Her eyes were staring dull, dark-circled. Her skin was scarlet, glistening. The wrinkles at the corners of her eyes "showed." Only her hair was at all pretty, curling in soft dark rings above her ears. But it didn't matter in the least how she looked. She turned to comfort her bored eyes with the sight on the kitchen table of rows and rows of pint jars aglow with luscious pitted red cherries in a translucent carmine syrup. These were just about the finest cherry preserves she had ever seen! She smiled, her head over her shoulder so. And as she smiled the screen door opened and her smile met the smile of Philip Mase blinking in the light.

"Why, Stella!" he almost shouted, but Stella's finger at her lips made him pause.

He had come close, while Stella, scouring the outside of the preserving kettle, told him of Mary. His eyes as he listened were dreamily on the curls of Stella. Once he put out a finger as if to let a tendril entwine it, but bethought himself in time. Flushed and sighed.

"Now," he said when she had displayed the cherries, "come out to the garden—the moon is there and a mockingbird—it needs only you—"

The dark eyes smiling at her were not impersonal. They were liquid and adoring and a little bashful, like the eyes of the Phil Mase of twenty years ago.

That job, that big important job in the city? Somebody has it—but not Stella Marlowe.

PROTECTING SHOES WITH TIRE PATCHES

For the summer pump of thin soles and small heels tire patches make excellent protectors for both heels and tips where the wear is first shown. If a small triangular piece of rubber patch is applied to the pointed tip of the sole the leather tip above will look neat more than double the time.

Satin-covered wooden heels and leather heels can be adequately protected from wearing over by cutting these tire patches to the shape of the heel and cementing onto the heel.

Some tire patches have a cement already on them which will adhere to leather and wood. If the patch does not stay on solidly, a cement made of gutta percha in carbon bisulphide will unite the rubber and leather. The edges of both rubber and leather should first be roughed by a sharp glass edge, and after the cement has been applied they should be pressed and held together. A tool chest vise will serve as a press.

If the heel is of wood, a cement of gum rubber soaked in a small quantity of naptha or gasoline is the best to use.

These thin rubber heels and toe protectors are very long wearing. While not as springy as ordinary rubber heels they do not change the shape of the heel.

DEEP SEA DIVING

The World's Work gives an interesting description of a deep-sea diver's trappings, and of the dangers of this occupation. The diver wears a one-piece suit of rubber and cotton, and lead-soled shoes each weighing forty-five pounds. About the waist is adjusted a belt consisting of ninety pounds of lead bars on a wide strap. Ear phones and a woolen cap are worn on the head. The breastplate extends well over the shoulders and is locked together to prevent leaking. Finally the copper, tin-treated helmet, much larger than the head, is screwed down to the breastplate. To the rear of the helmet is screwed the air hose and the life line. Both of these are passed forward under the diver's armpits so that the valves which let air in and out of the helmet can be handled easily. A phone attachment enables him to keep in communication with the surface. In a bag the diver carries his lamp and any other tools which he may need.

Locust to Fight Locust

Big predatory locusts, that prey on their own fellow-insects instead of on growing grain crops, are being tried in Greece as one means of combating the pest of ordinary locusts now threatening the fields, according to word received from Athens. These modern descendents of one of the plagues of Egypt have been causing serious losses to Greek agriculture during the last few years and the ministry of agriculture is preparing to spend 10,000,000 drachmas (approximately $3,200,000) in a campaign against them.

BYGONE DAYS
In the Century Magazine, Frederick Adams Woods writes of "Olly Words," which are both true and false in a single breath. His discernment and quiet humor are manifest in the following paragraph:

"We come upon the phrase 'bygone days' which has a very nice sound (good oil) suggesting travelers in capes and tricornered hats and coaches drawn up at an English inn with plenty of Christmas cheer. In reality the coaches were uncomfortable, cold, and tiresome for long journeys, and lucky the tourist who did not get stuck in the mud. But as we easily remember pleasures and just as readily forget pains, we use phrase 'bygone days' and 'good old days' to register this psychological truth. In other words, things that we do not like should be called 'out of date' or 'antiquated' (bad oil) which is entirely different from being 'antique,' for we all know that antiques sell at fabulous prices."—Forward.

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake

"AS IS"

A young man was complaining to me the other day about pests.

He says that, having arrived at the age of twenty-four, he is becoming increasingly tired of tiresome persons.

Some of them counsel him to be cheerful all the time—"to keep smiling."

Some of them tell him he must work twice as hard as he does if he hopes to succeed.

Still others advise him to reform his careless style of clothing himself and to put forth more effort than he usually does to impress people.

I will admit that pests are nuisances but so are extremes of temperature, and flies, not to mention quite a number of things mentioned by Mr. Hamlet in his well known soliloquy.

But there is no need of getting into a temper about these things.

Railing at them will not abate them.

As long as life lasts there will be people who will insist on minding people's business, and remolding their friends nearer to their heart's desire.

There will always be people who want to meddle with your affairs, and, although they know nothing about them, try to attend to them better than you can.

* * *

Don't pay any attention to them.

You must accept this life "as is" to quote an expression which I do not like, but which nevertheless renders my meaning better than anything else I can think of.

It is a life full of sorrow and injustice, and blighted ambition, and needless cruelty.

It will be gradually made better, as it has been made better through all the time that history records.

But only in a few cases has flaming anger prevailed against organized wickedness.

* * *

It is usually the slow, more or less good natured determination on the part of intelligent and thinking people to abate evils that has done the trick.

Men's heavy Union Suits, 95c. Seiller's.

The young person who is always in a temper, always fussing about this or that injustice, always intolerant of people who are different from himself is going to have a rough time in the world.

For he will be very heavily outnumbered, and it is not pleasant to be in a hopeless minority.

There is no reason to give up the hope of improving conditions, and there is no need of applauding your enemies, but you at least do not need to be picking on them all the time simply because they happen to be picking on you.

Take the word "as is," and do your little best to improve it here and there, gently, and do so as not to arouse animosity.

But remember that the pests must exist, and that, sometimes by their pestiferousness they accomplish real good.

OBSERVER HAS MOON MODEL

Among the instruments an amateur astronomer in Los Angeles has used in making a relief model of the moon is a dentist's drill. It is helpful in carving out the small craters and other irregularities on the surface of the model, which is fashioned of plaster of paris. Photographs supplied by Mount Wilson observatory and data obtained through two high-powered telescopes of his own have been used by the astronomer in preparing the model.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Of Interest to the People of the Hilltop and Vicinity

Vol. XII. The Hilltop, Columbus, Ohio, Thursday, November 8, 1928 No. 28

WEST SENIORS PICK OFFICERS FROM HILLTOP

Robert John Elected President; Vote by System Followed In National Elections.

Just before the nation went to the polls on Tuesday to elect new officials, the Seniors at West High school did a similar thing in their own class on Monday in real presidential style.

Robert John of Rome, Ohio, was elected president of the Senior class. Other officers elected were Evan Morgan, 188 S. Burgess Ave., vice president; Jean Randall, 88 N. Terrace St., secretary, and Mary Jones, 514 Woodbury Ave., treasurer. All are residents of the Hilltop.

Registration of all seniors eligible to vote was held several weeks ago in the American History classes. A few days later a primary election was held and candidates were chosen for each office.

Two tellers from each history class were in charge of the election on Monday. The following were tellers: Eileen Langstaff, Donald Jeffries, Jessie Dodd, Fred Maier, Frances Herron, Charles Pfaltzgraf, William Cannon and Betty Cannon.

Other candidates were: Melvin Hart, Francis Davis, Norma Ely and Mary Ham.

Elections in other classes will be held later in the year.

FURNITURE CO. OPENS ANNEX

Sends Representative to Century Furniture Meeting in Chicago.

Due to the rapid strides in their business in the past year the Hilltop Furniture Co. has opened an annex at 2373 W. Broad St., in order to be able to care for their increased business.

The annex will be open at all time during the day in a short time, states Rex Benefield. It is especially needed with the approach of the Christmas season and heavy winter buying.

DeWitt Hicks of the same firm left Tuesday evening for Chicago where he will attend the meeting of the Century Furniture association and will also buy for the holiday season.

In connection with the opening of the new room they are sponsoring an Expansion Celebration and will offer special furniture prices through the month of November.

Highland Cagers To Open Season Today

Courtesy Columbus Citizen

Here we have the basketball squad of Highland Junior High school who will open the city league in the Junior high circle when they meet Everett Junior high at Everett today.

G. Layman, coach of the team, states that the prospects look brighter this year than last. Several of the players were present last season.

Air Mail Schedule To Change Nov. 12

Morning Plane to Arrive Here at 4:36—Evening Plane Due at 9:45.

Permanent schedule of the air mail planes on the Cleveland-Louisville route, stopping at Columbus Airport, end of Sullivant avenue, will go into effect Monday, Nov. 12, according to post office officials.

The new flying schedule will bring the morning plane from Cleveland here at 4:36 a. m. and the plane from Louisville will arrive at 9:45 p. m.

They will operate under the new time schedule, allowing more time for air mail collections in the cities along the way. Collection time for the northbound plane will probably be set at 8:45 p. m. and the mail for the southbound plane will be collected an hour earlier.

Night flying is made possible now due to the operation of the beacon lights to guide the pilots along the route.

Installation of the beacon lights at Columbus Airport is near completion and will be ready to operate by the time the new schedule is started.

Veteran Fire Fighter Retires To Live on "Grand Hilltop"

With forty years of service to his credit in the city fire department, Captain George M. Feigley, 70 S. Terrace St., retired on pension Friday.

He now expects to rest up on the Hilltop, which in his words is "the grandest place in Columbus." He continued, "We have lived in Columbus 44 years and have lived on the Hilltop for five years. I'm only sorry we didn't move here long before we did."

In recent years Capt. Feigley has been stationed at No. 16 Pump Co., Fourth and Chestnut streets. He was first at Mill street at Station No. 10. At that time the firemen worked seven days and got seven hours off during that time.

Capt. Feigley was born on February 12 (Lincoln's birthday), 1862, and records show he was appointed fireman February 12, 1888. He was promoted to lieutenant in 1892 and has been captain since December 7, 1899, one of the oldest in the service here.

In addition to being a fireman of considerable experience, Feigley is known to hundreds of people in this section of the country for his clam bakes, barbecues and ox roasts. It was he who roasted the ox for the Hilltop picnics for the two years preceding the recent one.

He was born in Hagerstown, Md., and remarks that he has had much experience in cooking and serving sea foods while in the east and so brought his knowledge west when he came here as an iron moulder many years ago.

"When we moved to Columbus there were but seven houses on Broad street from Davis avenue to the foot of the hill," he told the Record reporter Saturday.

He asked for retirement because of physical disability. His retirement was approved Friday by Safety Director McClure.

"A man is no good on the job unless he is able to get in and fight," says the retired captain.

NORTH HIGH TEAM DEFEATS COWBOYS

West Gridders to Meet Bexley at East Main Street Field Today.

Again the West High boys went down to defeat, this time at the hands of North High with a score of 34-6 Monday evening in the North High stadium.

The only touchdown of the season for West in the city league came in the second game when Jeffries blocked a punt from North on the Polar Bear nine yard line. The ball was recovered by Wills behind the North goal line and gave the West team the benefit of six points. They failed to place kick the goal for the extra point.

West made a strong showing in the first half but were unable to come back during the last two quarters and allowed North to score three touchdowns during that period.

The Cowboys will meet Bexley today on the East Main street field. The game has been called for Thursday instead of Friday as previously stated because of the meeting of the Central Ohio Teachers' association in the city Friday and the fact that there will be but one hour of school that day.

The East Side team has been defeated by Loudon 7-0 and has all other victories to their credit with the exception of the tie.

Hilltop's Part In World War Recalled With Armistice Day

Ten years ago Sunday, officials of the allied forces and of the opposing belligerents came together somewhere in France to sign a treaty of peace, making Sunday, Nov. 11, 1928, the tenth anniversary of this peace and the day for celebration of the Armistice.

Flags will fly on Sunday and special services will be held in many of the Hilltop churches.

Files of the Record show the part played by many Hilltoppers in the service abroad. Furthermore the paper, which was at that time a 10 inch by 14 inch four page folder, was a source of much interest to those in the trenches and many families took extra copies to send abroad.

A special Memorial Day issue was published May 30 1918 with a red and blue service flag on the first page. It contained a "Hilltop Roll of Honor" with a foreward by Dr. W. F. Wykoff. The list included 251 men from the Hilltop.

On Aug. 9, 1918, one from William Anderson to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, 160 N. Eureka Ave.

The issue of Aug. 22, 1918, carried an announcement of the safe arrival in France of Corp. Ralph Bieber, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Bieber, 116 Eldon Ave.

"The many Hilltop friends of Glenn H. Martin, formerly of 126 Highland Ave., will be pleased to learn that he has just been made a corporal in G Company, 330th Inf., 84th Div., A. E. F.," says the issue of Sept. 12, 1918.

A letter from Ralph Roe dated "France June 10, 1918" to his mother and family tells of the courtesies extended by the French.

The issue of Aug. 22, 1918, carried well wishes for Mr. Montgomery, 177 N. Wheatland Ave., who enlisted in the Navy.

Farrell Bagley in a letter to his mother told of the life in France, saying the men had cast iron stomachs and unusual appetites.

On July 18, 1918 the Record carried the following: "Mrs. Bertha Elliott Price, 125 Powell Ave., has received word of the safe arrival overseas of her husband Corp. Ralph Price."

Frank Dorsey, who was with the 17th Engineers in France, but returned to America on account of sickness, is now at his home on a 30-day furlough. The 17th which contains a large number of our Hilltop boys was among the first 5000 Americans to reach France. That regiment was one of the three U. S. regiments to march in London in the parade on August 15, 1917, which was reviewed by the king and queen. This last is from the issue of July 25, 1918.

Many other such announcements were also made.

Treetop Playhouse Destroyed By Fire

Four months ago the children in the vicinity of Walsh avenue and Helen street conceived the idea of building a club house of their own and so constructed one in the top of a 20-foot tree.

On Thursday morning however it was a pile of ashes having been burned Wednesday night. Firemen did not arrive in time to check the blaze. It has not been learned how the structure took fire.

A neighbor woman told investigators that it was set fire by someone in the neighborhood who thought the thing to be a nuisance and an eyesore.

Anyway those who took part in its erection and a pride in living a part time in it no longer have such a play house in the tree tops.

Men's Club Ready

The Men's club of Hoge Memorial church is ready to open its winter series of meetings. It was announced after the meeting of the officers and directors of the organization Monday evening at the church.

A "Hunting Dinner" will be held at the church Friday evening, Nov. 23. It is planned to have Warden Thomas as the speaker.

Friends Service

The revival services in progress at the Highland Ave. Friends Church are being well attended and are increasing in interest each day. The messages being delivered by the pastor, Rev. Claude A. Roane, are very helpful and instructive. The public is cordially invited to join this effort in the salvation of souls. Services daily at 7:30 p. m.

Cop's Home Entered

Again the unusual happened when the home of a policeman was entered Thursday night. The visit was more or less a ransacking party though reports Patrolman Harry E. Garrett, 2017 Sullivant Ave., whose home was entered.

Entrance was made through a basement window. Nothing was missing, Garrett was in another part of the city at the time of the visit.

Wife Gets Estate

Mrs. Mary Alder, 2938 W. Broad St., will receive the estate of the late Henry Alder, her husband. The estate amounts to $25,000 and will be shared by brothers and sisters, James W. Alder, Arch A. Alder, Etta Davis and Katie Speets upon the death of Mrs. Alder. The will was probated Tuesday.

WEST SIDE MOTORS OPENS NEW BRANCH

Hilltop Men Operate Auto Business in Three Stores on West Side.

West Side Motors, Inc., Oakland and Pontiac dealers of the West Side, who recently incorporated, are now opening a new home at 1271 W. Broad St., along with their present location at 1354-58 Sullivant Ave., and cordially invite all West Side and Hilltop residents, friends and patrons to attend their formal opening Friday and Saturday of this week.

In their new sales room they will carry a full line of new cars providing one of the most complete lines of cars to choose from in this part of the city. They also specialize on the service of Oaklands and Pontiacs.

Recently they opened a "Good Will" used car store at 1173 W. Broad St., where they offer their exchanged cars after they have been reconditioned.

According to statements of Edgar G. Planck, president, and Charles W. Allen, secretary and treasurer, the demand has made it possible to open and maintain an up-to-date sales room and service station.

They are now entering their fourth year of automobile service at their old location. Associated with them they have two West Side young men, A. B. Stephens and J. Stanley Boddy.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM SUNDAY

Special Armistice Day services will be held on Sunday at Hillcrest Baptist church with Rev. J. H. Hughes delivering the addresses at both morning and evening meetings.

"After Flander's Fields—What?" will be the topic at 9:30 a. m. and "America at the Crossroads" is to be the topic for the service at 7:30.

Rev. Hughes states that 200 children will assist in the morning services and that music will be furnished by the two visited choirs of the church.

Revival services will be held every evening from November 11 to November 18 with Rev. Hughes preaching and singing led by W. E. Knox.

SIX STUDENTS SPEAK IN CONTEST SUNDAY

Annual Prince of Peace Declamation Eliminations to Be at Glenwood M. E.

The annual Prince of Peace Declamation elimination contest will be held at Glenwood Methodist church on Sunday evening with six local high school students participating.

Winner of the contest here will take part in the county contest later. The date of the county contest has not been announced.

Students who will take part in the elimination contest Sunday night are given below with their subjects and the authors.

Clausen; Eunice Johnson, "Eight Horses, Forty Men," by Frederick Lynch; Annabelle Breese, "The Seeds of War," by Charles E. Jefferson; Elizabeth Boring, "As for Me," by Ralph E. Diffendorfer.

REMODEL KOHN FUNERAL HOME

Remodeling of the C. J. Kohn Funeral Home, 2456 W. Broad St., was started early this week in charge of the T. P. & M. Realty Co., contractors. T. S. Tharp, 224 Eldon Ave., is managing the job.

A brick morgue is being added to the northwest corner of the present building. It is size 28 by 28 feet. Three porches are being added on the sides.

The inside of the building is also being remodeled including a parlor, an office and a lay out room.

The job will be completed within 90 days.

Two Hilltop Boys Build Model Planes

It pays to begin at the bottom and work up is the opinion of Richard Unterman, 16, 212 S. Burgess Ave., and Thomas Schwan, 16, 2519 W. Broad St., who announce their intention of building a real airplane in their own shop in rear of the latter's home.

In order to get experience as well as some money to defray the cost of the plane they are to build, they are at present building model planes in their shop and selling them.

Plans for the large plane are yet on paper, explains Unterman. He has been a frequent visitor at Norton Field and has worked on the hangars at Columbus Airport a good while in addition to having several lessons in flying he says. He plans to solo in his own ship.

Burroughs P.-T. A.

The regular monthly meeting of John Burroughs P.-T. A. was held Friday, Nov. 2, in the auditorium of the school building. Judge August Weber spoke on the Court of Domestic Relations. Entertainment was furnished by the Hilltop School of Music.

Piano duet, "The Robin's Return," Ivadell Yenger and Margaret Skipper.

Reading "Kentucky Babe," Judith Ann Garrison.

Violin solo, "Spring Song," Edna Corcoran.

Reading, "Papa and the Boy," Judith Ann Garrison.

Violin Duet, "Meditation," Edna Corcoran and Robert Maxwell.

This program was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Lists of the books will be on hand at the local branch. In addition there will be a collection of 24 of the best children's books sent out from the main library to remain on display here until after Christmas. These books will not be placed in circulation.

Glenwood Has Three Hallowe'en Parties

Three parties took place at Glenwood church during the Hallowe'en season. On Friday afternoon, Oct. 26, the children of the Junior church came together for a masquerade party. About 200 members attended in costumes of all kinds and colors, including clowns, teddy bears, policemen and little devils.

On Friday evening, Oct. 26, the young people had their masquerade party. The whole crowd, Chinamen, clowns, ghosts, old fashioned ladies, and demure girls with suspiciously big feet, all were taken through the deep dark recesses of the building where groans, clanking chains and clammy hands sent shivers down their spines. After recovering from the effects of this journey, they unmasked and joined in the games and program, directed by William Huffman.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 30, the Junior High department, Miss Mary Watts, superintendent, held a masked party, which was attended by about 85 members. The prize for the most successful costume went to Norton Benton, who came in a may dress and succeeded in looking quite girlish. The prize for making the best ghost out of crepe paper, toothpicks and a peanut went to Adrin Critcher.

Bad Luck Plenty

Saturday was evidently accident day for the Ritters of 481 S. Harris Ave.

William Ritter, 28, of the above address sustained cuts on the hand Saturday afternoon when he was working at the Columbus McKinnon Chain Co. and was treated at Mt. Carmel hospital.

And it also happened that his brother Erwin, 15, suffered a broken right arm while cranking his machine and was taken to the hospital.

GERMAN COOKS CLING TO ESTABLISHED IDEAS

Al Woods, the magnate of the theater, was talking about Germany, where he had been looking for new plays.

"Germany's morals are milder since the war," he said, but her cooking remains the same. She still serves preserves with meat, preserved plums with chicken, preserved peaches with beef, and so on. By the way, our habit of serving apple sauce with duck and cranberry sauce with turkey is a heritage from our German ancestors.

"Germany still boils everything. Even the delicious trout of the Black forest are always boiled. Boiling is good enough for carp, but boiled trout!

"They tell a story about a fruit ship that was wrecked off the German coast a century ago. The Germans treated the shipwrecked mariners very kindly, and the captain gave them a couple of barrels of oranges to show his gratitude.

"The next day he asked one of the Germans how the people had liked the new fruit. The German shook his head and said:

"'Raked, sir, they were tough, and even boiled, they weren't the kind of food a hungry man would hanker after.'"—Detroit news.

Lily Leland in Hollywood

By AD SCHUSTER

The face of Lily Leland, the girl was convinced cried aloud for the chance to be filmed and her heart added a yearning accompaniment. Disregarding warnings that Hollywood was filled with those anxious to be stars, she packed an expensive and dazzling wardrobe and joined the potential constellation.

After that Lily walked. She walked from one office to another, up flights of steps and down again, and came to consider it a great triumph when, upon rare occasions, she was able to pass an office boy guarding the wicket. Lily persisted. She pressed the magnificent wardrobe, ate in the cafeterias, and saw the time when her slender store of savings would be gone.

It was strange they did not recognize her beauty, the girl told herself. They did not even seem impressed with the clippings which related the easy manner in which she had captured first prize in the three-county beauty contest back home. Directors and those others who aided in the selection of casts, she decided, were a hard lot. Some day they would be sorry. Lily listed a number for revenge. They would come to her begging that she sign a contract and she, a famous actress, would lift a pencilled brow in amazement. Then she would recall the days when she had made her modest request for one of the smallest parts. Her maid would open the door for them to depart and she would turn away. In the meantime what could she do to earn a little money? It began to look as if she would have to go home.

Lily counted her money, balanced it with the cost of board and lipsticks, and decided she would have to surrender. There was enough for a ticket home. With her mind made up the world grew brighter. Lily decided she would have one last day seeing this country as a visitor and not as a girl seeking a job. So she packed her swimming suit in her vanity case and went to the country. Many a time as she walked the streets those hills had called to her. Now she could walk under the trees, swim in the creek, and pretend that she was not sorry she must return home defeated.

In the heavy shades of the grove Lily slipped into her suit. For a half hour she splashed in the creek and then, dripping and a picture of health and beauty, emerged for her clothes. They were gone. In the sand she read the story—a story printed in the shoemarks of a small boy. It was a good eight blocks to the car line and Lily would not get on a car wearing a bathing suit. She wondered how far it was to her home, or where she could go. Maybe the boy would come back with her clothes. She called to him, she wept, and she stamped her foot. The boy and the clothes were gone.

And so as the sun was setting Lily Leland, an unwilling bathing beauty on parade, walked down the lane and into the outskirts of the city. She turned her head neither to right nor left. In time some one would stop her, a policeman maybe, and she would explain.

Some one laughed and called after her.

"Toodles!" the man yelled and the girl blushed and hastened on.

"Oh, I say, I really thought you were Toodles," the man had overtaken her and was apologizing.

You see, Toodles would do such a thing and you—that is, all except your face, you look just like her."

"I'm not Toodles—and they stole my clothes," Lily was ready to cry.

"Wait a minute," the man signaled to his companions who drove up in a car. At the sight of an elderly woman in the rear seat, Lily's hopes returned.

Dressed in borrowed clothes and in the home of her rescuer, Lily listened to an amazing proposal.

"You see you look just like Toodles DuMont. You know Toodles in the Triumph Comedies. I'm figuring, if you can swim, we'll use you as her double in the next picture, for Toodles can't swim a stroke and the script calls for a lot."

"The kid who stole my clothes," Lily reflected as she accepted, "found me a job."

The Sidewalk Test---What It Means to You
The Sidewalk Test is made for your benefit and for the benefit of every housewife who wants to know just what she is buying.
The sidewalk test proves the worth of Masland Argonne Rugs. Seeing is believing. It allows the people in this community to see for themselves just what abuse a really good rug will stand. One might as well test glass with a hammer as to put an ordinary rug out on the sidewalk. This is where the weak must fall by the wayside and where Masland Argonne quality stands.

What Becomes of the Rug
This rug will be left out on the sidewalk for three weeks including four Saturdays. Then it will be cleaned and placed in our window so that every one may examine it closely. It will then be sold to the highest bidder. Examine it closely and then mail your bid to this store. We positively guarantee that the rug which you see in the window will be the Sidewalk Rug.

HOW I MAKE

By Readers of the Hilltop Record

Vegetable Dinner

1 large cauliflower,
1 cup white sauce,
¾ cup grated cheese,
Green peppers for stuffing,
1 tomato,
Sweet potatoes.

Tie a band of cloth around a cauliflower to hold the flowerlets together. Place in the center of buttered roaster and surround with stuffed peppers. Add just enough water to cover the bottom so that the vegetables will not cling to the hot surface before their own juices are extracted. Cover closely, cook over low flame 25 minutes. Serve cauliflower on a hot platter, pour over it the cheese sauce, surround with stuffed peppers alternating with glazed sweet potatoes.

Cheese Sauce

2 tablespoons butter,
2 tablespoons flour,
1 cup milk,
1 teaspoon salt,
Paprika,
¾ cup grated cheese.

Melt butter in small sauce pan, stir in the flour and seasonings and gradually the milk, when it thickens add grated cheese, serve over cauliflower.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes

Parboil potatoes in large sauce pan for 15 minutes. Peel and cut in slices. Heat ½ cup of brown sugar, ¼ cup water, 2 tablespoons butter in the pan. Add the potato slices, cover and cook over low flame until brown. Turn once.

Red Apple Rings

3 large apples,
1 cup sugar,
1 cup water,
1 tablespoon red cinnamon drops.

Boil 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water 5 minutes in pan. Add 1 tablespoon red cinnamon drops. Core but do not pare the apples. Slice crosswise and simmer in the syrup until colored and tender, remove and drain and sprinkle lightly with granulated sugar. Pineapple slices may be tinted in the same manner. Serve as a garnish for roast meat.

Apple Fluff

6 or 8 tart apples,
1 cup sugar,
¼ cup water,
Cinnamon drops,
2 egg whites.

Core, pare and slice apples. Cook in sauce pan with ¼ cup water. Add sugar and cinnamon drops to color and beat thoroughly. Cool, and when ready to serve add ¾ cup of the apple sauce to the stiffly beaten whites of 2 eggs with a touch of bright fruit or jelly on top.

FOUR MILLION LEPERS

There are now more than four million lepers in the world, most of whom live in India. However, the report is that this disease will be stamped out within the next decade by the use of oil extracted from the dried fruit of the hydnocarpus tree.

Associate yourself with men of good quality. If you esteem your reputation. Be not apt to relate news, if you know not the truth thereof. Speak no evil of the absent, for it is unjust. Undertake not what you cannot perform, but be careful to keep your promise. There is but one straight course, and that is to seek the truth, and pursue it steadily. Nothing but harmony, honesty, industry and frugality are necessary to make us a great and happy nation.

PERMISSION GRANTED ICE CO. TO MANUFACTURE ON HILLTOP

Merchants in Vicinity of Hague and Broad Protest But Project Is Favored By Majority of Councilmen.

Disregarding the protests of business men in the vicinity of Hague avenue and Broad street, city council on Monday night voted their permission to the City Ice and Fuel Co., to erect an ice manufacturing plant to be located in rear of their delivery station at 2778 W. Broad St.

The vote was five to two with Councilmen Green and Lewis dissenting.

The arguments presented by the ice company are to the effect that the plant will be electrically operated, noiseless and odorless. It will also do away with daily deliveries from the main plant. Approximately 2000 tons are delivered out West Broad street each month, the officials of the ice company stated. This heavy haulage is detrimental to the streets over which the trucks pass.

PROTESTS FILED

Business men in the section near Hague and Broad were present at council meeting Monday evening in an attempt to do away with the project.

They state that the number of trucks that are present at the station during the day is a hinderance to traffic at that busy intersection and that it also presents a danger spot to pedestrians.

Children from the West Broad school and the new West High school, which will open soon, make the pedestrian traffic very heavy. The odor from the ammonia used in the manufacture of the ice will also be noticeable and disagreeable they state. The use of electrical machines will cause radio disturbance, is another basis of protest.

The project is in violation of the city building code, the business men claimed.

CHILD IS BURNED WHILE PLAYING

While playing with matches early Friday morning, Dorothy Louise Edwards, age 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Edwards, 246 Highland Ave., was burned about the arms and shoulders.

The clothes of the child caught fire while she was sticking matches into the flames of a gas fire. Her mother was not able to reach her until she had received the burns.

Doctors say she will improve unless she is affected by something else.

BEXLEY GRIDDERS DEFEAT COWBOYS

Will Play East Tomorrow; Central Meets Aquinas on Home Field.

When the West High Cowboys went east to Bexley last Thursday afternoon they were defeated by the Bexley gridders by the score of 14-0 which makes the West team continue to hold down the cellar position.

Coach Lamme sent in many substitutes but none were able to stop the attacks of the Bexley team. West made a hard struggle at the first of the opening period and were continually thrown for losses. Bexley had 13 first downs to the four of West.

In the last period a pass from Deshler to Knisley was completed and placed the ball on the Bexley 9-yard line but the Cowboys were unable to push it over and lost it on downs.

Bexley scored in the second and third quarters.

West will meet the East High team Friday. This should prove an interesting game although East defeated South in a recent game. The two teams are thought to be about equally matched, however. Central will play Aquinas at Central Friday.

New West High To Open In Feb.

Students Will Begin Second Semester in New $1,000,000 Building.

West High school, the newest, largest and most beautiful building on the Hilltop will be ready for classes at the opening of the second semester in February. This was announced early this week by structural engineer, Edward Kromer.

The building will have a total enrollment of about 1500 according to figures given by Otto Magley, principal of West High. These will come from the present building on Central avenue and from Highland Junior High school.

The opening of the new building will relieve congestion at Highland and will also aid in the two elementary schools on the Hilltop by shifting some of the students to Highland after the number of junior high students has been cut down.

Starling Junior high, at present at Central, will be moved to the present West high building, relieving the crowded conditions at Central.

The total cost of the new building is estimated at $1,000,000. It is one of the latest in design and equipment in the country and probably stands as the most complete in Columbus. The athletic field will be ready for games next fall.

4-ROOM BUILDING BEING ERECTED

Foundation for a four-room building on West Broad street east of Powell avenue is being completed this week.

The building will house four storerooms similar to those of which the addition is a continuation when completed. They will be but one story high.

There will be eight storerooms in the block when the addition is completed, this being a continuation of the Paul block of buildings. They will be ready for occupancy in about 30 days.

Fund Drive Is Opened on Tuesday

"Give" is the word of the day as another community chest drive opens in the city and at the same time Hilltop residents and business houses are again called upon to give their support to this worthy cause.

The drive this year is under the supervision of Dr. W. O. Thompson, president emeritus of Ohio State university.

The slogan is, "From Blue, Through Gold, Into White," and it summarizes the purpose of the campaign to raise $715,932 to take care of the social welfare work in the city for the coming year.

School children have not been asked to contribute to the fund but they have been asked to act as representatives of the chest in making their parents understand the purpose of the campaign and to influence them to contribute.

CARDS TO PARENTS

A card bearing the slogan of the campaign was given to the children Wednesday for them to take to their parents.

The card also gives an explanation of the work being carried on by the chest and the results being obtained in the welfare work.

The drive was opened Tuesday evening with a brilliant display of lights on the A. I. U. building at 7:30 p. m. They came from a 28-million candle power beacon and presented a pattern of blue, white and gold.

A talkie movie made by the Fox Film Co. for Dr. Thompson was given at three theatres Tuesday night. It tells of the work of the chest and urges citizens to open their pockets to this cause.

Hilltop residents may have noticed the Blue, Gold and White milk bottle caps on their milk during the week. This is just another feature of the drive.

Continue Subway

Work on the excavation for the subway in the elimination of the grade crossing at West Broad street and the Big Four R. R. will continue in a short time when the present tracks of the railroad are transferred to a temporary line being built parallel to the old tracks. Absent Minded Prof. Is Mocked By Hilltoppers

You have heard stories of the absent-minded professor who left his books on the table and took his cup of coffee to school with him. Well, now for a change let's have some home talent in the way of absent mindedness right here on the Hilltop.

Here is the story of a doctor who was really so tied up in his work that he made a mistake and went into the wrong house.

A family on South Ogden avenue report that while they were sitting in the front room of their home Friday evening the door opened and a man entered, took off his hat and proceeded to go upstairs. They thought him to be a member of their family and did not disturb themselves.

Soon the man came down, however, and with due apologies stated that he was in the wrong house. He also explained that he was a doctor and had been called to see a patient but had evidently missed the house he was supposed to call at.

And so on we go with these stories of absent mindedness. Last Thursday a local merchant had his hat cleaned and on arriving in front of his shop threw it into a car nearby.

Soon after he asked one of his companions if he had removed his hat from the latter's car. The reply was negative and the result was that he had mistaken another car for that of his friend and was now the loser of a newly cleaned hat. He has a 12col Ad in this issue of the Record.

HIGHLAND JUNIORS LOSE TO EVERETT

Will Meet Champion at Glenwood Shelter House, Nov. 23.

Shots from the middle of the floor were too much for the Highland Junior high basketeers last Wednesday when the Everett team opened fire on them. Everett won the opening game 23-10.

Scores for Highland were made by the following players: Hurley, 3; Starkey, 3; Patser, 2, and Barnett, 2. Fumbles from the Highland boys caused them to miss their open chances at shots several times.

Stark of Everett was the star of the game and took four field goals from the center of the floor. The Highland team put up a good fight however and they promise to offer keen competition for their opponents during the remainder of the season.

Glenwood has participated in the Prince of Peace contests for several years.

Chris Grows Up

The city has grown up.

We have in our midst, many old timers who stand back and tell us of the days when the city was young and gay and when the Hilltop had but a few houses.

Today the city is yet young and gay but it has evidently taken an opportunity to grow as every child will do when properly nourished. And so today the population stands at $18,000 which covers and area of 35.5 square miles.

The increase in the past quarter of a century has been 148,188. Furthermore there were but 50,000 people here when the first city directory was published 52 years ago.

The foreign population of the city has been set at 6.8 per cent.

BUSINESS MEN SEEK CHANGE OF COUNCIL'S FAVOR TO ICE CO.

Protest Establishment of Manufacturing Plant, Saying Project Is As Undesirable to This Community as Any Other.

Further objection to the erection of an ice manufacturing plant were voiced in the meeting of the Hilltop Business Men's association Tuesday night at the Matsonia.

Members of the Civic Committee were present at City Council Monday night and report that the action taken was not favorable to the community.

A discussion among members of the association brought out the fact that the unloading and loading of the ice trucks is dangerous to school children, that radio will be disturbed and that the fumes from the ammonia will be unpleasant.

They also stated that the trucks cannot get ice from the Broad street entrance without breaking traffic laws. Several merchants mentioned the fact that an accident occurred there Tuesday afternoon.

Business men believe the project is as undesirable to this community as to any other in the city and state that the company was prohibited from erecting a loading station on the North side.

The matter was referred to the Civic Committee headed by H. G. Deems for further consideration and immediate action.

W. A. Ruiserchat, president of the Central Civic association gave a short address outlining the purpose and workings of the Central Civic association. He extended an invitation to the Hilltop Business Men's association to join.

This body represents the largest number of people in Columbus he stated, since it has representatives from all sections of the city.

R. G. Haunts is at present a member of the Utility Committee of the Central body.

Emil C. Ebert, secretary of the Central group, also addressed the meeting in brief.

The business man in any community is the prime mover because he wants to have the community thrive," said Ebert. "A Civic association is the melting pot of thought," he continued.

And furthermore the children are going to be careful if the traffic officers have anything to do about it. The students are well organized and have their own traffic bureau and their own traffic officers.
